ANY ONE who saw "Edward, My Son" will remember the tragedy of that family. A boy's character went slowly to pieces, because his father was determined that nothing should be too good for him To gain his purpose the father ran rough-shod over everyone who stood in his way, and eventually ruined the lives of all around him, including his son's and his own. The mother, on the other hand, could see, as the father could not, what his indulgence was doing to the boy, making him a weakling and a rat. But she was too weak to stand up against her husband and her life too was ruined. That story is a kind of parable.

The prophet reveals a God who is both powerful and good; but suppose God were only good but not powerful, or only powerful but not good? Then the world would be in a mess, as that boy Edward was in a mess.

But these three are all in the same God. A God who is power only, might do as Edward's father did, destroy his children without even intending to do so. A God who is goodness only, might want to do right by his world yet not be able to do so, like Edward's mother. A God who knew what was right but neither wanted nor was able to do much about it, would not be a God at all.

God Is Not Weary

SUPPOSE GOD were indeed powerful, good and wise, and yet grew tired from time to time? Suppose all God's good qualities came and went, unpredictably, like the wind on a spring day?

No; God is the Maker and Keeper of Promises, the Covenant God. He does not grow faint or weary; that is our anchor of comfort.

The earth changes, and men with it; but the Word of the Lord abides forever. His "convenant of peace" does not waver. We do not need to lean gingerly on the Almighty. He will bear all our weight.

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

BY INEZ GERHARD

IN 20 YEARS Gertrdue Berg has made "The Goldbergs" one of the best loved families in the country, with herself, as "Molly Goldberg," its most popular member. This is one radio show that the country evidently cannot do without. It went off the air in 1946, and

GERTRUDE BERG

Mrs. Berg turned it into a successful play, last January it began on television, and soon people were giving its presence as the best reason for buying a set. Now it's on the air again, on CBS Friday evenings. And charming, warm-hearted Mrs. Berg is spending her days writing and rehearsing, but saving evenings for her husband, two children and friends.

Some years ago Susan Hayward was brought to New York by Paramount, part of a plan to build up a gorgeous looking young actress into a star. ## ★ RANDY'S GIRL ★

By Richard H. Wilkinson

RANDY SUMNER told the girl he loved her. She was beautiful and he was human and he couldn't help himself. He felt chagrined when he thought of it later because that night he had forgotten that he was a police detective and she the girl friend and accomplice of the notorious Tony Quarles.

He had to get away from her for a few days. It was the only way he could think clearly. So he ran up to Chicago and there he dropped in on the chief. The chief got sore when he saw him.

3-Minute Fiction

"What the hell! The dame will take a powder on you. If she blows it's curtains as far as our chance of bringing in Tony is concerned."

Randy felt like telling the chief to jump in the lake. But he didn't. He knew the chief was right. Pamela was Tony's girl. A new one. They'd been seen together at The Lobster Club and the story was that Tony was nuts over her.

Right after that the Ryegate job was pulled; a night watchman and a cop shot dead. Of course Tony vanished. They couldn't hope to find him. The girl vanished too. A week later one of the boys saw her down at Ocean Bluffs.

They didn't pick her up. The chief was too smart for that. He sent Randy down. "You're a good looking kid, Randy, with a nice, friendly smile. Go down there and play the sucker game. Sooner or later she and Tony will join up. It's our only chance."

Randy's part was easy. He played the part of a lumber king's son down from Michigan on vacation. The friendly smile worked. Pamela trusted him. She seemed lonesome and glad to have him around.

Then came that night when impulsiveness gave way to logic. He kissed her and told her he loved her.

Randy made plans. The payoff was due to come soon now. He had orders to take both the girl and Tony, Well, he'd do just that.

Days passed. They saw each other once at least every 24 hours. They danced and went sailing and swam and played tennis. Randy suffered. He was haunted by the scene that was inevitable.

There was a haunting light in the girl's eyes also. He wondered if she too, were suffering because the same thing had happened to her.

THEN ONE DAY he called for her and found wild fright in her eyes.

"Randy! I'm afraid! He's here!"

"Who's here?"

"That man. The man I tried to tell you about—why I left Chicago. He—he's horrible! At first he was nice to me, then—I had to run away to keep him from—from—"

"What's his name?" said Randy hoarsely.

"Lancey. Tom Lancey. He's at the Seaside. He called and said—"

"We'll go down and have a talk with him," Randy snapped.

"Randy! I can't! I——"

"You're coming too!"

She didn't understand Randy's attitude, but she trusted him.

They went to the Seaside. Inside the door Pamela stopped. "There he is!" she whispered. "On the divan reading the newspaper."

It was Tony Quarles. Randy felt sick. He put his hand under his coat and started across the lobby. Tony saw him coming. But it was too late. Randy got his gun out and shot before Tony reached his feet. The gangster went down. Randy looked at him, then remembered the girl. He had to take her too.

He looked around, and there she was, staring in wild-eyed horror.

"Randy! You shouldn't have—you've killed him."

Randy's lip curled. Tony Quarles opened his eyes and saw the girl. "Hello, sister," he managed. "Congratulations. You're the first woman copper who ever fooled me, but I guess you were worth it. Baby, you're a looker."

Of course she wasn't a copper. But she wasn't Tony's girl either. She was just who she said she was. She'd been telling the truth. And Randy was so surprised he let her swoon in his arms before he could gather his senses enough to explain his own identity.

Some Players Stew in Own Fat

By GRANTLAND RICE

SOME YEARS AGO I ran across an old friend. His name was Keene Fitzpatrick of Yale, Michigan and Princeton. One of the great trainers, Keene Fitzpatrick belonged with Mike Murphy of Yale and Pennsylvania. I would also like to add Mike Sweeney of Hill School and Yale.

Grantland Rice

Murphy, Fitzpatrick and Sweeney were three of the best. So was Johnny Mack. The Irish have it.

Mike Murphy has been dead a long time. What a coach, trainer and philosopher Mike was. Not too many remember him. He was one of the all-time greats. Keene Fitzpatrick was another. Keene reported at Yale weighing 164 pounds. He weighed around 164 pounds at Michigan. He was around 164 pounds at Princeton.

In forty-four years Fitzpatrick was never two pounds away from 164 pounds I couldn't tell you the number of times Keene and I met and talked over this matter of weight and age. It is only in the later years I appreciated the logic and philosophy of Keene's long-time knowledge.

Keene could coach and train football, track, rowing and the art of living.

"I've never missed a day's work in 44 years," he said once. "I've never been out of condition. There are times when I get upset by watching some of these young fellows from 19 to 22 years old reporting for football practice. Too many of them are overweight and soft from a summer that certainly wasn't devoted to keeping in condition. At my age, over 60, I could outrun many of them. I've seen them come to early practice at least 25 pounds overweight. One man reported 35 pounds above his best weight. He was of little value most of the year. It isn't hard to put on excess weight. In fact it is quite easy. But try to take it off and see what happens. It's hard, slow work."

"A man of 50 or 60 should try to keep his weight close to what it was at 25 or 30. He might be a few pounds heavier, but the difference should be slight."

There were more than a few young fellows this past September who would have given more than a trifle to be in better shape when football's practice opened. When you have to spend most of your time lopping off 10 or 20 pounds the punishment more than fits the crime.

But it is twice as tough 20 or 30 years later.

Tack Hardwick's Example

Those who feel Tack Hardwick's recent death more than anyone else are the Boston kids.

I have just had a letter from one of the head men of one of Boston's leading boys clubs.

"I only wish," he said, "that every athletic star in this country could only follow Hardwick's example. Here was one of Harvard's all-time greats, living, when he cared to, in a wealthy, exclusive society. Yet he had been the most active member of our club for the last 28 years. No one had worked harder. Tack came to almost every meeting to talk and mix with the kids. They loved him and he loved them. Not long ago we had to have 27,000 folders that were badly needed. Tack paid for them all. With Tack it was all a work of love. Only two days before his sudden death, he dropped into the office.

"'I've had a lot of lucky breaks,' he said. 'But I can tell you this—I've gotten a bigger kick out of the little I've been able to do for these kids than all the honors I've ever known wearing that big H on my crimson sweater. I wish a lot of other former athletes would do all they could for this younger generation. We have never given them a break."

This comes from the Hardwick that I knew so long. If former athletes, former stars, can't help the kids—no one else can. The boys certainly get little help from the politicians, whose main interest is a government pay check.

The kids today get their thrills from the stars of football, baseball, boxing, golf, tennis, track, etc. It has already been proved that a big part of juvenile delinquency is due to senior stupidity.

Sport has done a fair share in helping the juvenile tangle. It has done a bigger share than any other form of our social organization.

But the raw fact is that the so-called civilization we know today has never approached the dream of Tack Hardwick and others who understood the problem of today's youth in the big cities.

FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE

by Roger C. Whitman

QUESTION: Our drains are stopped up very often in spite of the fact that we have had the pipes cleared by a tree-rooter machine I am of the opinion that it is a clogged vent and not tree roots in the pipes Can you give me any advice?

ANSWER: It is possible that the pitch of the horizontal soil pipe is insufficient, so that grease and other sediment matter congeals and closes up the line and retards the flow of waste matter to the sewer. Re-laying of the pipe is one solution, if that is the case. I doubt if a clogged vent would cause the condition. The other solution to such a problem is to install a grease trap in the line from the kitchen sink and clean it out periodically.

"Injun" Summer in I

It's about time for "Injun" Summer in Iowa.

How we all enjoy those lazy, hazy days! Picnics in the woods. Bonfires for the kids at night. Warm, easy afternoons just sitting on the back porch.

"Everything seems to slow down for "Injun Summer", says my cousin Ed, who's slowed down most of the time, anyway.

Maybe that's the best thing about this time of year. It slows us down. We mellow a little; take everything more mo

That same principl tion is good in our d habits, too. It's one a mild, temperate or ale is my favorit and that of so Iowans.

Moderation in ou opinions, and even prejudices, is good for "Injun" Summer, and

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

It's a lot of bologna!

So many people have seen these signs "Yes Sir! We handle Jergensen's Home Made Bologna" displayed in the stores and they have said, "Does Jergie make Bologna at the print shop?" What next are they going to do down there?" And the clerks then have to explain that Jergensen's Home Made Bologna is not made at the printing office but it is made by another Jergensen over at Britt!

Sure, it's darn good bologna but we are not in that business, yet! We will stick to printing, plain and fancy, and let Jergensen over at Britt worry about making Bologna. The nearest we come to making "Jergensen's Home Made Bologna" is print the display signs for our Scandinavian friend at Britt!

Yes sir, we do letter-press printing, offset printing, lithographing, embossing, die-cutting and color work but we don't make Bologna!

Fall Pruning Not For Raspberries

Fruit trees may be pruned any time during the dormant period, but raspberries should never be pruned until spring, says Paul Henderson, county extension director.

Best thing to do with raspberries at this time of year is to remove old fruiting canes. Fall pruning is one recommended as it sometimes results in damaging the wield the following year. What happens is that persons pruning do it with the next year' crop in mind, and they have no way of knowing whether or not there will be winterkill. Any damage caused by cold weather then will mean the crop will be reduced further.

While it is desirable to prune fruit trees in spring, common practice in Iowa is to prune any time the weather is suitable, Henderson points out.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

At 16 he was the only boy in town who owned a telephone pole. That was his claim after he paid the price of a new pole to replace the one he shattered in his first accident. He escaped with minor cuts and bruises. "Always knew something like that was going to happen to that boy," the community said.

A year later, apparently weaned away from telephone poles, the young boy developed a more competitive sport. He took to driving on the wrong side of the highway occasionally "just to see what the other drivers would do." Passing on the right side was another part of the game. When he was arrested by the patrol the community had another saying: "Always knew he'd get caught sooner or later."

Sometime later the boy transferred his activities to the country roads. There he found a flat, sharp, gravelled curve. It was a locally famous curve having defeated more than one negligent driver in the county. This was a challenge. The boy decided to discover the top possible speed with which that curve could be taken.

His approach wasn't exactly scientific. On the first try he entered the curve at 70 miles an hour. He had a theory that he could "skid" around it.

His mother waited and watched for three days in the hospital before she saw her son regain consciousness. "It's a pitty," they said in the community, "but he did it himself."

Now, at 18, he is the only boy in the town who owns a wheelchair. A spine injury in the curve "experiment" left him helpless below the waist.

If this boy had gained any other fame than that of a reckless driver, the community would have claimed him as its own unique product. Yet, that is exactly what this boy was - the product of this community. He learned his dangerous driving habits in the same manner he could have been taught safer ones.

When a young driver dies or is injured we, are community of guilt.

FARM BUREAU OFFICIALS TO BE IN DES MOINES

Mr. C. A. Bird, who is the Farm Bureau voting delegate from this county, will be in Des Moines on November 28, 29, 30 and December 1, where he will represent the county organization at the annual meeting of the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation.

Mr. Bird will meet with voting delegate from the other 99 county Farm Bureaus in the state, to work out and adopt the official Farm Bureau program next year.

Policies of the state organization concerning the matter of a farm program, taxes, schools, roads, weed laws and other items pertaining to agriculture are expected to be determined at the meeting.

Mr. Bird, will be expected to vote on all matters taken up at the state meeting, in accordance with the recommendations of the members in this county.

However, when the program of the Iowa Farm Bureau is officially adopted, this county will support it regardless of whether the local recommendations were in agreement or not.

Other Farm Bureau officers and members from this county will attend the convention in Des Moines along with Paul G. Shurts, fieldman, Paul Henderson, County Extension Director, Miss Elsie Mae Van Wert Home Economist, and Chas. F. Jackson, General Agent.

"Well, yes, you can, unless your eyesight's bad," she snapped belligerently.

"Oh, beg pardon, madam! Are you the lady of the house?"

"Yes, I am. Who did you take me for? Did you think I was the gentleman of the house, or the next door neighbor, or the cat, or the dumb-waiter?"

"I didn't know, madam, but you might be the youngest daughter."

"Oh, did you? Well, that was natural, too," she replied with a smile. "What can I do for you, sir?"

FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE

by Roger C. Whitman

QUESTION: I was recently given two antique glass cream pitchers, but they have been washed in soap and water so much much that the designs in the glass are filled with a soap crust I have failed to remove this after repeated trials. Can you give me any help?

ANSWER: I believe the deposit is more from hard water than soap, although this has probably stuck to the glass also. If the pitchers are of cut glass of some kind without any painted designs, the crust should soften by soaking with a non-flamable cleaning fluid, giving it plenty of time to act Kerosene may also help A stiff brush would be convenient to work with.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Can't Base Love On Deception

By Lawrence Gould

Can you really love a person whom you deceive?

Answer: The wish to have someone love you may almost compel you to deceive him if you feel the truth would alienate him from you or destroy his good opinion of you. Again, you may deceive someone you love with the (frequently mistaken) idea that you are protecting him from knowledge which would only hurt him But love that is worn or retained by deceit won't make you happy because no one can be happy who does not feel secure, and the knowledge that the loved one may at any moment unmask your pretensions must keep you uncertain and uneasy.

Does mental illness "run in families"?

Answer: Not as used to be believed, writes Dr. M. Bleuler in the Swiss Archives of Neurology and Psychiatry. No specific mental ailment is directly inherited (in the way that blue eyes or brown hair are) or is often found in many members of a given family group. But various features of some type of mental illness may be noted in various relatives of the patient, suggesting a trend or tendency which will take an acute form in a given person only if the circumstances of his life are such as to encourage its development

Can we explain dreams of being strangled?

Answer: No one explanation would fit every such dream, but in general a nightmare expresses the conflict between a desire which the dreamer has been taught to feel is dangerous or wicked and the fear of being punished if he dares to gratify it. The fear makes the desired satisfaction appear in the guise of something terrifying or destructive which the dreamer finally avoids by waking. Strangling might be the distorted symbol of a wish to be embraced or "overwhelmed" under conditions which the dreamer's conscience forbids.

DEVOTIONAL READING: I Peter 2: 19-25.

SCRIPTURE: Isaiah 42:1-4; 50: 4-9, 52:13-53 12; Jeremiah 38:1-13.

Love So Amazing

Lesson for November 13, 1949

LONG AGO riding in his slow chariot through the southern sands, a puzzled reader with Isaiah 53 in his hands asked the question other readers have asked ever since: Does the prophet speak of himself or of some other? The answer given by Philip (see Acts 8) has been the answer of the church ever since: This prophecy can be understood only in the light from Calvary's Cross. Philip did not say, and we need not insist, that the prophet had Jesus, and Jesus only, in mind when he wrote.

Dr. Foreman

What we do say is that while these words might have described some one the prophet knew, might have described the whole nation of Israel, might even have described himself, still the words make but a poor picture of any one else, compared with the picture they make of Jesus.

The Scarlet Thread

ISAIAH 53 has been in the center of the church's thinking about Christ from the beginning. It may be said to run like a scarlet thread through the New Testament. It was in the back of the minds of Paul and John and Peter alike. This great prophecy sheds a light on what otherwise had been a black opaque blot—the death of Christ.

What would otherwise be simply a horrible tragedy, perhaps the greatest tragedy of history, the perfect case of complete injustice, the final evidence that there is no God, in the light of Isaiah 53 becomes a center of glory.

Instead of being ashamed of the cross on which Jesus died, the church sings, "In the cross of Christ I glory," . . . "Love so amazing, so divine, demands my soul, my life, my all."

We believe that Christ suffered not for his own but for others' sake. Suffering, not forced but willingly undergone, suffering not as mere pain but that others might be saved, suffering on behalf of others and for love of them—this is the key to the riddle of existence, this is the key to the heart of God.

Not Christ Alone

IF CHRIST'S MEN had refused to follow where he led, if all Christians had been willing to let him carry, alone, the burden of the world's sin and grief, there never would have been any Christianity—for there would never have been any Christians. Peter and James and the rest of the apostles would have refused to die for Jesus' sake. The noble army of martyrs would have been an ignoble army of cowards

No missionary ever would have left home and comforts and country, no mother would have laid down her life for her children; the unselfish service of those who have cared for the sick and the orphaned would never have been done; indeed, had no one ever been willing to suffer for the benefit of others, one wonders whether the world could have even held together this long.

Christ died that the world might live, yes; but others also had to die to make his death avail. He died for Africa, that Africans might live; but Africans died till men like Livingstone and Schweitzer and many a less famous man and woman also went out and lived there in loneliness and died in pain.

Christ died for the little children of the poor, but until the Salvation Army and others like them went down into the slums and suffered there with and for them, those poor little people died without so much as dreaming that God might love them.

Christ died for all the lepers in the world; but until a Father Damien, and others no less Christ-like, went among the outcast lepers and became outcasts themselves for the love of Christ, those lepers died in the dark.

"Let Him Take His Own Cross Daily"

YES, Isaiah 53 pictures the self-sacrifice of our Lord, above all. But any one who has any intention of being a true servant of God must be willing to find his own life-direction right here. The world does not need more pain; it does need those who will suffer pain to serve others in Christ's name.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Acquiring Emotional Stability

By Dr. James W. Barton

I HAVE WRITTEN BEFORE of our experience as medical officers in World War I, when we found so many young men unable to pass the low requirements as to size of chest. When a boy in his late teens or early twenties does not have a measurement of 34 inches with chest expanded there is something wrong.

The outstanding cause of chests considered too small for service was that these boys had not always played much as youngsters, often because their mothers were afraid they would get hurt.

Unfortunately unless a recruit was definitely a mental case, we made no tests as to his mental or emotional condition. The result was that many men were sent home or to hospital because of their emotional instability.

That is why in World War II, a careful examination of the recruit's emotional stability was made. The value of this screening for emotional disturbances is shown by the fact that 25 per cent of the eighteen-year-olds not accepted for service in the armed forces, were rejected on the ground of emotional immaturity.

Drs. Thomas A. C. Rennie and Luther E. Woodward in "Mental Health in Modern Society," the Commonwealth Fund, 1948, state that "Immaturity stands out as number one mental, emotional, and social ills. It accounts for practically all neuroses, is a major factor in mental illness, and seems to be at the bottom of many social problems. On the other hand, emotional and mental maturity (being grown up and acting our age) is the only hope of maximal personal satisfaction, physical and mental health, social progress and enduring peace."

How can our children and we, ourselves, achieve emotional maturity?

Just as the chests of boys and girls will mature if they play, so also will the boys and girls mature emotionally if they play games where they have to give and take. Also, for children and adults, mixing with others, by rubbing off shyness and other odd behavior, will make them grow mentally and emotionally and "act our age."

HEALTH NOTES

Belching, often repeated, is due to swallowed air caused by nervousness of emotional disturbances, especially in those who worry about this gas and about digestion generally.

In the healthy person, gas formed in the bowel is rapidly picked up by the blood, carried to the lungs and thrown out in the breath.

Breathing into a paper bag is a way of finding if gas is from swallowed air or digestive disturbances. Swallowed air has no odor

FARMERS ON BORER POWDER KEG

Hancock County farmers are sitting on a powder keg as far as next year's corn borer situation is concerned, according to Paul Henderson, county extension director.

He basis his statement on the annual fall corn bober count taken cooperatively by federal and state entomologists. The survey shows that the Hancock County corn fields are harboring an average of 1019 borers per 100 stalks this fall. That figure compares with 233 borers per 100 stalks last fall and represents a tremenduous increase in borer count.

Hancock County isn't alone as far as having lots of borers. Cerro Gordo County has a count of 1121, Winnebago 1008, Wright 1824, and Koosuth County has a count of 1200 borers per 100 plants.

One thing is certain, Henderson points out. The potential borer population for next summer and potential damage to next year's crop is great. Last year's overwintering population of 233 borers per 100 stalks produced a crop of borers this past summer that reduced yields by 15 to 25 bushels per acre in the county.

On the other hand, Henderson says that the right kind of weather this winter and next spring during egg laying could reduce the borer population. Also, things farmers do from now until May 15 to destroy borers will help.

Clean plowing in the most practical thing farmers can do now to reduce borer numbers Henderson said. Stalk crushers will help, but are not the complete answer. He doesn't recommend burning because it costs too much, doesn't kill enough borers, destroys organic matter and nitrogen, and promotes erosion.

But the borer population this fall means one thing for sure. Farmers are going to have to learn how to use chemical to prevent losses. H. M. Harris, head of the Entomology Department of Iowa State College and state entomologist, put it this way: "Our corn borer-population is such that Iowa farmers are going to have to think in terms of chemical treatment as an added operation in corn growing just like cultivation." From here on out, a farmer will lose more often than he wins if he skips treatment, Harris says.

CLOSE CALL

Four year old Wesley Etheridge of Laurens removed a board from the top of a grain bin, and tried to slide down into the bin. His head caught in the opening, leaving him hanging. His two year old brother sensed that he was in trouble and ran for their mother, who rescued Wesley from his predicament in time to save his life.

COINCIDENCE

The late Robert Ripley would have liked this one. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Coe of Los Angeles visited in Cherokee recently. While visiting with Nels Nelsen, the latter suggested he try to contact California on his short-wave radio set, to see if someone there would convey a word of greeting to the Coe's daughter. His call was picked up by a motorist carrying a short-wave set, who drove to the daughter's home and enabled her to talk with her parents.

GET ORDER IN FOR FERTILIZER NEEDED

Manufacturers Are Running Out Of Storage Space, Cheney Reports

It's a good idea to order fertilizer this fall even though potential fertilizer production for next year is higher than this year's record production, according to H. B. Cheney, extension agronomist at Iowa State College.

The fertilizer industry is geared to supply farmers with the fertilizer they want for 1950 crops. However, fertilizer producers are running out of storage space this fall and are having to slow down production. Cheney says that if this lag continues long enough, rush orders close to planting time next spring may not get filled.

Expect More Demand

With orderly movement of fertilizer from plant storage to farms throughout the year, supplies can come near meeting demand this year than any time during the past several years. USDA reports indicate possible increases in the use of fertilizer for next year. A 25 percent increase in amount of nitrogen, a 10 to 15 percent increase for phosphoric acid, and a 10 percent increase for potash is expected. Cheney says that this increased demand can be met only if fertilizers keep moving from fertilizer plants to the farmer.

Another advantage of getting fertilizer now is that fertilizers received in the fall and early winter usually have cured longer and are in better physical condition than those rushed out from the factory close to planting time.

Cheney says that the first consideration should be given for fertilizer needed for oats and legume seedings. However, it isn't too early to be thinking about ordering fertilizer for corn.

Store Where It's Dry

Good quality fertilizer can be stored on farms satisfactorily if dry storage space is available, according to Cheney. Fertilizer will not deteriorate with age if kept dry.

Cheney has these suggestions on storage. Store only in a barn or other dry building that has flooring off the ground. If only earth or concrete floors are available, stack the bags on a wood platform a few inches above the floor.

Stack bags close together to reduce circulation of air which allows fertilizer to take up moisture Prevent caking by piling sacks only seven or eight high.

Keep broken bags separate. Loose fertilizer takes up moisture more readily than that in a bag.

COLLEGE NOW READY TO TEST 1949 SEED CROP

Iowa farmers can take a positive step this fall toward a successful 1950 crop year by using the services of the Iowa State College Seed Testing Laboratory.

E. P. Sylwester, head of the laboratory, says that equipment is set up and ready to begin testing the 1949 seed crop. He urges Iowa farmers to select the seed to be tested and send the samples now to the laboratory to aviod the rush that normally occurs during January, February and March.

Care should be taken to get a good, representative seed sample. Slywester says to take seed from the top, middle and bottom of each sack or bin. Mix the 3 samples thoroughly and send this composite sample to the laboratory.

For corn, soybeans, oats or other small grain, a pound sample is required. A large supful of seed is sufficient for clovers, grasses and alfalfa.

Seed testing pays dividends every year. If a farmer knows how much of the seed he plants will grow, he can get a good stand even if the germination is slightly low by adjusting the seeding rate according to germination.

Seed tests help protect the farmer from buying seed that won't grow and from buying weed seeds. Sylwester points out that all seed that is to be sold as crop seed must be tested according to state law.

FARMERS CAN RE-SEAL CORN UNTIL DEC. 1ST

Farmers have until December 1st to reseal their 1948 corn crop, according to A. E. Rasmussen, Chairman of the Hancock County Production and Marketing Administration Committee. Purchase agreement corn of the 1948 crop also may be put under loan through the month of November.

The original closing date for resealing 1948 corn and for putting purchase agreement ocrn under loan was October31. The date now is through November 30. Mr. Rasmussen explained that farmers who extend their loans or put 1948-crop purchase agreement corn under loan will earn a storage payment of 10 cents a bushel, if the corn is delivered to the corporation after July 31, 1950. The later "final date" announced today will give farmers a longer period in which to maintain price support equities in the 1948 crop and to take advantage of the resealing provisions.

Visiting around Iowa

by Joe Marsh

Iowa Welcomes D.P.'s

Last week Joe Edwards took a European displaced couple to help on his farm.

"Isn't it wonderful," says Edith.

Well, I couldn't see anything amazing about it. Where does she think all our native Iowa families came from? (Check the names in your phone book.)

People came here from scores of foreign lands, with different customs, different ideas. But they worked together; built a great state.

It required neighborliness, tolerance, lots of give and take. And it requires that same spirit to KEEP Iowa great. No place here for bigotry. No room for neighborhood dictators or petty agitators.

Neighbor Bill can be a Socialist; that's his privilege. If Mary joins the sewing circle, it doesn't mean she's against people who don't belong to sewing circles. And if I enjoy a mild glass of beer, it doesn't array me against the fellow who prefers coffee.

We've built a great State by living together with freedom of ideas, tolerance, good will. Let's hold onto those principles.

TOO LITTLE FALL WATER WILL INJURE EVERGREEN

When evergreens and cedar trees turn brown and drop their needles in the spring, it's usually due to lack of attention in the fall rather than fungus disease.

Most trouble with browning and needle dropping is caused by a lack of water during fall and early winter months, according to Arden Sherf, extension plant pathologist at Iowa State College. Evergreen trees continue to lose water all winter because they retain their needle-type leaves in contrast to deciruous trees which shed their leaves and thus require less moisture during winter.

Sherf says you can ward off this trouble next spring by watering evergreens heavily at weekly intervals this fall up until the ground freezes solid.

KINDERGARTEN NEWS

The Kindergarten has finally started on its workbooks. We really enjoy them and are learning a lot from them. Only one dental card has come in this week. We hope to get them all in soon. Our Halloween party was a big success. We had fun bobbing for apples, pinning the tail on the cat, and wearing our Halloween hats and masks. We invite more visitors to come and visit us.

—Miss Christ

FIRST GRADE NEWS

We have finished our first reading workbooks and are very anxious to start on our new ones. We had a Halloween party Monday. We had a peanut hunt and bobbed for apples. We wore our party hats that we made last week and everyone had a good time. Julie Stokesbary was a guest at the party. We had 3 birthdays in the last few days: Patricia Finnegan on Friday, Delores Finnegan on Tuesday, and Eldon Nuehring on Wednesday. They all treated the class to candy bars. Mrs. Ervin Nuehring and daughter, Karen also Harley Nuehring visited school Wednesday afternoon.

FIFTH AND SIXTH GRADE NEWS

The fifth and sixth grade are learning to do a few square dances in their physical education classes. They seem to enjoy it very much. After they learn the dance they will learn the words to it and sing while dancing.

The fifth and sixth grades are getting ready for Book Week. They started their book week posters and in front of our room stands a large cardboard "Mr. Dictionary." JoEllen Clabough, Gracka Gerardi, and Margaret Haefner helped in making our professor.

Sixth grade are having a very interesting study of France in their geography.

Friday both classes brought wallpaper and goods and are studying and making designs in their art classes.

—Mrs. Schlawin

JUNIOR HI NEWS

We have been doing a lot of studying this week because of having mid-term tests. Thursday the seventh grade had a geography test and the eighth grade had a science test.

Last Thursday we had our physical training period outside because the gym was being used. We played soccer. Most of the girls didn't know how to play when they went out but they soon learned.

Friday we had an auction of all the stray pencils, erasers, and beanshooters. We collected $2.05 on our auction.

Our motto for this week is, "The most valuable of all education is the ability to make yourself do the things you have to do when they have to be done, whether you like it or not."

DRIVE NOW ON TO WHIP BRUCELLOSIS

Cause Of Undulant Fever In People And Abortion In Hogs, Cattle

Iowa is aiding in the national campaign to wipe out brucellosis (Bang's disease) in livestock.

Dr. K. W. Stouder, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College, says the national campaign which is just getting underway will aproach the problem with renewed emphasis and will make use of improved educational techniques.

So far the extension veterinarian has met with beef, dairy, veterinary and health interests, women's groups and the Farm Bureau to decide what part each can play in eradicating this disease which affects both animals and humans.

At the present time, literature of a nontechnical nature on brucellosis control is available to farmers and others at the extension veterinarian's office as well as at local extension offices in the state.

Clean Up Livestock

While brucellosis is a problem to both licestock and humans, Stouder says control of the disease in livestock is the first step. Records show that most cases of undulant fever are suffered by livestock handlers and children. Stouder says handlers often get the disease from animals while children get it from milk. Rarely does one person get it from another person.

The success of the campaign to eradicate tuberculosis which began some 25 years ago is proof enough that brucellosis too can be controlled, the veterinarian believes. The same forces can be used when each individual finds the part he can play.

When the drive to control brucellosis began in 1934, Stouder said it was found that the national average of diseased cows among those treated was 4.3 percent, while in Iowa the figure was 8.6 percent. The greater number of livestock in the state probably is responsible for that high percentage. It means that Iowa has a bigger job on its hands than do other states, Stouder says.

Consider New Law

The 1934 law is being used today for brucellosis control, but veterinarians are examining the possibilities of a better law. Under the present plan cows are tested and appraised. Cows which react are sent to maket. If they do not bring the appraised price the state and federal government pays the farmer up to $25 for grade and up to $50 for purebred cows in addition to the market price. This program is costing the state of Iowa $125,000 per year. It is a good plan but it is impossible to test all the cows for which tests are asked.

One plan being considered by veterinarians is to ask for a law which would provide $1 for the vaccination of each calf. Thus the same amount of money would provide much greater control. Stouder thinks it would be a good idea for farmers to be thinking of such a law before the legislature meets again.

Production Contest Results Revealed

Dale Huling and Darwin Wille were among many boys that did receive production record awards from five Dairy Heifer Production Records. In order to try for these awards, the boys filled out all production records necessary with feed ration and story of dairy heifers.

Dales Holstein heifer made 489 lbs. of fat, mature fat 520. Darwin with his Guernsey, made 387 lbs. of fat and 393 lbs. of mature fat.

Dale tried for 5th and Darwin for 14th out of 77 entries.

Good going boys. Let's have more boys entered in this contest next year.

CHOOSE THE RIGHT TOY

What can be more fun than making some toys for your little folk this year? Often it's not the intricate, highly mechanical toy that appeals, but the simple toy that challenges the imagination. And these can be made at home.

Mom and Dad can give Santa and Mrs. Claus some much-needed help this Christmas if they set up a toy workshop at home. With only a minimum number of tools, scraps of lumber and spools, cans, broomsticks and what-not, they can turn out toys to rival any of Santa's work.

Whether you copy a commercial toy or dream up your own, Edith Sunderlin, of the Child Development Department at Iowa State College, points out that every toy should help a child grow. This growing might be in making huskier legs and arms and more skillful fingers. Or it might be the kind of growing in which a younster learns to play and share with the "gang," solve problems, control his temper or use his imagination in make-believe play.

Younsters Can Help

Let the children help to make toys, too—perhaps for a young friend—because it's a fine way to have family good times, Miss Sunderlin explains.

Unit blocks are among the easiest toys to make and they're quite inexpensive Like any of the sorting, puzzle or peg-board toys, blocks teach finger skill and problem solving. Cut the blocks from white pine in various sizes. Proportion the dimensions so that two small blocks, placed end to end, will be the same size as a larger block. That will make it easier for younsters to build garages, stores, houses anr railroad tracks. Shellacking the blocks will protect small fingers from splinters.

Several fairly subsantial packing boxes plus planks and ladders make fine climbing equipment. Place braces on the under side of planks to keep them from slipping off the boxes. Ladders are easily made from 2x4's and broomsticks for rungs.

Even Mom should be enough of a carpenter to make an animal puzzle of a few large pieces for her 3 or 4-year old Older children enjoy more complicated puzzles. Draw an animal on a piece of plywood and cut the figure into several pieces with a jig saw. Glue the pieces of plywood. Johnnie or Susie fits the pieces into this cut-out area. Or make geomentric pieces to fit in a shallow box.

Use Ingenuity

Let your imagination go, Miss Sunderlin encourages. There's no limit to the ways you can make pegboards and sorting toys. For a sorting toy you might cut out circles, triangles, and cubes. Drill holes through these pieces so that they will fit over pegs made from broomsticks or doweling from the lumberyard. It's up to the child to discover how to get all of the circles on one peg and all of the cubes on another. It's even more of a problem when the pieces are not all the same size so that the largest circle or square must go on the peg first.

Be sure to paint all the toys from yuor workshop in bright colors—red, green, yellow, blue, orange and purple. It's one way to teach younger children to identify colors.

Tug boats, clappers, cymbals drums, rattles, tabbourines and trains are among the many toys you can build at home.

UPSET

While riding in a trailer hitched to an automobile, six Wyoming high school girls were shaken up when the trailer turned over. None were seriously injured.

LOST WATCH

Some months ago, Leonard Gross found a watch while plowing on his farm north of Earling. Recently the watch was identified by William Stephany as one he had received as a graduation gift in 1920. Still in fairly good condition, the watch had been lost by Stephany while plowing the same field 29 years ago.

COSTLY TO OVERCROWD POULTRY LAYING HOUSE

The poultry raiser who sells off extra pullets rather than overcrowd his laying house will be money ahead, says L. Z. Eggleton, extension poultryman at Iowa State College.

Overcrowding may cause high death rates in winter laying flocks. Eggleton says that ventilation systems become ineffective when too many birds are but in one laying house. The result is too much moisture in the air, damp litter and wet walls, which are generally unhealthful.

Another bad feature of overcrowding is the lack of feeding space in most houses for more than the normal number of birds. Eggleton thinks four 8-foot hopper-type feeders make up about the right amount of space for 175 hens.

He points out that there's a definite relationship between the floor space provided and potential egg production. Experienced flock owners allow from 3 to 4 square feet of floor space per bird in a well-equipped and properly insulated house.

One nest for every five hens is recommended, and Eggleton says to figure on 100 hens drinking about 5 gallons of water per day.

Ibsen, Shmibsen, She Said; Confide With Me Everything

By BILLY ROSE

I recently read a magazine piece entitled, "What's Wrong with Modern Marriage," in which the author opined that the divorce rate would drop like an over-ripe apple if the average wife showed more interest in her husband's business and hobbies.

Well, mebbe so, but you can't prove it by my Uncle Charlie and my Aunt Frieda. . . .

Charlie and Frieda are a couple of oldsters who have been living in a four-room flat on the East Side almost as long as magazines have been printing articles entitled, "What's Wrong with Modern Marriage." Ever since their nuptials, they've had at least one argument a day, and when they stop scrapping that's when I'll start worrying about them.

I remember an evening back in the days when I was knee-high to the Allen Street curbstone when Aunt Frieda came home from the movies with an air of unwavering nobility.

"Charlie," she said tensely, "how is business at the shop, good, bad or fair to the middle?"

Billy Rose

"Eh - peh," answered my uncle.

("Eh - peh," I hasten to translate, means that things being what they are, if a man breaks even he can consider himself a runaway success.)

"'Eh-peh' is no answer," said Frieda. "I am sick of living in a doll's house."

"I see," said Charlie. "Tonight in the nickelodeon was showing Nazimova in 'A Doll's House' by Hymie Ibsen."

"Ibsen, Shmibsen," said Frieda. "You can't push me out of your life. Confide in me everything, come thick or thin."

"This I'll confide," said Charlie. "When I come home from the shop I'm tired out like a dog. Bad enough I live through the day without it should repeat on me like radishes."

However, with my Aunt Frieda, like Columbus, there was no turning back She kept picking away until Charlie itemized the day's doings—everything from punch-in to punch-out

BUT THAT WAS only the beginning. The payoff came a few weeks later when Charlie was fixing to attend his weekly pinochle session.

"I want you should teach me how to play," said Frieda.

"Pinochle!" said Charlie. "Always you are saying pinochle is for loafers and no-goods."

"I ain't saying different," said Frieda, but pinochle is your passion and I don't want it should take my place in your life."

Now, my uncle was a broad-minded man. When women began to bob their hair, his comment was. "They want to ventilate their necks, so let them." But pinochle—well, that was another matter. Nevertheless, he knew better than to balk his wife outright and, as he explained the game to Frieda, all the while thinking bitterly of the coffeehouse session he was missing, a plot began to hatch in his head.

Next evening he was home early with a bag of wool and knitting needles. "Frieda," he said, "how you make a cable stitch?"

Half an hour later he was in the kitchen tasting the soup. "It needs a pinch paprika," he said.

"You're giving me point-outs how to make soup?"

"Who's teaching? A woman cooks and shops, a husband should similar cook and shop. How much you pay for cabbage?"

"Five cents a head."

"At Fuzarri's on Avenue A, is four cents."

FRIEDA DROPPED a handful of cutlery in the sink. "Fuzarri's is six blocks away."

"So what? The exercise will do you good."

That Saturday night, Charlie persuaded a couple of his cronies to come over for a pinochle session and put up with his wife's playing. At 12 o'clock Frieda said, "I can't keep my eyes apart. Maybe you could play three-handed."

"What kind pinochle player stops so early?" said Charlie. "Deal!" And at 3 a.m., Frieda was dealing them as if they were bricks.

Sunday, Charlie put on his best tie. "Today I go with you to see Theda Bara," he said.

"Is not necessary to go with," said Frieda. "I got a date with the ladies."

"Where you go, I go," said Charlie.

Frieda, afraid Charlie would laugh at Theda's amatory exercises and humiliate her in front of her friends, pulled down the flag.

"Marriage is not simple a ball and chain," she said. "You go your way and I'll go to Loew's."

Charlie moved in for the kill.

"No more schmoose about the shop?"

"If no more cable stitches."

"No more pinochle?"

"If no more tasting the soup."

"You got an agreement," said my uncle.

And they've been fighting happily ever since.

The Answering Voice

WE KNEEL to pray, we voice our desperate need
For quick release and comfort then arise,
Not tarrying a moment there to heed
The answer to our eager clamoring cries:
The answer that will come, though soon or late,
If we would only listen, only wait.

God is not deaf to any earnest prayer.
He hears, he heeds, he answers every one
Who gives a burden over to his care,
And humbly yielded, prays, "Thy will be done."
God grant us patient grace to wait thy word,
After our earnest, sincere prayer is heard.

The Fiction Corner ★ RANGE RIDER ★

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

CHUCK HANSON and Baldy Davis, range riders for the Circle H cattle outfit, were pretty disgusted the day young Johnny Howard rode into their camp and handed them a note signed by Old Man Hadley, the Circle H's owner. The note read in part:

"This will introduce Johnny Howard from New York, the son of an old friend of mine He wants to be a real cowboy and I'm sending him out to you boys. Show him the ropes. Jim."

Summoning Baldy, Chuck led the way out of earshot.

"Ain't the boss cute?" he said sarcastically. "Handin' us this nurse maid's job. By Gad, one day Jim Hadley will go too far."

"The way I figure it," said Baldy, "the boss is passin' the buck. Since this fashion-plate is the son of a friend he can't just give him the works and send him home, so he puts it up to us."

Chuck spat and scratched his head. "By gum, mebbe you're right. Shucks, that's it exactly! Come on, we gotta do like he asks. We'll make a cow hand outer this dude or die tryin'."

They returned to the camp where waited Johnny "O. K., feller," Baldy said. "The boss allows we gotta make a cow hand outer yuh. Your first lesson is to get down off that flea-bitten nag you're a-straddle and learn to stick on a real hoss."

"Well," said Johnny, "I was wondering if I was going to have to ride this old crow bait."

Chuck and Baldy exchanged meaning looks. Baldy went out to the corral and returned leading a sleek-looking black that kept his ears laid back permanently just to show folks how he felt about any one who thought he could ride him.

Confidently Johnny swung aboard while the two range riders climbed to the top rail of the corral fence. Baldy was a little nervous.

The black, with Johnny astride him, suddenly galvanized into action. It shot straight into the air and came down with all four legs as solid as gate posts. It sunfished and buckled and bucked. It got down and rolled over, brushed against the fence, reared on all fours, plunged and bucked some more. And presently, sweating and blowing, it stood docile and Johnny Howard was still on its back. Johnny grinned at the open-mouthed spectators.

THE RANGE RIDERS rubbed their eyes. The thing that had happened was like an hallucination. They weren't convinced. Chuck slid down off the corral.

"We'll now go into lesson number two," he remarked, "which includes bulldogging. Ever bulldog a steer, mister?"

Without waiting for the dude's reply, Chuck, who had won laurels as a bulldogger, galloped after a steer, threw and roped him in record time. Pleased and swaggering he returned. "See how it's done?" he asked.

"Yes," said Johnny, "I see. Mind if I try it on that big steer?"

He tried it. He threw and roped the big steer in three seconds less time than Chuck.

After a roping exhibition Johnny, without being challenged, produced a six-gun and demonstrated some fast and accurate shooting. In fact, it was so fast and so accurate that Baldy and Chuck didn't offer to exploit their own prowess.

When the shooting was over the range riders went into a huddle. Presently they returned to Johnny. Chuck stuck out his hand. "Mister, we hereby apologize. We know when we're licked."

Johnny grinned. "Well," he said, "I reckon that was Uncle Jim's idea. At first. Then when he found out I was a circus performer he saw a chance to play a joke on you boys. I learned all my stuff in a circus. I got to be pretty good, because I liked the work. In fact, I liked it so well I decided to become a real cowboy. The truth is, I don't know a darned thing about cowpunching and I'd appreciate it a heap if you boys would let me stay and teach me a few things."

"Teach you!" declared Chuck "Ha! Mister, consider yourself t'home."

PUZZLE NO. 23

SPORTSMAN'S HORIZON

By JIM RHODY

Sighting Rule

This rule should always be remembered when rifle sights are being adjusted: Always move the rear sight in the direction in which you desire the rifle to shoot. Move the front sight in the OPPOSITE direction. The front or rear sight can be moved in its notch by placing a short rod of brass or copper against it and tapping the rod with a hammer, while the barrel itself is supported against a hard block of wood.

Set the rifle sights to hit where you aim at the average distance of most of your shots in your hunting territory. Carefully check the exact position of your sights as soon as you have "sighted in" so that they may be returned to proper alignment if accidentally jarred out of alignment.

The sights on all rifles are carefully adjusted before the guns leave the factory. If your eyes are exactly normal and you hold the gun in the proper manner, your rifle should shoot true. However, there is considerable variation in the eyes of hunters and all shooters do not hold in just the same manner. Consequently, one man may get bulls-eyes consistently while another, using the same rifle, might find his bullets going wide of the mark. The sights then may be adjusted to make the necessary shooting corrections.

A SINGER has to be something more than just wonderful to make her professional debut on "The Telephone Hour." 20-year-old Barbara Gibson did it September 12, and will be heard again on the program in February. Gladys Swarthout promptly phoned her praise; Lily Pons, who had missed

Walter Magill, producer of "The Telephone Hour," was at CBS the day she auditioned, heard executives raving about her voice; after hearing her sing he gave her her big chance.

Columbia will release "All the King's Men" some time near Christmas, to get maximum consideration for Academy Award nomination. Paramount is banking on "The Heiress"; 20th Century-Fox has "Pinky"; Eagle-Lion, "Passport to Pimlico."

Before designing "Mortimer Snerd," CBS' Edgar Bergen spent months in research on phrenology. He made a complete list of all physical characteristics associated with stupidity, then combined them all in "Mortimer."

The University of Denver has adopted Paramount's "My Friend Irma" as the basis of a course in film production and appreciation. The script, still, production and publicity photos and a number of minature sets used in the picture are being used as visual aids, and sets created by Hans Dreier and Henry Bumstead are on display in the college library.

Lucille Ball is back at RKO, the first time in six years, to make "Easy Living," with Victor Mature. It was at RKO that she met her husband, Desi Arnaz, eight years back, when they were the principals of "Too Many Girls."

Florence Freeman expected to be home awaiting the stork's arrival the last week of September and the script of "Wendy Warren and the News" was written so as to give the star a vacation. But her son didn't know that in radio everything has to be done right on time. He put off greeting his parents and two sisters until October 6.

Bluegill Popular

Even though fall is advanced and the tang of winter is in the air over a great section of the United States, there is still some consolation left for the angler who has learned just how much sport the bluegill—or bream—can provide.

These fish may be taken, even on flies, until the waters of his habitat freeze over—certainly that is the case—in Kentucky, at least.

While small worms and minnows are the usually accepted diet of the bluegill, the fly rod is becoming increasingly popular in taking these small, but gamey fish. Some anglers, referring to the bluegill's fighting propensities, assert that if the bluegill ever got to weigh four or five pounds, he'd pull the angler in the pond!

A rampaging swan that attacked automobiles was reported in the vicinity of Grande Prairie, Alberta.

Many complaints were received from motorists, and one told the Mounted Police that he had to defend himself from the bird with his skis.

The bird was one of two that had been making their home in the vicinity for several years and its mate had been killed by an automobile.

Narrow Fairways Stymie Champs

By GRANTLAND RICE

DUDLEY ROBERTS AND Bill Kent, two Easthampton golfers, arranged an 18-hole exhibition recently that I had wanted to see for a long time.

It was the slugger against nature—the big hitter against the hazards of water, sand and wind. It was a matter of power vs. control.

The four men in the tour of Maidstone were Sammy Snead, P. G. A. champion, Cary Middlecoff, Open Champion, Lloyd Mangrum, ex-Open champion, and Skip Alexander.

These four had been shooting from 64 to 68 on much longer courses than Maidstone, which is only 6,400 yards. But at the finish their range in scoring was from 70 to 76, and only one of the four equalled par, Snead had a 75 and Middlecoff a 76. (With a normal wind they would have been two or three strokes higher.)

Grantland Rice

It so happens that Maidstone is a links—not a course A links is a course by a sea or an ocean. No trees are involved. The only hazards are winds, sand dunes and sea grass

Maidstone looks more like Scotland than St. Andrews does. It has more dunes and more water and more sand. If this be treason to Scotland, let Scotland come to Maidstone.

Johnny Kieran the sage, once a 76 shooter in golf, gave up the game years ago. "I would never have quit golf," he told me recently, "if I had seen this links"

The point is that Maidstone was too narrow, too well-trapped for Snead and Middlecoff, the two champions

At so many other courses around the country, Snead and Middlecoff, two of the greatest, could wander 40 yards off line and have a good lie. Not at Maidstone, where each wavering or off-line shot exacted its penalty. You are in sand or sea grass or some form of seaside trouble.

The greens at Maidstone are small and the fairways narrow. This is my idea of a great course. I don't care for the big greens and the wide, spreading fairways, now so much in vogue. Maidstone, at 6,400 yards, is much tougher than most courses at 6,900 or 7,000 yards.

There are no hills to climb at Maidstone, which, as the years roll in, is an added feature. Each year the hills get higher.

"Maidstone is a pretty narrow target," Sammy Snead said. "You can't turn loose like you can on those big fairways. And the greens are pretty small."

Why not? Most greens are much too big. Putting is much too important. Putting—where a stooping gentleman of 75 might outputt Sammy Snead

For the true test I believe in narrow fairways, smaller greens and shorter marches. The Snead - Middlecoff - Mangrum-Alexander show proved I was right. Control is more important than uncontrolled power. There should be a serious penalty for every shot off-line.

The Rules of Golf

Golf happens to be a game, quite an ancient game, that has far more players than baseball and football combined The number runs into several millions It is a playing game, not a spectator's game.

But in recent years, the rules of the game have slipped badly under poor control

The original rules of the game, being an outdoor competition covering some 200 or 300 or 400 acres, was that the ball be played where you found it—without any caressing or lifting.

Recently I was following a match with two ex-presidents of the U S. G. A. They were John Jackson, an eminent lawyer, and Archie Reid, whose father was one of the six men who formed the Apple Tree gang at St. Andrews, Yonkers, in 1832

This was a match-play round. The sun was shining—the sky was blue As each player came to a green he promptly picked up his ball—marked it—and stuck the ball in his pocket.

"Why?" asked messrs. Jackson and Reid, who know more of the spirit and purpose of golf than most of the players. "The ball is not supposed to be touched," Archie Reid said. "If it were raining and muddy and a special rule were made for the day, that would be different. Under the rules of golf, they have no right to lift the ball and clean it."

Mr. Jackson concurred. Both were 100 per cent right.

I should like to know why the presidents of the U. S. G. A. and the P. G. A. permit this drift.

HANCOCK COUNTY CHILDREN WILL BE GIVEN HEARING TESTS

On Tuesday, November 29th, and Wednesday, November 30, all children in Hancock County in grades three, six, and nine, and any others whom the teachers feel have difficulty will be given a group hearing loss according to the results of the group test will be given an individual tests. Also, all children in grade three will be given a speech test. Any others in any other grade who have speech difficulty will come in for the tests. This does not include the children now enrolled in speech centers.

This is a beginning of a statewide program of hearing and speech testing in the public schools which will be continued each year. The testing is done by a staff of specially trained people from the Department of Public Instruction, under the division of Special Education. With the results of these tests available, the schools can better help the child, should he have hearing and speech difficulty.

Parents are asked to assume the responsibility for bringing the children to the place where the testing is to be done. Perhaps one or two parents can bring the third and sixth graders and others to be tested from one school to the place where the testing is to be done. The children who are to come for the tests shall be dismissed from their schools and not counted absent. The testing will take approximately two hours.

FROM THE DESK OF THE EDITOR

Shucks! Double shucks! We have just been informed that the Legion has abandoned the idea of holding their annual feather party at the Community Hall.

This has become a great event and a large number of people in the past have enjoyed playing bingo and taking the chances on getting a turkey for their big Thanksgiving dinner. And whether or not they won anything their money was well spent for a good cause in helping unfortunate former service men and their families.

But the big shot down at the Capitol classes this with gambling and has put his big foot down on a lot of "gambling," the proceeds of which in the past, has gone to charity.

We understand that the Legion posts at Britt, Garner and Clear Lake have also called off their feather parties, all of which were to have been held next week.

The local boys have about twenty fine turkeys on their hands. You can help them out, however, by buying a turkey from them and helping reduce their stock . . . at cost.

The Legion is in hopes that the ban may be lifted so they can have a party before Christmas.

HANCOCK COUNTY TREASURER REPORTS TAX COLLECTIONS ARE GOOD

Roy L. McMillin, Hancock County Treasurer has reported the tax collections for the year up to November 1st at 90 percent.

With the total to collect for the year 1949 well over a million dollars, we find that we have collected to November first, one million forty nine thousand, four hundred and forty dollars. Leaving less than 10 percent to collect before tax sale date.

Drainage has been a big item for the year and we have collected in drainage; eighty-four thousand one hundred and forty eight dollars. There have been a number of new districts established but most of this will come in the 1950 collections.

All tax has a penalty attached at this time. Where the full amount is still due we have to add 3.75 percent and on the second half the penalty is three-quarters per cent.

The Agriculture Land Credit, whereby the owner of land in the taxing district, is assessed at over 15 Mills for school purposes, (if the acres are over 10), will be entitled to a refund for the amount over the 15 mills. We have several district where the millage was over 40 mills. This refund is to be made for the years 1946-1947 and 1948 and then each year thereafter. As soon as this money is sent to us we will figure the percent that each year will pay for there was not enough appropriated to pay the amount in full. You will receive a check from the County Treasurer for the amount due for each year. The owner of the land who paid the tax during the above years is the one who is entitled to the refund.

Gas tax from the sale of gasoline in the state has been a big item this year and we have received for the construction of roads in the county a total of $107,498.00 up to Nov. 1st. There has been no levy made for road construction as the gas tax has taken care of the expense.

With all collections in the county being good for the year we expect to finish up with a good balance in all accounts.

MARSHALL BROTHERS TO HOLD BIG CLOSING OUT FARM SALE

One of the earliest, and what will perhaps be the largest farm sale of the season, will be held by Herb and "Bill" Marshall on next Monday, November 21st at the farm 3 miles southeast of Klemme.

The Marshalls are quitting farming and will dispose of 127 head of livestock, a long line of very good farm machinery, and some hay.

The sale bill is being published in the Times this week. Turn to their advertisement for complete details and descriptions. There was not enough space in the advertisement to list all of the items to be sold.

This is the first sale to be held in the Klemme territory this fall. B. A. Reemtsma will cry the sale which will be clerked by the First National Bank of Klemme.

KLEMME SPLITS PAIR AT ROWAN FRIDAY EVENING

The Klemme Shamrocks and the 'Rockettes opened the basketball season at Rowan Friday evening.

The 'Rochettes met a superior Rowan girls team and came out of the game with more experience but less scores as Rowan downed them 52 to 26. Schafer and Greiman were the top scorers for Klemme with 12 and 9 respectively.

Under the generalship of Red Schmidt the Shamrocks looked impressive as they defeated a good Rowan quintet 59 to 39. Kaduce led the Shamrocks attack with 19 points, closely followed by Brinkman with 16 and Josten 17. Coach Patterson used 7 men in the game trying out various combinations.

KLEMME WINS DOUBLE-HEADER FROM WODEN

Klemme High School hung up two more victories here Tuesday night when the 'Rockettes beat the Woden girls 29 to 17 and the Shamrcoks went by Woden 44 to 27.

Greiman and Schaefer led the attack for the 'Rockettes and kept a comfortable lead all the way. The local girls made a good showing and are improving their game.

The main attraction was a rather loosely played game and neither Woden or Klemme showed much flash. Coach Pat Patterson shifted 8 players in working out combinations for the future. Brinkman, Josten and Kaduce led the scoring.

Bake Them Often

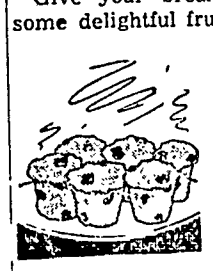
QUICKLY BAKED BREADS provide inspiration for any meal and snack, so they're easily worth the few minutes it takes to mix and bake them.

Give your breakfast a lift with some delightful fruit and nut bread by baking it while the stragglers are getting down to breakfast. Or, why not plan to make an inspired lunch box with some delightful variations of a quickly baked bread?



Snacks are something special if you have some beautifully textured prune bread with a spread of cream cheese and jelly. Dinners, too, can be budget-wise if you'll take less than half an hour to mix and bake honey butter roll-ups or orange-date muffins.

Hot breads give cool weather meals that essential stick-to-the-ribs quality. More than that, their aroma and appeal gets the family to the dining table without coaxing!

FIRST on our parade of quick bread recipes is this for a bran nut bread which may be varied in four different ways:

Bran Nut Bread
(Makes 1 loaf, 4½x9½ inch pan)

- 1 egg
- ¾ cup sugar
- 1 cup milk
- 2 tablespoons melted shortening
- ¾ cup bran
- 2¼ cups sifted flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- ¾ cup chopped nutmeats

Beat egg and sugar until light. Add milk, shortening and bran. Sift flour with salt and baking powder; combine with nutmeats; add to first mixture, stirring only until flour disappears. Spread in greased loaf pan, which has been fitted with waxed paper at the bottom. Bake in a moderate (350°) oven for 1 hour and 10 minutes.

A DELICIOUS pineapple coffee cake which bakes in less than an hour will be welcome at breakfast on chilly mornings.

Pineapple-Currant Coffee Cake
(Makes 1 9-inch cake)

- 2 cups sifted flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup sugar
- ½ cup shortening
- 1 egg, beaten
- ¾ cup milk
- ½ cup currants
- ½ cup drained, crushed pineapple

Orange crumb topping

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt with sugar. Cut in shortening until mixture is crumbly. Add egg and milk, stirring until flour is moistened. Drop batter into greased nine-inch cake pan spreading evenly. Spread currants and pineapple over top of batter and sprinkle with orange crumb topping:

- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- ¼ cup flour
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- 3 tablespoons grated orange rind.
- ¼ cup dry bread crumbs

Mix all ingredients together and use as a topping.

THIS PRUNE BREAD has some of the endearing qualities of cake, without being as sweet and rich. You'll like its texture.

Prune Bread
(Makes 1 loaf)

- 2 cups white wheat flour
- 1 cup white flour
- 1 teaspoon soda
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup cooked, drained, chopped prunes
- 1 egg
- 1 cup prune juice
- ½ cup milk
- 3 tablespoons melted butter

Sift together dry ingredients. Add prunes and mix well. Combine beaten egg, prune juice and milk, and add with melted butter to the first mixture. Pour into a greased loaf pan. Bake in a moderate (350°) oven for 1¼ hours.

Honey Butter Roll-Ups
(Makes about 16)

- 2 cups sifted flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 4 tablespoons shortening
- ⅔-¾ cup milk
- 1 tablespoon melted butter
- 2 tablespoons honey
- ¼ teaspoon cinnamon

Sift flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in shortening. Add enough milk to form a soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead ½ minute. Divide into two equal portions. Roll each portion into a circle and spread with melted butter and honey. Sprinkle with cinnamon. Cut into pie shaped pieces. Roll up beginning at wide end. Bake in a hot (450°) oven for 10-12 minutes.

Orange-Date Muffins
(Makes 12 muffins)

LYNN SAYS:
Make Simple Supper Dishes Something Special

Fruit fritters for dessert may sound anything but spectacular, but just serve them with some melted raspberry jelly as a sauce and see what a solid hit they can make.

Shreds from the roast chicken can be extended into a nice supper main dish if set on a bed of cooked rice in a buttered casserole, then topped with cream sauce. Bake until bubbly and brown.

Leftover meat and chicken can be made into really generous hot sandwiches if they're dipped in egg-milk mixture, then fried. Serve with spiced fruit for a completely satisfying supper.

Hard-cooked eggs, cut in quarters, swimming in rich cream sauce with pink shrimp, are hard to resist when served on small, split, toasted and halved biscuits.

Popovers split and filled with creamed chicken or chipped beef will satisfy the hungriest crowd for Sunday evening suppers.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Nervous Giggle Has Psychic Cause

By Lawrence Gould

Can a person overcome a "nervous giggle"?

Answer: It may not be easy, both because the habit usually is more or less unconscious and because it grows out of deep-rooted attitudes and feelings. What the giggler is really saying when he behaves as if everything were funny is: "Please do not take me seriously"—which in turn means "Do not blame me for being the sort of person I am." Far from being merely meaningless or silly, the habit reflects a chronic sense of personal inadequacy if not of downright "guilt," and getting the better of such feelings is the way to cure it.

Should a psychiatric patient read this column?

Answer: Several psychiatrists have told me that some of their patients are among my readers and have sometimes found the column helpful, but there may be danger in a person who is under psychiatric treatment reading along such lines. No two individual cases are exactly alike, and there's always the temptation to adopt a ready-made solution rather than keep probing for your private and peculiar "answer," especially if you are a person who would rather theorize than come to grips with harsh facts. Let your doctor decide.

Do a couple's parents determine which will be "boss"?

Answer. They may, if both partners grew up in homes of the same type, reports Hazel L. Ingersoll of the University of Tennessee. If both the wife and the husband grew up in homes in which father was the dominant authority, they will be apt to take it for granted that the husband should be "boss," while if both were reared in families where mother "wore the trousers," their marriage will usually follow the same pattern. Different backgrounds will mean either discord, or a compromise solution on an "equal," "democratic" basis.

General Practitioner of Today

By Dr. James W. Barton

IT ISN'T ANY WONDER that most medical students graduating these days are equipping themselves, or would like to equip themselves, as specialists. Their desire to get away from general practice with its long hours, and night calls, is only natural now that government regulations would put psysicians on the same basis as members of labor and other unions.

Everybody realizes that laboring men and women would be in a sorry mess today if it were not for unions, so that it is a natural sequence to find the various specialists forming their own unions, demanding, of course, that before a member is admitted he must have received the education and acquired the experience necessary.

What about the general physician, if, as it is reported of one graduation class in medicine, only 12 per cent expressed a preference for general practice?

In the "Canadian Medical Association Journal," Dr. W. V. Johnston, Lucknow, states that he has come to look upon specialists as having three functions to perform. First, they are consultants and as such they help to keep me out of trouble or to get me out of trouble. Second, they are my teachers. Thirdly, they are our research workers.

General practitioners have to diagnose and treat 85 per cent of the ills of mankind, and this includes the knowledge of when and where to obtain help for the other 15 per cent. Because of the importance of the knowledge of general medicine, today both in Canada and the United States, "specialists" in general medicine have formed their own organization.

To show how the position and prestige of the general practitioner is improving this same medical college at which, in 1946, 12 per cent of the graduating class preferred general practice, in 1949 graduated a group of which 58 per cent preferred general practice.

Dr. Johnston states that he and his fellow practitioners believe that each university should have a chair of general practice and that general practitioners should be made thorough-going and integrated members of medical school faculties. Also that every general practitioner should be on the staff or permitted to use all facilities of a hospital.

Wayne Greiman To Show In International Show

Wayne Greiman, Garner, will have a Shorthorn steer in the classes of the coming 50th anniversary International Live-Stock Exposition which is set for November 26th through Dec. 3rd in the Chicago Stock Yards.

An early talley of entries for the Exposition indicates the show will be larger this year. W. E. Ogilvie, secretary manager, anticipates the biggest cattle exhibition ever staged in the United States. He states this is largely due to increased premiums this year.

Celebrated 81st Birthday

Mrs. Vinnie Hubbard of Belmond was 81 years old November 8th and her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Heginer invited twenty ladies to stage a surprise party for her. ## PAINTING POINTERS—
MIX YOUR OWN COLOR SCHEME

The lovely modern color schemes you admire in others' homes may be waiting in cans of paint. It's just a matter of mixing them yourself, say home furnishings authorities, if you can't buy ready-mixes just the right color.

When you can't purchase paint ready-mixed to that exact shade you want, it pays to know how to mix your own.

The charm of a lovely home is not in the expensiveness of the furnishings but in the use of beautiful colors to make the furnishings you have more attractive. Drab, neutral-colored walls or woodwork may be practical, as some folks think, but they're not half so inspiring and cheerful as more colorful walls or woodwork keyed into a pleasant color scheme with your furniture and accessories.

The home furnishings specialists at Iowa State College say one of the best reasons for mixing your own paint is that you can get just the right color to play up that lovely picture you own, or a vase, or the rug or draperies. Perhaps you will wish to paint the woodwork just the right color to go along with the pretty wallpaper you have.

So, don't hesitate. Learn the rules of mixing paint at home, take patience with your efforts, and you'll be happy with the results.

How To Mix

There are several ways to mix paints. One is to add a little of one ready-mixed paint to another of the same type. Or add colors-in-oil to ready-mixed paint as it comes in the can. These colors-in-oil come in tubes and are available at the paint store. Many paint manufacturers provide exact formulas by which interesting colors can be obtained.

Water-mixed paints can also be blended together to give a variety of colors. In doing this, be sure to follow the manufacturer's directions.

Always stir each can of paint well before you begin to mix the colors. First of all, mix up a small amount of the paint in a saucer or some other white container to get an idea of the proportions you'll need of the two colors. Check the exact proportions of the paints as you mix them. Then you will be able to duplicate the color any time you wish. It's always a good idea to mix plenty of paint at the start to complete the job.

Stir And Test

Add, stir and test until the color is just right. If the paint is too light, add more of each color; if it's too dark, add some white.

An easy way to dull the color, if it is too bright, is to add a bit of the opposite color. For red this is green; for yellow it is purple; for blue it is orange. Thus a tiny bit of purp le color will make bright yellow look duller. A bit of green paint will make red more neutral.

Let a sample of the paint dry before you start to use it. Paint will often dry lighter than it looks when wet.

When you use colors-in-oils to mix in with a can of ready-mix paint, remember to start out with the ready-mix paint as near as possible to the final color you want. Then add the colors-in-oil a little at a time. You can keep track of the proportion better if you measure the amount of color into a measuring spoon first. Remember to stir this amount around thoroughly before you add any more. Because it usually is a very small quantity of thick material added to a large amount of paint, it can easily get lost and not be blended.

FIFTH AND SIXTH GRADE NEWS

The fifth and sixth grade made their room into story book characters. The sixth grade illustrated the story "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." The fifth grade chose the story "The Three Little Pigs." Both are very good and I'm sure all would be interested in seeing it. Welcome, Mothers!

Both grades have been working on a short play called "A Day with the Book People." This play will be presented some time next week to the first five grades.

JUNIOR HI NEWS

The past week we have been writing reports and poems for history. Dennis Ridder wrote the following poem:

The pioneers did Westward go,
Through rain and shine,
--sleet or snow.
Nothing could stop them where --they went,
For they were not far from God's intent.
Across the rivers and over the plains,
To find some land to raise their grain.
Oh, how happy they would be
If today, our world, they could see.

REFINISHING HOME FLOORS

Refinishing home floors need not be an expensive job calling for outside expert labor. The homemaker herself can do it satisfactorily, says Blanche M. Kuschke of the Rhode Island Experiment Station, offering as evidence reports from 48 rural women in that state who refinished floors in their homes. They reported on 131 floors, 61 of pine, 70 of oak. Shellac was used on half these floors, penetrating seal on 27 percent, varnish on 18 percent.

Penetrating seal proved most satisfactory and also required the least time and effort, the report concludes. All the women who refined floors with the seal were satisfied with the results. Many also were satisfied with shellac and varnish but some had objections. Some complained about white spots or scratches which soon showed up on shellac. Some who used varnish said that traffic lanes looked scratched almost immediately after the floor was used.

A better understanding of these common floor finishes is needed. Shellac and varnish form a film over the surface of the wood to protect and beautify it, but they can be scratched or marred by grit carried in on shoes. Though worn places in the finish may be repaired, it is difficult to prevent the patching from showing. White spots on shellac are caused by moisture.

Quite different is penetrating seal—a mixture of wood oil, varnish gums or other similar materials which sink into the wood, sealing the pores and giving a pleasant sheen though not a high gloss on the surface. Many good products of this type are on the market. A seal finish wears well, does not scratch with ordinary use, is easily patched when necessary and is maintained by waxing. To use seal on a floor previously finished with shellac or varnish, complete sanding and cleaning is necessary.

Worth consideration also in refinishing floors when the house is occupied is the time the floor must be out of service while the finish dries or sets. The Rhode Island women reported that varnished floors were out of service an average of 55 hours, shellac 41 hours, penetrating seal 20 hours. Only one coat of shellac or varnish was used but two or three applications of the seal were used. Seal can be applied every 20 or 30 minutes, as fast as the wood absorbs it. Then the excess is wiped off and the floor left overnight before waxing.

How much time does it take to apply these finishes? In this study the women reported an average of 52 minutes to shellac 100 square feet; an hour and 14 minutes for varnish; about 18 minutes for seal.

NEW YOUTH ASSISTANT SELECTED FOR HANCOCK

Forrest Kohrt was unanimously chosen to fill the position formerly held by Leonard Book, who resigned, as county extension youth assistant in Hancock County. The decision was arrived at jointly by Hancock County Farm Bureau board and Iowa State College Extension Service, at a meeting held in the Farm Bureau Office, Wednesday, Nov. 2nd. This appointment is subject to the approval of the State Board of Education.

The announcement was made jointly by Acting President, Erwin Kahl of the County Farm Bureau, and J. W. Merrill, District Extension Supervisor.

Mr. Kohrt will take over his duties January 1, at which time he will move into the county with his wife and two boys.

Mr. Kohrt graduates from the Iowa State College, Division of Animal Husbandry, at the close of the fall quarter in December. He was a 4-H club member for nine years in Lyon County, where his father and mother still reside on the farm. ## GET HEIFERS ACCUSTOMED TO BARN BEFORE FRESHENING

Getting your heifers accustomed to the dairy barn before freshening is advantageous from several standpoints, says Paul Henderson, county extension director.

First of all, proper milking is necessary for best production. And the way a cow is broken to milk has a lasting effect on how she will milk. Cows that are excited and nervous during the first milking experience are likely to continue to associate milking with unpleasantry, with the result of lower-than-possible production.

Best thing to do is bring the heifer in with the milking cows two weeks or so before she is to freshen. That will help her get used to the confinement of stanchions, the sound of the milker, and of having persons working around her. Then when she freshens, chances are she will take the experience of milking in her stride.

MANAGING FARMS RIGHT PAID WELL

Difference Between High And Low Profit Farms Was $9,573 In 1948

Farmers who managed their farms well in 1948 were amply paid for that skill. This is shown in a summary of records on 779 Iowa farms compiled by the Agricultural Economics Department of Iowa State College.

The difference in management income between the 256 "high profit" farms and the 256 "low profit" farms of the 779 who kept records was $9,573 in 1948. High profit farms received an average income for management of $9,325, while low profit farms showed up with a management loss of $248.

Several important factors contributed to this wide difference in profits, according to H. B. Howell, the farm management specialist at the college. He classifies these factors in four ways: size of business, crop production, livestock production and operating expenses.

Farm Sizes Close

High profit farms produced $11,936 in gross profits or production per man, but these farms were only 10 acres larger than low profit farms. This compares with $6,854 gross profits on the low profit farms.

Crop yield per acre as well as crop selection was better on the high profit farms. High farms averaged 77 bushels of corn per acre; gross value of crops per acre was $67. Low farms averaged 68 bushels of corn per acre and $58 gross value of crops per acre. Howell says that some of the difference may be due to the quality of the land but it also reflects management.

Returns Per $100 Feed

High profit farms handled a larger volume of business and livestock, and also did it more efficiently. Returns for 100 of feed fed on high profit farms were $46 higher than on low profit farms. High farms averaged $162 and the low farms $116. Howell says this difference indicates a better job of management, feeding, sanitation, breeding selection of kind and type of livestock, and marketing.

On the expense side, there was practically no difference between the high and low profit farms. High profit farms with their larger volume of business per man and per acre had a slightly higher power and machinery cost and general expense. They also used 2 months more labor per farm than the low profit farms.

DRY SPELL, BORER DAMAGE CAUSE CORN OUTLOOK DROP IN IOWA

Des Moines—Iowa's long dry spell and the damage wrought by corn borers were the main causes of a reduction of more than 44,000,000 bushels in the estimated size of the state's 1949 corn crop, the Iowa crop and livestock reporting service said Friday.

The service esimated the Iowa crop at 540,911,000 bushels, with an average yield of 49 bushels an acre, on the basis of conditions November 1st. The Oct. 1 estimate was 585,067,000 bushels.

Last year's record production totaled 666,730,000 bushels on a whopping yield—also record of 61 bushels an acre.

"This decline from the production estimated on Oct. 1st was due mostly to a fuller recognition by farm reporters of the accumulative drought damage since the middle of July as well as loss caused by corn borers," the service said. "Harvesting returns in most cases did not support the earlier expectations."

The service said another important factor in lowered yields was "the lack of available nitrogen on heavily cropped soils not properly rotated and enlivened with nitrogen-producing legumes and fertilizers."

The high winds of October 10th also caused yield losses, the service said.

Iowa soybean production was estimated at 29,362,000 bushels, down more than 6,000,000 bushels from the 1948 crop. The service said the average yield of 22.5 bushels per acre was somewhat higher than expected.

Commercial apple production was estimated at 173,000 bushels in Iowa, compared to 131,000 bushels last year.

The service reported Iowa's October milk production totaled 429,000,000 pounds, about 7,00,000 pounds above the output in the same month a year ago. It was the 2nd successive month in which milk production exceeded that in the corresponding month of 1948.

"The steady decline in milk cow numbers that began six years ago appears to be about over and the culling process that has been going on together with herd improvement and plentiful feed supplies has raised production per cow to the highest levels of record," the service said.

Iowa's October egg production totaled 286,000,000 eggs, the largest October output on record and double the production on record and double the production levels of 10 years ago.

"Present prospects are for a total egg production for the year that may rank 1949 egg production second only to the year 1946 when flock sizes were at considerably higher levels," the service said.

VANQUISH MITES, LICE WITH FOURFOLD ATTACK

Poultrymen can rid their laying flocks of mite and louse troubles by following a four-point program, according to Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist at Iowa State College.

First clean the chicken house thoroughly.

Second, spray or paint nicotine sulfate or creosote on the roosts, dropping boards and walls near the roosts. These materials kill both the lice and mites. Gunderson cautions to keep the birds outside during the application of either of these materials and for 4 to 8 hours after application. A good time to do the job is before moving pullets to the laying house, or on a warm, sunny day when the birds can be penned outside without danger of a drop in egg production.

Third, scatter dusting sulfur into the litter at the rate of 1 pound to 500 square feet of floor space.

Fourth, mix 1 part of 50 percent DDT powder and 4 parts dusting sulfur together and put 1 tablespoon of this mixture into each nest in the laying house.

EGGS WILL CONTINUE TOP-RANK FOOD BUY

Pullet eggs are a really good buy when a dozen cost less than seven-eights the price of a dozen large size eggs, according to extension nutritionist, Iowa State College.

The recent price drop in eggs, which is expected to continue into the winter, they say, is largely due to the number of pullet eggs being produced this fall.

Eggs are of high-quality protein, they point out. They're "complete" proteins, meaning that none of the essential amino acids are lacking. One egg yolk gives us one-tenth of our day's supply of iron, and it's rich in phosphorus too. It ranks with the butterfat in milk as a rich source of vitamin A. Thus eggs are a "protective food."

Eight medium-sized eggs are equal in protein value to a pound of meat. Children need at least five to seven medium-sized eggs a week for best health; and grown folks should have at least four or five.

BEWARE OF SEPTIC TANK CLEANERS

Some traveling workmen who clean septic tanks and cesspools are misrepresenting themselves as being associated with the Iowa Department of Health, and are charging excessive prices.

Recent activity in Washington County of these workmen caused Paul J. Houser, director of the Division of Public Health Engineering, to issue the following statement:

"Public health engineers from the Iowa State Department of Health do not engage in such work as cleaning septic tanks and cesspools. If any workmen say that they represent this agency, the home owner should demand to see their indentification.

"The cleaning of septic tanks and cesspools must be done periodically depending on the size of the unit, but all residents are urged to make a thorough check on the reliability of such workmen if they are approached. The larger tanks serving municipalities have sludge removal pipes and usually do not need to be pumped out."

According to a report received by the State Department of Health, the "deal" was worked out in this manner. First, the home owner was approached on the pretense of making an official "Department of Health" inspection, and told that the sewage disposal system needed cleaning. Upon completion of the work "income tax" papers were asked to be signed which turned out to be a contract at an unreasonable price. The unsuspecting home owner thus feels that he is obligated to have the job done at an exorbitant cost.

RAT LIKES HIS POISON WARM IN WINTERTIME

Several changes in rat-poisoning tactics should be made to get good kills during cold weather, according to Earle Raun, extention entomologist at the Iowa State College.

First on his list is to use non-freezing baits. Raun explains that rats are just as hungry in cold weather as they are in warm weather but they won't eat enough frozen bait to kill them.

Baits that are effective in cold-weather rat control include dry dog food, 1 quart of crude liver oil mixed with 10 pounds of corn meal, 1 pound of peanut butter mixed with 4 pounds of corn-meal, and dried fish. Any of these baits may be mixed with powdered poisons.

For winter rat control, place bait where it is protected form the cold—inside of buildings if possible.

As for poisons, several are just as effective in cold weather as during summer. Red Squill is safest because it kills only rats. Barium carbonate is good the year around, is apparently tasteless and odarless, and is toxic to all animals and children.

Antu poison is not recomended for use in winter.

BOOST MILK OUTPUT BY WASHING UDDERS FIRST

Washing udders just before milking can increase total milk produced by as much as 10 to 20 percent, according to Joe Hineman, extension dairyman at Iowa State College.

Washing and massaging the udder with a warm, wet cloth stimulates a cow to let down her milk. Water used should be 130 degrees F., which to the touch is just about as hot as you can "stand your hand in."

Start milking within 1 to 2 minutes after washing then remove the machine when milk stops flowing, which usually is within 3 or 4 minutes.

If milking is done slowly, part of the milk is left in the udder. Not milking a cow completely may cause her to dry up, Hineman says. If milking is not completed within 6 or 7 minutes after the udder has been washed the milk will be reabsorbed into the blood stream.

TWO HEADS

The Earville State Bank recently started its 58th year. It was founded in 1892, it has had only two presidents. The first was the founder, C. M. Laxson, whose son Carl succeeded him and is still president.

AROUND IOWA

DEER

Jack Jones and Clarence DeJager of Chatsworth returned recently from a 1,700 mile hunting trip to Canada. The didn't see a single deer. On the morning after their return to Iowa, Mr. DeJager saw a big buck deer, standing in his own back yard.

GUNS

W. E. Kahler, Denison lawyer, has a collection of 200 pistols and 170 shot guns. He started collecting as a hobby while quite young, starting with bird's eggs. Prize of his present impressive collection is a French dueling pistol, built by Lepage of Paris in 1837.

LIMB

Among the casualties of Iowa's recnt high winds was Jerry Brennan, of Emmetsberg. The six-year old yeath was struck by a falling limb, which measured six inches in diameter, and knocked unconscious. He is recovering.

BURNED

Roman Knecht of Whittemore, smelled rubber and got out to look under his car. As he crawled under the vehicle, he was showered with blazing gasoline. Before passers-by could help him put out the flames, he received second degree burns on his face and neck.

OLDEST FAMILY?

A Cascade, Iowa, women may be the member of the "oldest" family in the world, counting total combined ages of living brothers and sisters. She is Mrs. Joe Bardy of Cascade, who at 54 is the youngest of fourteen living brothers and sisters. The r combined ages total 897 years. Recently Finland claimed the title for a Helsinki family, whose combined ages totaled 866 years.

PALS

At New London, two good pals are "Spotty" and "Tippy." Spotty is a fox terrier dog. Tippy is an eight months old female wild fox. Tippy was caught while a small cub last winter. House-broken and very friendly, she is now a pet of Raymond Colton.

SCRAP BOOK

Mrs. W. C. Carson has an unusual scrap book series. It contains clippings of all articles published about New London people who participated in World War II. Thousands upon thousands of clippings are contained in the three books, all arranged in chronological order.

HONEST MAN

When Harlan Wilson, Cherokee, was in Iowa City for the Northwestern game recently, he lost his wallet and money. Two days later it was mailed back to him, intact. The sender did not give his name.

How Church Chimes Rang For the Benefit of Brooklyn

By BILLY ROSE

This week I'd like to spin a little story—a very, very little story It's of no great importance, and I won't get mad if the editor decides to file it in the wastebasket, and in its place print some big story about Marshal Tito or Rita Hayworth's baby.

To begin with, this story concerns itself wth a church, and a lot of bright people will tell you a church is no longer of any importance in this test-tube and Bunsen-burner age. To make matters worse, the church is in Brooklyn, and—well, I guess you've heard plenty of jokes about how unimportant Brooklyn is. . .

One day last summer while driving past a church on St. Felix street in Brooklyn, I heard a set of chimes that did nice things to my ears. They were unusually good chimes, and figured to have cost a lot of money. Naturally, I wondered how they happened to be in the belfry of a modest church in a modest neighborhood.

Billy Rose

"What's the church with the chimes?" I asked a newsstand proprietor.

"Hanson Place Central Church," he said. "It's Methodist."

"Have they had those chimes long?"

"No," said the newsie. "I think they put them in about a year ago."

The next day I did some telephoning, and I liked what I found out.

WHEN REV. John Emerson Zeiter, pastor of the church, heard about a new type of electrically controlled chimes called Carillonic bells, he told his congregation about them and said it would be a nice thing for the neighborhood if people going to work in the morning and coming home at night could hear those beautiful chimes. He told his flock the bells cost a lot of money, and suggested they contribute a little something from time to time. Maybe in a year or so, the church could afford the bells.

Next day a member of his parish phoned "I've been discussing the bells with my business partner," said the parishioner, "and we'd each like to donate a third of the cost. But there's a hitch."

"What is it?" asked the Reverend

"Well, my partner is Jewish," said the businessman, "and we were wondering if that would make any difference."

Reverend Zeiter said he didn't think it would make any difference at all.

"We think," continued the businessman, "that it would be a good idea to find a Catholic to put up the other third. After all, people of all faiths are going to enjoy these bells."

THE NEXT DAY a Catholic in the neighborhood offered to put up the remaining third, and the Carillonic bells were ordered. At the dedication ceremony a couple of months later, a plaque was put up on the wall of this Methodist church, and inscribed on it were the names of the Catholic, the Protestant and the Jew . . .

And that's all there is to this story—this very, very little story. Do I think this one set of electrically-controlled bells is going to eliminate religious bigotry in Brooklyn? Of course not. Do I think the people in Flatbush who hear the chimes are going to be kinder and more tolerant? Again, of course not.

Why, then, am I writing this piece? Well, I guess it's because I'm fool enough to think that even one drop of clean water falling on a dusty street is important. Who knows? It may clean up an inch of ground and give somebody else an idea.

One of these days—and I don't expect to be around to see it—a lot of drops of clean water may fall and a lot of dust may be washed away.

DAWN

QUT of the dark, the light! O Hearts, remember
The eternal truth God gives us as a sign
That after the dark, as glowing as an ember,
Deep at the core of life, a light will shine:
The light of hope, after the bitter weeping;
The light of peace, after the lengthened pain.
The Christian heart held close within God's keeping
Will find the dark skies brightening again.

The risen Christ is proof of light's returning;
The risen Christ is symbol of the dawn.
O you who have been striving, longing, yearning
To catch the light ahead, move out, move on.
You will find him there among the springtime flowers,
Among the clean winds of a new-born day.
He is the lamp for all our future hours;
He is the light to guide us on our way.

SCRIPTURE: Isaiah 55: 56.6-8. DEVOTIONAL READING: Romans 10.1-13.

God's Open House

Lesson for November 20, 1949

IT IS A WARM chapter, this 55th of Isaiah. Some false ideas about God melt away fast when they are brought close to it. Let us take a look at some of these notions and see how they wilt in the light of God's word. Sometimes these notions are held sincerely, sometimes they are mere excuses to keep from facing God. One of these mistaken notions is the idea that God has two lists: one is a list of people on whom he intends to have mercy, and will save; the other list being a private one, of those on whom he intends to have no mercy and will not save If your name is on the first list, fine; but if it is on the second list, you are in a hopeless fix, for if God is not going to help you, who can?

Dr. Foreman

This is a terribly wrong notion. It confuses the true God with some sort of sultan in the sky who has a "social register" of persons he will admit to his palace. "Use this invitation as your card of admittance." No, it is not at all like that.

If you really think that admission to heaven is by card only, then cut out Isaiah 55 and present it at the gate Cut out any verse in the Bible that says "Whosoever."—John 3.16 for example—and present that. God keeps open house, he does not employ butlers or strong-arm men to keep out the crowds, he wants all to come who will. Do you want God? Then come Are you thirsty for the living water? Then drink. It is as simple as that.

No Waiting

THERE IS ANOTHER notion that keeps people away from God It is a kind of shyness. It is the feeling that maybe it isn't any use hunting for God It is the feeling a boy has when he is lost in the woods and has about made up his mind that there is no use in walking any more, he will just sit down and wait till somebody finds him.

It is the feeling that God may be sensitive and doesn't want people coming bothering him. It is the notion that if God wants me, he will knock me down and drag me where he wants me to be. A man with a notion like that, of course, isn't likely to meet with God.

He spends his life paying God no attention whatever, not even thinking about him, perhaps. He may even go as far as he can from the Father's house, believing that God's long arm, like the long arm of the F.B.I. or the Mounties, will reach after him and get him in case God ever wants him.

Now this is a ridiculous idea and a bad one too. Isaiah would not think it true for a minute. "Seek ye the Lord," he says. "Call on God . . . return to the Lord" "Incline your ear and come!" This means you—if you will. But if you won't, God will not force you. He forces no man. He wants willing obedience, loving service, not slavery. God will have no chain on you but the chain of love. God keeps an open house, not a prison farm.

No House Of Horrors

ANOTHER WRONG NOTION, for which, alas, many a church member is partly responsible, is the notion that the nearer we get to God, the gloomier we shall be.

All the talk about sacrifice and suffering for others, such as we were thinking of last week, all the emphasis in the church on the death of Christ, all the solemnity of most church services, make people think: "God may be all right for solemn people, but not for me; I like life with a smile."

Now that is just another mistaken notion. The very persons who know the deeper meanings of sacrifice are just the persons who don't like to use that word about themselves.

In fact, it could be said that in general it is only Christians who have a right to be gay. Jesus himself, on the same night in which he was betrayed, spoke to his friends about sharing his joy to the full.

Isaiah 55 is certainly no invitation to gloom. Joy, peace, the clapping of hands are there. But how do we know Isaiah was right? There is only one way, and that is not to sit arguing about it. You never know what a party is like by staying at home.

Do you really want to find out what goes on there? Don't be content to hear others say, "It's wonderful!" God's door stands open

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

BY INEZ GERHARD

IT IS QUITE POSSIBLE that "The Heiress" will bring Paramount another Academy Award; if it does, most of the credit should go to William Wyler, who directed and produced it. Olivia de Havilland and Ralph Richardson, seen as an awkward, shy, unattractive daughter and her bully of a father, give superb performance. As a suitor anxious to marry the girl for her money, Montgomery Clift is less satisfactory. Mirim Hopkins is excellent as the girl's aunt; in fact, the entire supporting cast deserves praise. "The Heiress" is even better as a picture than it was as a successful play—and William Wyler is largely responsible.

The Farfa concentration camp sequences of "Stromboli," which Producer-Director Rossellini had been holding personally, have finally been turned over to the Technostampa Laboratory in Rome. This makes the entire footage of the film available to RKO—so it won't be too long now till we see Ingrid Bergman in what she says will be her last picture.

After playing golf left-handed for 10 years and reaching a two handicap, Ken Carson, of the Garry Moore show, has turned right-handed, on the advice of Pro Harry Cooper. Cooper says Ben Hogan did it—why not Carson?

Wearing a black wig, Bette Davis sneers and snarls her way through "Beyond the Forest," the rather tiresome story of a small-town girl who was willing to commit murder to get to Chicago. Miss Davis likes to play wicked women, but she should not have chosen this one. Joseph Cotton and David Brian do what they can to improve matters, but the picture is not good.

Rudd Weatherwax, owner and trainer of Lassie, has had to hire a new secretary just to handle the fan mail sent to the collie by fans of her NBC Saturday radio series. Much of it comes from children, and it comes by the bushel.

Ed "Archie" Gardner is a disappointment to his son, Ed. Jr. The five-year-old, who has the handsomest cowboy outfit in New York's Central Park, wishes his father had become somebody dashing, like the Lone Ranger.

Both Mike Romanoff and his famous Beverly Hills restaurant have been signed for top roles in "A Lovely Place," which Humphrey Bogart will make for Columbia This is the first time the well known tavern has been shown in a picture in great detail. Since much of the film's action takes place there it was decided to use the restaurant itself rather than build a replica.

★ FORTUNE SMILES ★

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

CALEB WARE was a young man who quarreled with his father, and was turned away from his boyhood home. Caleb always said later that he went away of his own accord.

Fortune smiled on Caleb. Five years later he found himself prominent in the affairs of the small city in which he had chosen to live. Moreover, he was rich.

It was then that Caleb decided to go home. As the train began to climb into the fresh, clean air of the mountain country, the tired look about his eyes vanished. Color appeared in his cheeks.

It thrilled him now to know that he was in a position to provide his father with all the comforts of old age

He swung from the train at the tiny depot. Everything was the same; the cracker-box station, the general store, the postoffice and the few small dwelling houses

A man with side whiskers and spectacles peered at him from the doorway of the depot.

"Hello, Banty. Where's your rig?"

The man stepped through the door. "Caleb Ware! Know yuh anywhere! How be yuh, Caleb?"

"Fine, Banty. And you?"

"Tol'able, Caleb. Just tol'able. Figure on goin' out to the farm? Drive you out if you say so."

"Figured you would." He climbed into Banty's ancient rig, glad of this opportunity to ride with the station master and learn the news.

"Looks like you done quite well in the city," Banty suggested cautiously.

"Not bad," Caleb agreed. And he knew that feeling of triumph and victory at his success. He thought of his father's surprise and disappointment. It would be a bitter pill for old man Ware to swallow.

"Caleb Ware! Know yuh anywhere! How be yuh, Caleb?"

"How are things at the farm, Banty? How's dad?"

"Your dad's ailin'," said Banty. "He ain't been right since you left five years ago."

"Me left him? Why he turned me out!"

"Don't make no difference. You shouldn't a done it. He needed you at the farm. The place is plumb run down, and your dad ain't well."

Caleb felt suddenly that Banty was condemning him, that everyone in the village had condemned him.

"Dad isn't really bad, is he, too sick to work?" he asked.

"He is now. A month ago he was took bad. Ain't worked since." Banty spat and glanced at him sideways. "He won't be glad to see you, son, not like that. He's got too much pride."

CALEB UNDERSTOOD. He knew that his father would never take succor from a son who had deserted him, would never admit he needed the help of a traitor. He'd rather die starving than that.

Banty might have said more, but Caleb suddenly leaped from the slow moving buggy.

"You just keep on going, Banty, and forget you ever saw me. Dad need never know but what I come home because I had to."

Caleb plunged into the woods beside the road and discarded his coat and undid his necktie. He walked for some distance through the heavy growth beside the highway. Branches tore at his fine linen and ripped great gashes. Briars clutched at his trousers and tore holes in them.

Thus Caleb came home. Sight of the farm gave him a pang. The house and grounds were run down and in need of repair. A cot had been placed on the rear porch and on this cot Caleb saw the thin, gaunt figure of his father. He came and stood over the figure and looked down at it and smiled.

"Hello, Father," he said. "It's Caleb. I've come home to ask your forgiveness and to be taken in." His voice was humble.

Old man Ware opened his eyes and looked up at his son, and there was a quick happiness in his expression. His dimming vision saw the tousled, ragged farm boy who had stalked so proudly away five years before.

"I knew you'd come back, Caleb I knew you'd come to your old father for help sooner or later. And —and I'm glad."

National Kids' Day, sponsored by more than 3,000 Kiwanis clubs, will be celebrated for the first time this year on Saturday, November 19. In succeeding years, the third Saturday in November will be designated as the date for observance. This series of photos shows something of what is hoped to be accomplished by inauguration of a National Kids' Day. Its purpose is to spur work with underprivileged children at the community level so as to make them better citizens, combat juvenile delinquency and, at the same time, insure the children all the pleasures and delights of normal childhood. Because the problems of underprivileged children cannot be solved without providing additional money, Kiwanis clubs throughout the United States and Canada will conduct dignified fund-raising drives in connection with National Kids Day. Money raised in a community, however, will be spent in that community in assisting underprivileged youth.

Furuhashi Is Unorthodox Swimmer

By GRANTLAND RICE

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS ago I saw Paavo Nurmi run in the Olympic Games at Paris. He was something to see—just as Babe Ruth and Jack Dempsey were. You knew you were looking at the master— a runner good enough to win from the mile to the 10,000 meters.

"I felt the same way when I saw Furuhashi swim," Bob Kiphuth of Yale told me "I felt as if I were looking at another Nurmi — another master."

Grantland Rice

"I understand the new Japanese swimming records may force a change in swimming style and form," I said to Kiphuth, one of the greatest physical conditioners of all time.

"That isn't quite the way it is," Yale's director of athletics said "Furuhashi is another Nurmi — another Ruth—another Cobb—far above the mass You can't make rules for a genius."

"Here are some of the pertinent facts," Kiphuth continued. "Furuhashi is now 21 years of age, is a junior this year and has another year to go at Nippon university in Tokyo. He started to swim when he was eight years old, was an outstanding school-boy competitor and many of his records are still on the books. During the war he was in war industry and as soon as it was over and pools were available, he started his practice again.

"With maturity, he has gained terrifically in power and skill with a great determination to be the world's outstanding swimmer How he has succeeded is clearly shown in the results of his swimming the past two or three years

"In the summer of 1948 on the same day of the finals in the 1,500 meters event at the Olympic games in London, Hironoshin Furuhashi in the Japanese consolation meet turned in 18:37.0 against the Olympic time of 19:18.0. This particular race was a ding-dong battle between Furuhashi and Shiro Hashizume. The pictures show there was never more than a stroke separating these two boys, and Furuhashi finally won by 7/10 of a second."

Arne Borg's Great Swim

"One of the great swims of all times was Arne Borg's 1500 meter in the European championships in Bologne in 1927. Borg in that race swam about one minute faster than he had ever done before, and he never came within a minute of that time afterwards. It was truly one of the most astounding athletic performances of all time in swimming.

"When the Japanese came to great swimming power in the late twenties and early thirties, they went after that 19:07 plus record, trying to break the mark. I have seen them over and over again on my visits out there try to do the job, but they always missed by about two seconds because Borg with a very erratic pace, cut his lap time down after 900 meters and started to go even faster. In the natural process of deceleration, any advantage the Japanese had piled up at that point was slowly lost and by the end of the race the Japanese had lost out, too.

"However, in 1938, Amano finally cracked the Borg record by doing 18:58 8, so it was really amazing in 1943 when Furuhashi turned in 18 37 0 He also bettered the world time for the 400 meter and 800 meter events during the same summer

"Nevertheless, we were not prepared for what he did in Los Angeles this past month His 1 500 meter was 18 19 0 and he also went under his marks in the 400 and 800 meters, and was anchor man in the 800 meter relay, swimming his 200 meter leg in record time He virtually threw the record book in middle-distance swimming right out the window, and it reminded me so very much of the middle distance running of the Finns, especially Nurmi, in the Paris Olympic Games in 1924!

"In doing this, Furuhashi has aroused a great deal of comment because of his unorthodox style.

He has developed tremendous facility in the water and is really the only person who can swim the Furuhashi stroke. He is quite orthodox, in a sense, in his arm stroke, but in his leg kick he uses a six-beat rhythm and only kicks three or four beats in each style, dragging his legs the rest of the time. However, the beats that he does use are executed with a snap which gives him tremendous propulsion power."

ANNOUNCE DISCOVERIES IN HORTICULTURE FIELD

Several recent discoveries and developments in the field of horticulture promise more efficiency in production and breeding, and lower prices for consumers.

Mason Reger, extension horticulturist at Iowa State College, made this observation while attending the horticulture science meeting at Milwaukee.

A Michigan State College horticulturist has developed a growth-suppressing hormone, florigen, that stimulates reproductive development. It is the opposite of 2,4-D, a growth-producing hormone. Florigen applied at various rates can produce either male or female flowers, or both. Such a chemical might be useful in hybridizing plants or in other plant breeding work.

Dr. Boyoucos, another Michigan horticulturist, has developed a moisture reader for use in irrigating greenhouse crops. The device not only reads the moisture in the ground, but by means of various gauges and switches it turns on the water and keeps it running until the correct amount is applied.

Another development is a hormone spray for apples that can be applied 20 to 30 days after blossoming to thin the fruit set.

DO YOU GET ENOUGH TO EAT?

Forty teachers and other interested persons met in Britt Wednesday to discuss findings of a nutrition survey made in Hancock County during the current school year. Mrs. Helen Lovell, Nutritionist from the State epartment of Health, reported the results of the survey, distributed educational material and showed a film "The School That Learned To Eat."

This survey was made in September in the town schools 4-8 grades. One school was especially concerned about poor dietary habits in the high school population and they too were surveyed.

We recognize that health depends upon many factors—one of these, food, plays a major part. Dental decay, life span, general fitness, absence of disease all may be related to food habits. Children were asked to keep a three-day record of just what was eaten and parents completed a form showing what foods were served their children and not eaten. We realize that some families do not have properly balanced meals, but that in some instances children refuse foods that are on the table. General Mills in Minneapolis scored the diets and gave us the following results.

20 percent of the diets rated as good; 28 percent fair; and 52 percent poor. These results are on a par with some of the poorer (economic) counties in the southern part of Iowa. We in Hancock County rank considerably lower than rural and town children in adjoining counties.

It is obvious that a great deal of education needs to be done, largely with the parents. We need to serve nutritious meals and we must make sure the children eat what is served. Parents who set examples of good dietary habits will find their children eating better balanced meals. We always try to teach more by example than words in all phases of child guidance.

The towns in the county rank from 2 percent having good diets to 52 percent in one area. Four-fifths of the pupils reported eating enough potatoes and meat. Three-fifths reported bread and cereals and one-half reported sufficient fruits, vegetables and eggs. Half of the pupils reported no servings of green and yellow vegetables during the three-day period. Just one-third reported enough milk.

Breakfast should supply one third of the day's food needs and we find 6 percent of our children received good breakfasts, 55 percent fair and 39 percent poor.

Ordinarily General Mills does not note the quanity of sweet foods consumed but perhaps because it was so high mention was made. Great quanities of pie, cake, ice cream, candy and soda pop were consumed by these young people. We know how sweet foods contribute to dental decay, and we know that children consuming sweets in abundance are passing up necessary foods.

MAY WE REPEAT—20 per cent of the diets were rated as good; 28 per cent fair and 52 per cent poor.

Teachers, pupils and parents have cooperated well to complete this study. We live in the breadbasket of the nation—but our own children are not getting enough of the right things to eat for strong, healthy bodies. It is time we worked to remedy this situaion.

NOTICE TO OUR READERS

Due to the fact that the Times was being printed on Monday and Tuesday this week in order to get the paper in the mails before Thanksgiving Day, some of the news had to be left out.

BY BOB HULLIHAN

Apparently it wasn't an easy question to answer. The highway patrolman thought back carefully over his ten years on the force; ten years of "beating" the highways, as they say.

He had been asked what single highway incident of those years still remained clearest in his mind. From one of his experience you might have expected a quick answer in the story of some particularly brutal accident; one of those tragic smashes in which five or six persons died together.

"No, it isn't that easy," the patrolman said. "You cover a fatal accident and think you'll never forget it and then there are so many more over the years that you can't remember them all.

"I suppose the thing I remember best is something a driver said to me years ago. I covered the accident he caused. Two cars were pretty well smashed and a young women was injured.

"After we got things cleared away I gave this driver a ride to the next town. He had made the mistake that caused the accident and he knew it. During the ride back he said just one thing:

"If I could only drive that last quarter mile over again that accident would never have happened."

That regretful little remark is the one best remembered by a highway patrolman who has seen more than his share of death, damage and violation on the highways.

Why does it stick in his mind? Probably because it illustrates so well that the traffic accident is creaed by the driver. In the time it takes to cover a quarter mile - perhaps 15 seconds - he makes a mistake he can correct only in retrospect after the crash.

"If I could only drive that last quarter mile over again."

DAIRY FARMING IS STILL ON DECLINE

Number Of Milk Cows Down Last Year 1 Percent, Economist Says

Dairymen continued to cut their operations this past year, but the decline in cow number was less than it was the previous year, reports Francis Kutish, extension farm economist at Iowa State College.

For the country as a whole, dairymen had 1 percent fewer milk cows on farms this summer than a year earlier. The sharpest cut came in the western Corn Belt where cow numbers were down 3 percent. Meanwhile, eastern dairymen actually had more milk cows last summer than a yeai earlier.

Beef Pays Better

Kutish says the reason for the continued decrease in dairy cow numbers traces to better returns from meat animals. Meat production has netted bigger profits to farmers than dairying. The economist thinks that the relative positions of the livestock producer and the dairyman are apt to continue about the same in the near future.

However, he looks for a rise in butter production next year. The price farmers get for butterfat will depend mainly on government price supports. This decision is up to the Secretary of Agriculture under the new price support law.

The dairymen's present problem is labor costs. Choring—its cost and the time and regularity it requires—makes labor one of the factors in the decline in western Corn Belt dairying, Kutish says.

HANCOCK COUNTY QUOTA FOR USO SET AT $1,119.11

Carl Weeks, Chairman of the Executive Committe of the USO Iowa Campaign Committee, announced today the selection of Maynard Schoneman, Garner, for Hancock County Chairman.

The citizens of Hancock County, know of the fine work of the USO did during the war to help make American men and women in service feel at home all over the world.

Now, with hundreds of thousands of young Americans again in service here and overseas, the work of this organization is as vitally needed as it ever was. Especially to fathers of girls and boys in the armed forces—news that the USO has been reactivated is good news. It is well that USO is financed entirely by private gifts, often through Communiy Chests but mainly in Iowa, by independent County, Town and City campaigns.

USO now has a total of 170 clubs, lounges and service centers in the United States and overseas. In 1950 it is planned to increase this number to 242. USO centers are located near military installations. Centers are established only on request of the military.

Veterans Hospital USO Camp Shows are bringing entertainment to 100,000 veterans in 120 military and veterans hospitals.

MARSHALL BROTHERS HAD LARGE CROWD AT FARM SALE

One of the biggest farm sales held in this community for some time was that of Herb and Bill Marshall, Monday, and which was attended by a very large crowd of buyers.

The day was a bit cold, but the bidding was lively and stock and machinery sold at a good price. B. A. Reemtsma, auctioneer kept the sale moving at a lively clip all the way through. The First National Bank of Klemme clerked the sale.

SCORE A "SAFETY" IN THE THANKSGIVING HIGHWAY GAME, CLUB SAYS

"Advance all the yardage you want in getting to your goal, but score a "safety" before the Thanksgiving holiday trip is over," said G. J. Timmermann, President of the Motor Club of Iowa, an affiliate of the American Automobile Association.

"For many," he said, "the holiday week end will be a long one, beginning at the close of work late Wednesday afternoon, November 23, and ending with the return, in some cases, early Monday morning, November 28. Not only will virtually every major mile of highway in the nation be open to traffic that week end, but millions of Americans will be making good use of their motor cars to take short vacations, visit their friends and relatives, or attend high school, college or university football games."

The AAA club executive urged drivers to observe the ethics of soberiety "and not use a gridiron victory or defeat as an excuse for drinking alcoholic beverages. Don't take a nip at the bottle just because there's a nip in the air.

"Scores of football games are scheduled for Thanksgiving day and the Saturday immediately following will draw huge crowds running into the tens of thousands. Getting to the stadium in your car means getting an early start and habitual "light jumpers" or "weavers-in-traffic" may get surprises because highway traffic is often well regulated by local and state police, and streets are often turned into one-way thoroughfares to handle the congestion.

"Drive safely; don't follow the car in front of you too closely. Avoid violations of the speed laws and obey traffic lights and stop signs. Remember that the daylight hours are much shorter than they were this past summer and that in some areas fog, rain, or sleet may come suddenly. Taking it easy, driving or walking, will give you something to be thankful for after the Thanksgiving week end has passed."

GARNER BUSINESS MEN SPONSOR TWO 4-H TRIPS TO CHICAGO EXPOSITION

The Urich Implement Company and the Goodrich & Bethke Produce have contributed $30.00 each for two 4-H club trips to the Chicago International Livestock Exposition starting on November 25th to 29th. The winners of these trips are David Smith of Kanawha and Betty Kramer of near Klemme.

Both of these young folks won their trips on their project records, both have been active in local and county 4-H club events. David Smith has served as assistant leader of his local club, has had an outstanding book for a number of years, has won the Chicago Producers Medal and the Wilson Meat Animal Medal as well as representing the county at the State Conservation Camp, the livestock judging contests and a radio broadcast.

Klemme Girl On Trip

Betty Kramer has assisted her local leaders with instruction to younger club members. Her long time expense account book received a blue ribbon at the Iowa State Fair.

These young folks will go to Chicago on the special train being promoted by KGLO Radio Station at Mason City. Officials of the radio station are making arrangements with the railroad and hotels in Chicago. Tours are also planned.

Congratulations to these two young folks and the sponsors of the trips—Chas. Bethke and Elmer Urich.

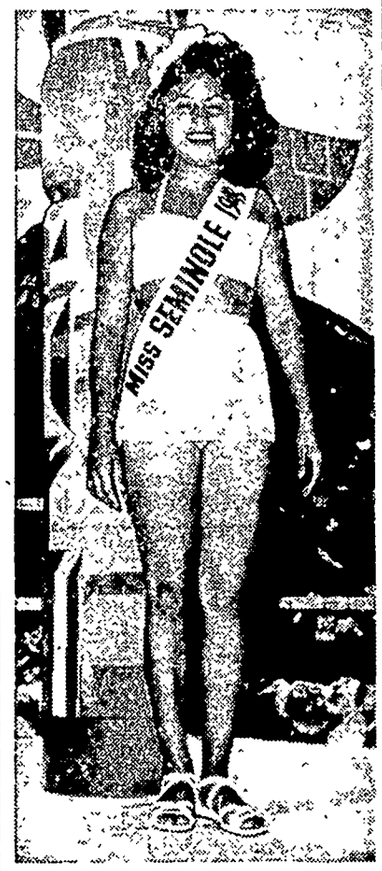
She won her title over a field of beauties from various Seminole settlements in south Florida. The contestants seemed to enjoy the innovation of appearing in bathing suits.



In their attractive, modern beauty-contest garb the hopeful Seminole beauties line up (left) for the start of the unique contest to show what a marked contrast was worked in appearance as compared with the colorful native garb they wear in the photo below.

After the coronation ceremony, the girls donned their traditional robes to pose for the photographer. Some of the girls are students at the U. S. government Indian school at Cherokee, N. ## MIRROR Of Your MIND

'Tie That Binds' Can't Show Force

By Lawrence Gould

Does living together draw relatives closer?

Answer: That depends on whether they are doing so because they want to or because they feel they have to. Under normal circumstances, people who ae willing to adjust themselves to one another become more and more attached, the more experiences and interests they share For the more you see of anyone, the more strongly you'll be apt either to like or to dislike him. But whatever you are forced to do tends to become repugnant, and there are no more virulent hatreds than those between people who "can't get away from one another."

Is a "Psychopath" inhuman?

Answer: No, writes Dr. Hulsey Cason, research psychologist in the U. S. Public Health Service. We sometimes feel that way because the cold-blooded crimes and treacheries characteristic of the psychopath are so foreign to what we like to belive are our own inclinations. But the fact is, all his symptoms are human and natural—they express the very impulses which our moral leaders recognize in us and urge us to control The psychopath is essentially a person who has grown up with no conscience Most of us fall somewhere between him and a saint.

Is your "mother tongue" ever forgotten?

Answer: No, however "rusty" you may seem to be when you attempt to speak it. A patient who claimed to have forgotten all the German he had spoken as a child began in the course of his analysis to recall events and feelings of the early years of his life As his childish fears were revived, he found himself speaking German, and unable to express his feeling adequately in English Again, many people who speak flawless English when feeling no strong emotion will unwittingly slip back into their parents' "foreign accent" when excited.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Diet and Tooth Decay Are Related

By Dr. James W. Barton

WE ARE FAMILIAR with the advertisement of a paint company which states that if you save the surface you save all. This is probably true of wood and paint, but it is not entirely true of teeth.

Research dentists state that brushing the teeth with powder or paste regularly will preserve the enamel or outside covering of the teeth. It is through the enamel that most decay or caries of the teeth occurs. Particles of food left on the teeth gradually cause a small crack or tiny cavity in the enamel, and once the enamel is broken, harmful organisms cause decay of the underlying structures. Thus it is good teeth insurance to brush the teeth.

However, all decay of teeth does not occur from the break in enamel or surface covering of the teeth; the teeth must be kept strong by good nourishing blood from good nourishing food. Thus several years ago, the Drs. Agnew, from experiments in the foreign mission field, were able to prevent decay of teeth by the use of "protective" foods, especially milk and other dairy products and fruit and green vegetables.

Because there has been some controversy as to the benefits of nourishing foods preventing tooth decay, some information comes from Dr. Genevieve Stearns, State University of Iowa, in the Journal of Dental Research. These research workers found that before the full benefit of a nourishing diet could be estimated the child should be well nourished.

They believe that some of the nourishing diets to prevent decay are not apparently successful because the patient is in a run down, poorly nourished condition and often many months must elapse before the child becomes well nourished. At the State University, Iowa, keeping children under strictly controlled diets, complete stop of decay occurred with diets high in sugar and diets low in sugar but always with enough of the building foods, especially dairy products which are readily absorbed into the blood.

In other words it is the state of nourishment of the body when the protective foods are given that is the important point as far as tooth decay is concerned.

So Wilson Held Up the War For Fast Shorthand Lesson

By BILLY ROSE

During the closing days of World War I, I took the President of the United States out of play for 15 minutes. I did it with my little shorthand pencil.

At the time, I was working for the War Industries Board in Washington as a stenographer, and running out to get chocolate sodas for Mr. Baruch, its chairman.

A few days before the Armistice, a Board executive handed me a letter and told me to deliver it to the proper party. The proper party was Woodrow Wilson.

The White House that day was a jumble of senators, Cabinet members, ambassadors and important brass. News of the Armistice was expected any hour, and the tension was like the last few seconds of the Dempsey-Firpo fight.

I handed the letter to one of Mr Wilson's secretaries, and was asked to wait in case of a reply. A few minutes later the secretary returned, looking puzzled. "The President would like to see you," he said.

Billy Rose

I got trembly inside. I was pushing 18 at the time—fresh out of the East Side, and also plain fresh. But my dealings with Presidents had been limited to the one I had seen on dollar bills.

Mr. Wilson smiled when he saw me. "I understand you're quite a shorthand writer," was his greeting.

MY TREMBLES vanished. I knew the President was a shorthand writer of sorts—the tachygraphy magazines were always bragging about it. "I hear you're pretty good yourself, Mr. President," I blurted out.

Mr. Wilson blushed prettily. "I don't get much chance to practice these days," he said, like a fisherman apologizing for a six-inch trout. "Mr. Baruch tells me you can write 200 words a minute. I wonder if you'd give me a little demonstration."

He handed me a pad and a pencil, and picked up a New York newspaper on his desk. Then, in his clipped, precise speech, he read one of the editorials at about 150 words a minute. When he had finished, the President said, "Now let's hear you read it back."

Well, as every stenographer knows, it's the reading back that counts. I shot the editorial back at him a good deal faster than he had dictated it. And then I started at the bottom of the page and read the editorial backwards.

Wilson chuckled. He asked me questions about Gregg shorthand—he was a Pitman writer. By this time, I was patronizing him a little—the caddie who shoots a 61 isn't self-conscious when he discusses mashie shots with a Rockefeller.

I PICKED UP the New York paper and handed the pad and pencil to Mr. Wilson. "I wonder if you'd mind writing for me, Mr. President," I said.

Wilson rubbed his glasses on his sleeve. "Don't go too fast," he warned.

I read the editorial at about one hundred words a minute, and then asked him to read it back. When I told him he had made no mistakes, the President sighed like a kid who has just finished playing 'The Elves' Waltz' for Paderewski.

I picked up his notes. "If you don't mind, sir," I said, "I'd like to keep them."

Woodrow Wilson reached for my shorthand notes. "We'll exchange," he said.

I walked out of the White House and floated back to my office via the rooftops.

I had no sooner gotten to my desk than the phone rang. "Mr. Baruch wants to see you," said his secretary.

"Pretty good for Delancey street" I said to myself as I walked down the hall. "Woodrow Wilson and Bernie Baruch in one hour."

The girl in Mr. Baruch's office looked up as I bounced in.

"The boss wants you to get him a chocolate soda," she said.

TO A CONVALESCENT

I AM praying for you, friend, while you are waiting
The long hour through for strength to come again.
God grant you patience that you may wait bravely;
God grant you courage for these days, and when
The healing comes, as come it will, I pray,
Health may be yours for many a useful day.

In the meantime, rest, and know the everlasting
Arms are close about you, that they will Sustain you, and a gentle voice commands you
"Know that I am God, be still, be still."
And heeding him, his healing touch will mend
Your weary heart and mind. God bless you, friend.

BAYING THE MOON

By Richard H. Wilkinson

THE ALPHA, Alpha, Alpha, Alpha fraternity at Boynton university is responsible for the fate of Percival Oakes. It happened this way.

During his freshman year the AAAA's pledged Percy to membership, and initiated him into the mystic three R's. (Rites, Rituals and Regulations.) Percy took it like a man. When ordered to imitate a dog howling at the moon, he did his level best. The result was astonishingly successful. Percy surprised even himself

3-Minute Fiction

The brother AAAA's cheered loudly and clamored for encores. Percy obliged a second time and a third He was immensely pleased with the applause and at the attention he attracted.

The next day, en route to class, Percy was stopped by a grave-faced sophomore and asked to give his imitation of a dog howling at the moon. For a moment he hesitated, conscious of a circle of grinning faces that had silently formed about him, faintly resentful of the fact that the brothers of the AAAA had made public the discovery of his hidden genius. He glanced once more into the grave face of the youth who had accosted him and then threw back his head and bayed lustily.

A mighty roar of applause greeted the rendition. There were cries of "More!" "More!" Percival obliged a second time and then once more.

Returning to college in the fall, Percy had completely put from his mind the cause and fact of his last year's popularity. There were other and more important things to occupy his interest. He was now a sophomore, with all the rights and liberties and sensations of importance that are synonymous with that lofty position. Best of all, he was now unhampered by the 30-odd freshmen rules that had last year cramped his activities.

He looked at the moon and from his throat there came . . . rich tones of a baying hound.

One sophomore caused Percy's brain to swim. Here was loveliness and intelligence and femininity all combined. Unhappily, it took him a fortnight to negotiate an introduction. Her name was Delia Winter, and she was as popular as she was beautiful. This was discouraging and disheartening. Percy could offer nothing; she had her pick of the college.

IT WAS one of the Saturday night informal dances at the college gym. They had been dancing together for perhaps 60 seconds when Delia looked up at him and said: "Aren't you the boy who can imitate a dog howling at the moon?" Her eyes twinkled.

Percy reddened to the ears. He felt a chill, a horrible apprehension. "No," he bleated. "No! Whoever told you that is crazy!"

Delia didn't press the subject, but Percy knew he was sunk. He let a month slip by before he could conjure enough courage to ask for a date, felt pitifully grateful when she assented.

Within the following month he kept five dates with Delia, but it was always the same; the "thing" was always there between them. He thought she must think him ridiculous. She pitied him.

During the intermission at the Dartmouth victory dance, Percy and Delia strolled out onto the now dry ice-skating rink and sat down on the bulwark and looked up at the moon. Because of his great and hopeless love Percy was moody, unhappy, thoughtful. Suddenly he was startled by the petulant tone of his beloved.

"I think it must be wonderful," she said.

"What must?" asked Percival.

"To be able to imitate things. I mean, anyone can play football, or learn to skate, or dance well, but it takes genius to be able to imitate things."

"Do—you mean that?"

"Why, of course I do! I've always admired people who—have creative ability. Genius. Of course I mean it!"

She looked squarely at him, and the last trace of doubt vanished from Percy's soul like mist from a river bed before a rising sun He stood up, he threw back his head, he looked at the moon and from his throat there came the clear, deep, rich tones of a baying hound

Star Dust STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

BY INEZ GERHARD

WHEN DEAN MARTIN and Jerry Lewis (NBC Friday evenings,) teamed up for the first time, at an Atlantic City night club, they were so unfunny that the manager warned them they'd better pick up fast or they'd be out of work. Jerry says they used the old formula—"All you gotta do to get a laugh is kill yourself." While Dean sang, Jerry rattled dishes, threw food, took up collections among the audience. They insulted the patrons, who howled with laughter and begged for more. That routine paid off; they have clicked in pictures ("My Friend Irma,") on the air and at night clubs, now make about $10,000 a week.

Betsy Blair decided, when she married Gene Kelly, that her marriage was going to be more important than her career. She was well set on Broadway, but she gave up the stage to be with him in Hollywood. So she's very happy over being signed for an important role in "Mystery Street," at the studio where he works. His next musical is "Summer Stock."

Haide Goransen, the Swedish model whose picture was on the cover of a recent copy of "Life," has been deluged with movie offers as a result. Producers Robert Smith and Robert Briskin made plans for her to take a screen test in Stockholm; Fox and Universal executives also approached her. She says she'd like to come to Hollywood, but it must be on her honeymoon.

Don MacLaughlin, "Dr. Jim Brent" on "Road of Life," wonders how he dared do it—his first audition was also his first appearance in a studio and his first broadcast. And it was "live," heard by several thousand radio listeners.

Betty Clark, ABC's 13-year-old blind soprano, has been the subject of more than a dozen magazine articles this past year, and has managed to mention her singing idol in almost every interview. He's Vic Damone, once a Brooklyn neighbor of Betty's. Vic and Betty are close friends and never miss a chance to boost each other's talents.

Spokesman of God

Lesson for November 27, 1949

GOD MAKES USE of strange characters. What shall we think of a preacher who tried to beg off from being a preacher? What can we make of a man who actually reproached God for forcing him into the ministry? How shall we rate a man who in time of war urged his own nation to surrender, who was believed by almost nobody, who was repudiated by his own class and even his own family? What can we say of a man who was often in hot water with the city authorities, who spent months of his time in jail, who was called subversive, and who never got along with the established religion of his time?

Dr. Foreman

The prophet Jeremiah was that man; yet posterity honored him. His own generation thought him a liar But some then knew, as we know today, that he was a teller of God's truth, a spokesman of God.

Was he a pessimist?

WE KNOW (Jer. 1) that Jeremiah did not wish to be a prophet in the first place, though unlike Isaiah he shrank back not from a sense of sin but because he thought of himself as a mere child

We know (chap 20) that at times he was thoroughly discouraged about himself, and even cursed the day he was born. It is also true that in the last war waged by his little country of Judah before it was smashed, his advice from beginning to end was "Surrender."

No wonder people thought him a pessimist, a calamity-howler But before we call him such names we must remember two things. First is, that his unwillingness to be a prophet, and the fact that so to speak he hated the job, marks a vital fact. he, perhaps even more than other prophets, sensed the difference between his own ideas and what God was saying through him.

Even when what the Lord said was not what they themselves would have wished to say, they spoke for the Lord nevertheless. The other thing to remember is that when everybody wants to believe a pleasant lie, and a man comes along telling the unpleasant truth, he is not a pessimist, he is simply stating facts.

Jeremiah stood by the facts as God gave him insight to see them. If they jailed him for it, he could not help that; but they could not shut his mouth nor close his eyes.

Was he a patriot?

JEREMIAH was constantly accused of acts and attitudes which today might be called "subversive," though he dearly loved his country. This was because he dared to rebuke the ambitions of his country's leaders.

They said: Our country shall be free! But Jeremiah knew it would not be free. They said: Our king will conquer! Jeremiah knew he would end his days a prisoner. Jeremiah was unpopular, to put it mildly, because he advised his country to take the only place among the nations it could take—an humble one.

Then, as now, many persons think that patriotism means believing yours is the perfect country. If anyone points to injustice in our land, some one may yell, "Deport him!" But Jeremiah showed what is a true patriot. He is not necessarily the man who approves all the foreign policies of his nation (Jeremiah approved not one), nor the man who speaks only good of his country and his people.

The best patriot is the person who, seeing his country as God sees it, will dare to speak out against evil wherever he finds it.

A Way to Know God

JEREMIAH knew God well, and the trouble with his contemporaries was that they did not know God. But Jeremiah did not say: "Know God by becoming a prophet like me," for he knew that only a few are called to be prophets. Neither did he say, "Go to church oftener," for you can see in chap. 7 what he thought of the Temple of his time.

He pointed to the good king Josiah (chap. 13). That king had found God, not in a mystic vision like Jeremiah's, not in burnt offerings and sacrifices, but in the doing of justice, looking out for the exploited, caring for the helpless, seeing that justice was done.

VEGETABLE CROP REFUSE NOT SAFE FOR COMPOST

Gardeners may lose more than they stand to gain by spreading compost on their gardens if they don't make a wise choice of materials for the compost.

That's the reason behind the recommendation by A. F. Sherf, extension plant pathologist at Iowa State College, to turn crop refuse this fall to head off diseases to next year's crop. Debris of a susceptible crop harbors fungi causing the leaf spots of many vegetables, fruits and vegetables, fruits and flowers.

The value of organic matter and nutrients that might be gained by composing vegetable crop residues is too little to take the chance of providing fungi a place to overwinter, according to Sherf.

Rotting of the material doesn't destroy fungi. Neither is there any practical method of destroying fungi by treating compost piles, according to Sherf.

Safe materials to use for composts include grass clippings or straw. Tree leaves may be used if removed from the area of the trees and put in definite piles to rot over winter. Fungi that attack trees are not the same ones that attack vegetable crops. However, if the leaves are left near trees, chances of trouble from fungi attacking trees next year will be multiplied.

Sherf feels that burning crop residues in gardens is justified from a disease control standpoint. Diseases build up more in gardens than in other crop fields, according to Sherf. In general, garden plots occupy the same area year after year, and often crops are not rotated within the garden as are field crops.

Also, Sherf makes this contrast between farm fields and gardens. Gardening is highly intensified farming. Area is usually small and the vegetable crops often occupy the area for a short time, making it more practical to build up organic matter content of the soil by some other means, such as use of green manure crops, than by using crop residues. He sees no conflict between this recommendation and that of agronomists not to burn cornstalks and other crop residues.

DO YOU KNOW—

TOOLS OF THE KITCHEN TRADE?

Some kitchen tools get a lot of use; others just take up space. Some are well worth the money you put into them; others aren't even worth the quarter you may have spent. Here's looking at our kitchen equipment!

One homemaker who remodeled her kitchen not so long ago, found out that she could dispense with two bushel basketfuls of unused kitchen utensils.

True, she had accumulated them over the years, but when it came right down to figuring out whether or not she had made good use of them, she decided that they had been "star boarders" just about long enough. Not that it wasn't good equipment! It was. She just had rounded up more utensils and kitchen gadgets than she needed for the meal preparation habits in her household.

So let's look at our kitchens in the same way. What utensils are needed? And what should we expect of them? If they are to have cupboard space "for free," they should serve a useful purpose.

Modernize Utensil Supply

Home management specialists at Iowa State College have some ready pointers. First of all, they say, the modernizing of kitchen ranges mean that cooking utensils can be somewhat different. Double boilers, for example, may not be so important since range temperatures are now much simpler to control.

Here are some features to look for in those utensils you use for top range cooking. Be sure the utensil will heat up quickly, retain the heat so that your cooking can be continued on reduced heat to save cooking costs. Flat-bottom utensils that fit the burner or unit on he elecric or gas range are important.

Make sure these utensils have straight sides and well fitting lids. Rounded or tapering sides slow down cooking time.

Kettles with a dull finish on the bottom absorb heat more quickly. If they have highly polished sides, losses of heat through radiation will be less.

Ever set a large kettle on a small burner? That's asking for trouble. The heat from the kettle may injure the enamel surface of the range where it rests on it.

Check Over Utensils

What about your oven utensils? Do they measure up to standard for baking food "to a turn?" There are many different kinds of oven utensils—glass, enamelware, aluminum, earthenware, tin, and alloys of metals, and they all have different heat absorbing and reflecting powers. Too shiny surfaces reflect heat from the surrounding heated air of the oven. Therefore, they do not bake as well as duller surfaces. Aluminite, a dull finish on aluminum, helps this situation. Darkened bright tin also helps.

In general, lightweight utensils heat rapidly, but lose heat quickly. They are fine for cookie sheets.

Don't buy utensils in sets if you can help it. Some you will never use. Get them one at a time, each one planned for a particular purpose. You'll be surprised how few you really need.

Choose utensils that may serve more than one purpose. Look for those that are easy to handle (won't burn you when you take hold of them), wash easily and have good fitting lids.

New gadgets, say the specialists need to be judged carefully. Be sure when you buy them that they are really workable.

JUNIOR HI NEWS

We have been very busy the past week taking our six weeks tests. We had tests in every subject except English.

Last Thursday we had our physical training tests. Each student showed the rest of us how to do at least one exercise.

We were all quite surprised Friday morning when we found out that Mr. Juhl had left his voice at Britt at the ball game Thursday night.

Friday we held an election for a name for Junior Hi boys' and girls' basketball teams. The boys were called the Junior Hi Rockets and the girls were called the Junior Hi Rockettes.

Friday afternoon we had a music class. Darlene Roul played the piano and Janice Swanson lead the music class.

NAILS, METAL IN BARN ARE HAZARD TO CATTLE

Pick up nails and small pieces of metal dropped in the cow barn or around hay bunks as soon as they fall, advises Dr. K. W. Stouder, extension veterinarian at Iowa State College.

Bits of hardware swallowed by cattle may result in her losses. Old nails, screws, small bolts and guarantee tag hooks from feed bags are the chief causes of "hardware disease" in cattle. These materials may puncture a cow's stomach, work forward between the lungs and lodge in or near the heart causing death.

Symptoms of trouble caused by pieces of metal include abnormal pulse rate, poor digestion, getting off feed, fast breathing, and a drop in milk production. When these symptoms occur, a prompt call for a veterinarian may save the cow's life.

Stouder says that trouble from accumulations of hair in the rumen of young cattle also can be prevented. "Hair balls" are especially common in the digestive trait of young calves that are penned together and do a lot of sucking of tails and ears.

He says by finding out if anything is lacking in the animal's diet, serious effects of hair accumulations might be headed off. Since the deficiency is often a lack of a rare or "trace" mineral, Stouder recommends letting cattle have plenty of minerals and salt.

OIL HEATER WORKS BEST IF DRAFT IS SET RIGHT

Winter comfort and economy will more than pay for the time and trouble necessary to set the draft regulator correctly on oil heaters, says Dale Hull, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College.

He explains that the draft regulator controls the chimney draft so that just the right amount of air to give sufficient combustion gets to the flame. It takes the place of the old-fashioned hand damper.

If the stove burns with a lazy smoky fire, the draft should be increased by moving the adjusting weight on the damper forward. The heater that burns with a roaring white flame needs to have the draft cut down by moving the weight back.

Hull says to make sure the regulator blade swings freely at the slightest touch or breath of air If soot accumulates on the blade, it should be brushed off immediately. Soot indicates a poor combustion.

Excess carbon on the burner or a smoky flame stems from any of four different causes, says the agricultural engineer. There may not be enough draft, the heater may not be sitting level, the burner may be set high or low, or the fuel may be poor Insufficient draft is the most frequent source of trouble, but burning at a rate that is too low for the flame or the bottom of the firepot keeps the heater from working well, particularly in mild weather.

The pot-type burner is somewhat sensitive to fuel characteristics, and Hull recommends using either the regular range oil or stove oil. Kerosene is a satisfactory fuel but is higher in price. Non-volatile tractor fuels are produced by a different refining process and may if used in a heater cause trouble in producing heavy carbon deposits in the burner

RURAL YOUNG PEOPLE HELD MEETING AT BRITT

The monthly meeting of the Hancock County Rural Young People was held Monday, the 14th of November at the Central States Basement in Britt.

The meeting was called to order and roll call taken. There were twenty-nine members present, two visitors and one guest Our new business consisted of electing officers for the coming year They were as follows. President, Glenn Sloan, Vice-President, Arvin Larson, Secretary, Mildred Goll; Treasurer, John Loebig and Reporter, Betty Pannhoff. It was also decided to have our meeting for December one week ahead of the regular Monday. Meeting and Christmas party will be held the 5th of December.

After the new business the group was organized and tested on their skill in taking gum wrappers off with large gloves on. They were permitted to keep the gum.

We then took up the old business. Paul Henderson was trying to talk somebody into entering the talk meet at Des Moines but nobody can talk as fast as he can so we gave up the idea. Catherine Cosgriff was elected delegate to the National Convention in Chicago.

Catherine Cosgriff and Evelyn Coulter led the program for the evening. Groups demonstrated social courtesies and techniques. Games were played and delicious lunch was served by the committee.

I almost forgot.! How did those ice cubes keep Arvin?

HOGS TURNED IN FIELD NEED GOOD MANAGING

Hogs that have been turned into the field to clean up corn still need the good housing and management that they would require under any other conditions, E. L. Quaife, animal husbandman at Iowa State College, reminds Iowa farmers.

For this time of year, he recommends that hogs be provided with a clean, dry house that is well ventilated, but free from drafts.

Quaife points out that flu is always a danger in hogs that don't have adequate sleeping quarters at this time of year. In view of winter weather ahead, he says it's especially important that hogs foraging out in the field in the next few weeks have a comforable house.

YOUNG MARRIED GROUP IS MAKING PLANS

Young married farm folks in Hancock County are now completing plans for their series of winter meetings. The discussion topics are being chosen and meeting dates are being set, according to County Farm Bureau Fieldman, Paul Shurts

Hancock County was represented at a regional young married folks meeting this week at the YMCA in Mason City, by Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Nuenring, Mr and Mrs. Wm Weis, Mr and Mrs. Don Frein and County Extension Director Paul Henderson and Home Economist Elsie Ma Van Wert

The Young married group is not a formal organization, However, it is an informal group that is sponsored by the Farm Bureau. Any young farm couple in the county is eligible to attend the meetings, which are designed for recreation and education. Immediately after this meeting, plans will be made by the local group for the series of meetings.

LAST FLING

Lyle Hawn of neary Grundy Center has a team of 27-year old horses, too old to work and too much a part of the Hawn family to destroy. Recently, Mr. Hawn had a job which the old horses cold do; that is, pull a wagon for a neighbor as he gathered his "down" corn. The two old-timers made the most of their last fling; they ran away and were chased down by automobile.

UNDERSTANDING IS KEY TO WISE DISCIPLINE

Sometimes when parents are confronted with the unthinking, often dangerous, escapades of their youngsters, they wonder whether they should "lay down the law" or "let experience be the teacher."

Many times they are left with the bewildering question, "What should I have done?" To this family relations authorities of Iowa State College say harsh discipline at home or its opposite wherein the teen-age boy or girl runs rough-shod over the well-intentioned council of parents, isn't the wisest answer in the long run when it comes to helping the youngsters meet up with the realities of everyday living.

Children who are reared in homes where they are made to "toe the mark or else" often lack initiative and judgement, or lack normal and necessary confidence and self-respect. And sometimes, say the specialists, they try to evade authority through contrariness, deceit or open rebellion.

On the other hand, the youngster who gets his own way all the time may become the victim of his own whims, disregard the rights of others and have a hard time getting along with the folks around him.

Wisest discipline comes with mutual understanding and affection at home, they explain. It is an "each for all and all for each" feeling wherein the young person learns to make his own decisions based on consideration of the rights of others.

WIDE IRONING BOARD HANDY CHRISTMAS GIFT

Here's a tip to high school manual arts students—one of the handsomest presents a fellow can make for his Mom for Christmas is a wide ironing board.

Not, of course, but what Mom might like a pretty pair of hose or a bottle of perfume, but when it comes to making things easier for her around the house, the wide ironing board is one answer.

It's easy to make, say Iowa State College home management specialists who recommend it for use when ironing men's shirts or large flat pieces. The wide board is made of three-quarter-inch plywood. It should be made 20 inches wide and nearly as long as a standard ironing board.

When Mom gets ready to use it, she just lays it on top of her standard board. It's easy to move and store. Pad it with a silence cloth or an old blanket, only make the pad 8 inches longer and 8 inches wider than the board and tack it in place with tacks. Then make a removable cover of unbleaced muslin or drill, or bleached sacks. About 2½ to 2 and one-third yards of material should do it. This length permits turning the cover under the board where it can be tied on with tape or heavy cord.

Directions for making the ironing board are available from the county agricultural extension office or from the Bulletin Office, Iowa State College.

Primitive Hunters Roamed the West Before Christ's Birth

NEW YORK.—Evidence that a primitive group of hunters roamed the American west thousands of years before the birth of Christ has been offered by a group of scientists.

Dr. Loren Eiseley of the University of Pennsylvania said the site of the ancient camp was near Cody, Wyo., and that it probably dates back to between 5,000 and 12,000 years before Christ.

Reporting the discovery, he termed it one of the most important ever made in connection with the culture of the Yuma, a nomadic group that disappeared nearly two centuries ago as a cultural unit. They were among the earliest known inhabitants of the new world.

Dr. Eiseley estimated that the ancient camp site covered about 600 square feet of a terrace overhanging Sage creek, five miles northeast of Cody. The valuable deposit of tools, weapons, and food remains were preserved through the centuries by dusty desert sands now covering the camp site to a depth of about 10 inches.

The Yuma were foot hunters who roved the high plains of the American West in search of bison. Evidences of their existence have been found before, Dr. Eiseley said, but never so extensively or in a deposit that may enable scientists to fix more accurately the period in which they lived.

For example, he said, from the bison bones on the site it may be possible to determine whether the Yuma lived before certain types of bison became extinct late in the Ice Age. No human bones were found, Dr. Eiseley said.

There were numerous "Yuma points," delicately fashioned flints that apparently tipped Yuma lances. It is believed the Yuma did not use bow and arrow.

Mexico City Discards Afternoon Siesta Hours

MEXICO CITY. — Because it was found that the closing of grocery stores and small variety stores from 2 to 4 o'clock each afternoon was inconveniencing the poorer classes, Mexico City has abolished the afternoon siesta closing hours.

The stores also were given permission to remain open later at night than heretofore..

Another disadvantage of the 2 to 4 closing hours, according to the shopkeepers, was that a few store owners were able, by bribing policemen on the beat, to stay open during the official closing period, thus taking business away from the more honest competitors.

Italian Colony Unhappy On Tierra del Fuego

BUENAS AIRES.—All is not going well with one of the world's most unusual immigrant resettlement schemes—the colony of 1,000 Italian immigrants on the island of Tierra del Fuego, which forms the southern side of the strait of Magellan.

Last year the Peron government closed down the country's notorious prison colony there, shifted its inmates to the mainland, erected additional housing and made way for the bodily transfer of an entire factory from Italy to that antarctic outpost.

Since the first enthusiastic welcome given the hardy pioneers by the press here, news from the colony has been slim. In recent weeks, however, several newspapers, including a local Italian periodical, have reported that the rigors of readjustment have resulted in considerable disillusionment.

The peasant element among the settlers has taken well to the island's sheep-raising, its chief industry, according to these reports. But the workers, many of them in skilled categories, are said to be ill-prepared for the rigorous climate. The temperature occasionally drops to 15 below zero.

Major discontent has arisen over the wage-and-employment policies adopted by the Bolsani corporation, which was transplanted from Italy. Promised a wage of three pesos hourly (60 cents), the workers complain that while this might be adequate in a more temperate climate, it is inadequate on the island.

Put Skunks to Sleep If You Would Move Them

TROY, OHIO.—If a family of skunks took up residence in your basement window, how would you evict them?

Mrs. Coleman Allen, a widow who lives on the outskirts of Troy, had that problem.

Her first idea was to have the skunks shot. But she quickly dropped that one when a neighbor explained that the animals could retaliate with an odor that would drive her from the house.

Five boys, who heard radio station WPTW's account of Mrs. Allen's problem, provided a simple solution.

They put the skunks to sleep with ether and carried them away.

HUSTLERS MEET

The regular meeting of the Avery-Twin Lake Hustlers was held at the home of Byron Heginger on Monday night, November 14th.

Leonard Book and Charles Jackson from Garner were at this meeting. The latter showed many very interesting movies of his travels.

Mr. Book talked about filling out our record books and gave some good advice about them.

The club decided to have a skating party at Forest City this Friday night with the Avery-Twin Lake girls invited to attend.

The next meeting will be at the home of Larry and Kenny Langlitz on December 8th.

LIVE IN BUS

The Harold Kessler family of Center Point knows all about "life in a Greyhound bus." They are now living in such a vehicle. Originally in the Greyhound service, the bus was later purchased by an orchestra leader and was bought by the Kesslers last spring. It is now wired for electrictiy. Cooking is done on bottled gas.

NEWS IN MEAL-MAKING—

PORK IS PLENTIFUL

For breakfast dinner, or supper, holidays or everyday, pork is going to play a major role for many months to come. It's plentiful, it's nutritious, and the cost is reasonable. What more could a meal-maker ask!

Pork is plentiful right now and it's going to be so for several months to come.

That's good news in any home-maker's budget-wise planning. And it's good news, says Margaret Kagarice, extension nutritionist, Iowa State College, from the stand point of health. Pork, she says, is a very rich source of the B-vitamins, thiamine, niacin and riboflavin, and pork liver is "tops" for furnishing iron.

So here's a food the whole family enjoys eating—back on the market in abundance. It's good-quality pork, too, a factor decided by last year's excellent feed which went into the pig crop.

Many Recipes

With the stage all set for featuring pork in many meals, what are some tempting ways to fix it? For breakfast you might feature link sausages with pineapple rings, hot corn bread, butter and coffee. Simmer the sausages in a frying pan until they are done. Then remove the cover and let the sausages brown. Dredge the pineapple rings in seasoned flour and brown them in sausage fat. It's a wonderful combination—just right for a chilly winter's morn.

Ever try French-fried ham sandwiches? The idea is excellent for lunch time. Place a slice of boiled ham between two slices of bread and fasten with toothpicks. Dip the sandwich into a mixture of 2 eggs and ½ cup milk. Cook in deep fat until the sandwiches are a golden brown.

With this royal fare serve cream of spinach soup, celery curls, a fresh fruit salad and sugar cookies.

Barbecued spareribs are a sure winner when you plan a man-sized meal. Serve them with steamed rice, a combination fresh vegetable salad, hot rolls, butter and a favorite dessert. Don't overlook a barbecue sauce to bring out the flavor of the ribs.

Buy a roast pork loin for Sunday dinner. It's a perennial favorite, and you're sure to find the quality good this year. Besides there may be enough left over for a pork and noodle casserole dish on Monday. It will save on the everyday budget!

Pork chops are always welcome news, but try them stuffed for a change. Those extra thick chops will suit the purpose. Choose the stuffing recipe you like best, or try a corn stuffing made with 1 cup of cream-style corn, 10 soda crackers or ½ cup fine dry bread crumbs, salt and pepper, 1 tsp. chopped celery and 2 tablespoons minced green pepper.

Don't overlook the possibilities of using pork shoulder cubes on skewers or pork liver and bacon loaf. For an economical meat cut—Boston butt is a good choice. Serve it with pineapple juice, cinnamon apples, riced potatoes, gravy, buttered peas, lettuce, and custard pudding.

Cook Thoroughly

One thing to remember about cooking pork, Miss Kagarice reminds, is that it should always be cooked thoroughly. Cook it slowly, she says, and at a moderate temperature. Then that rich pork flavor everyone likes will be at its fullest. Be sure the pork is done throughout so that not a trace fo pink meat remains. The reason is that pork often contains a small parasite which must be killed in the cooking.

Always braise pork chops, steaks, tenderloin, heart, liver and kidneys. Broiling is usually too fast and the flavor is lost.

4-H GIRLS RECEIVE MEDALS FOR OUTSTANDING PROJECT WORK

National 4-H Dairy Foods Demonstration medals will go to Cecilia Hadacek, 16, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Frank Hadacek, Britt and Rachel Brown, 15 daughter of Mr and Mrs. Emery Brown, Garner members of the champion county dairy demonstration team.

Beverly Haberkamp of Liberty Busy Bees entered her longtime record book in the county contest. She has canned 514 cans of food during this year of the Foods and Nutrition project.

Mercedes Formanek of Madison Livewires entered her longtime record book in the county contest on Food Preparation Her record shows that she prepared and served approximately 900 meals serving a total of 5,109 people, baked 268 pies, cakes, etc. and 214 dozen cupcakes, cookies, rolls etc.

Eleanor Jakoubek of Madison Livewires entered her longtime record in the county contest on freezing Foods. Her record shows that she prepared 700 lbs. of food for the locker.

The dairy demonstration team, Cecilia Hadacek and Rachel Brown of the Garfield Lively Workers Club entered their record books in the county contest to win the Dairy Food Medals. Their demonstration was on "Clever Custards." These girls gave their demonstration at public appearances 19 times with a total of 347 people attending.

The Hancock County 4-H girls are proud to recognize 4-H girls who have worked hard to keep their longtime records up to date by completing each year's record carefully.

SAVED

Bob Markee of Independence prevented a near-tragedy on the Wapsipinicon river near there recently, when a boat-load of persons crashed into a railway bridge piling and upset. Among the occupants were Mrs. Holgate and her nine month lod infant daughter Stevie. Mrs. Holgate could not swim and she and the baby were picked up by Mr. Markee in his power boat. The infant recovered; didn't even catch cold.

Thanksgiving 1949

THANKSGIVING DAY rolls around again and all of us should be remindful of the many things for which we should be thankful. . . . above all we should be thankful for living in a free country . . . we should be thankful for being a part of our fine community of good schools and churches, fine farms and homes.

And once again we at the Creamery want to express our sincere thanks to our patrons and our friends for their patronage and loyalty extended to us during the past year. Without your fine spirit of cooperation it would not be possible for us to forge ahead.

This is YOUR cooperative and with your continued support we will continue to grow in the years ahead, and our Thanksgiving will all be happy ones.

Move over

A VACATIONIST out on a hike, passed an insane asylum and struck up a conversation with an inmate who was "painting" the fence with a brush and a bucket of straw. The inmate explained that he really wasn't crazy. Just passing the time there.

In an effort to augment the conversation the inmate pointed up the hill and said, "See that tree up there? There's a lot of gold buried under it and when I get time I'm going to dig it up."

The following day the vacationist came up to the inmate who was still "painting" the fence with his bucket of straw, and asked casually, "Say, oldtimer, which tree did you say had all that gold buried under it?"

The inmate looked down at the vacationist's calloused hands and remarked, "Better get another pail of straw and join me."

THE PLACE WAS FAMILIAR

A rather pompous county official, inspecting the local insane asylum, suddenly remembered that he had to make an important telephone call. He experienced all sorts of delay and difficulty in getting his call through, and snapped at the obviously unconcerned telephone operator, "Look here, girl, do you know who I am?"

"No, sir," she answered calmly, "but I know where you are."

Carried Responsibility

The personnel manager was interviewing a young lady for a bookkeeping position. "You understand, of course, young lady," the manager affirmed, "that we are looking for a responsible person to fill this position."

"Oh, I'm responsible," the young woman replied eagerly. "On my last job, every time there was something they called a discrepancy, they always said I was responsible."

Wasted Effort

Henry Peck: "Just my luck."

Friend: "What is the matter now?"

Peck: "I promised my wife I'd be home by 10 o'clock last night."

Friend: "Couldn't you make it?"

Peck: "Yes; I did even better. I got in just at 9:45, but she was sound asleep, and I failed to get any credit. I might just as well have stayed out with you boys."

Never Scot Free

The merry old knight of the road stood at the kitchen door with his battered hat in his hand.

"Come in," said the kind-hearted lady, "and I'll give you some food."

In a few minutes the tramp was up to his elbows in a hefty meal. As he ate, the old lady remarked:

"I suppose your life has been full of trials."

"Yessum," he sighed. "And the worst of it is that I was always convicted."

UNCHANGED

Entering the house just as her husband put down the telephone, the wife said:

"Whom were you talking to, dear?"

"Your mother called," he replied.

"And how is she?"

Wearily he answered, "About the same— unfair to meddling."

NEVER FAILS

"Say, Bill, I've got a wonderful scheme for making money fast!"

"Going to let me in on it?"

"Absolutely. All you've got to do, is to glue it to the floor."

Taking No Chances

Rural Guide: "Why didn't you shoot at that flock of birds as they flew by?"

Urban Hunter: "You see, this is a brand new gun and I was afraid I would strain it by shooting at such a distant target before it is broken in."

Only Choice

A much-married man was trying to chisel some free advice from a lawyer friend. "Isn't there some way in which a man can avoid paying alimony?" he inquired.

"Yes," replied the lawyer. "Two. He can stay single or stay married."

By GRANTLAND RICE

As he turned and he spoke to me—
"This is the greatest year I've known,"
He said with a look of glee.
"This is my finest season yet,
Whatever the old grads say,
And I say my prayers as I go to bed
For what fate's sent my way."

Grantland Rice

"Whaddya mean,"
I said to him,
"With all those no good bums—
You've lost five games and you'll lose some more
Before December comes."
"I know that, pal, but remember this
He said, with his eyes aflame—
"I don't have to play Minnesota, kid—
And I don't have to meet Notre Dame."

What Price Big Men?

On a recent football excursion with Gene Tunney, Bernard Gimbel and General Reed Kilpatrick a slight argument arose as to the value of weight and size. It was Bernie Gimbel's idea that a player weighing 190 pounds was big enough for anybody.

"How much better football players do you want than Doak Walker of SMU or Charley Justice of North Carolina?" Gimbel asked. "They stand at 165 or 168. Red Grange was 175. Jim Thorpe was around 180. I'm not a great believer in these 240 or 250 pound mastodons."

"It depends on how they can move around," General Kilpatrick said. "If they can move, weight's bound to help." Kilpatrick was a 210 pounder at Yale—one of the all-time greats.

Anyway the debate took us westward to a pair of teams known as Notre Dame and Minnesota. Bernie Gimbel's side of the argument was right most of the time.

But recalling what happened to Tulane and Ohio State we felt something like Steve Owen who saw Minnesota practice—

"I was glad I was on the side lines," Steve said, "at least 60 yards away."

The men I happened to think about were Jim Martin, Leon Hart and tackle Bob Toneff of Notre Dame—Clayton Tonnemaker, Leo Nomellini and Jerry Ekberg of Minnesota. Leon Hart, at the age of 20, is 6 feet, 4 inches, weighing 245 pounds. Toneff at tackle is only 240. Martin at the other tackle is around 220.

Minnesota goes far beyond this. Tonnemaker at center is only 240. A great center. Nomellini, a tackle, is 255. Ekberg, the other tackle, is 255. So here are three linemen who have a total displacement of 750 pounds.

And it might be mentioned that Martin, Hart, Toneff, Tonnemaker, Ekberg and Nomellini can all move. There is nothing lumbering in their work. Hart of Notre Dame is as fast as most backs. In addition to being a great end and a fine tackle he is also an able pass receiver. I doubt that football has another man quite as valuable as Leon Hart — 245 pounds of speed, experience and about all it takes.

Imagine such fast backs as Williams, Sitko, Coutre, Gay, Swistowicz, Spaniel, Mazur and others working back of that crashing Notre Dame line?

Or such backs as Bye, Gregory and others working back of Minnesota's set of mastodons and mammoths, including one or two dinosauri — comparatively speaking, of course?

Football's Big Gap

One main trouble with football's schedules is the big gap that often separates rivals. For example Cornell was 50 points better than Yale and Army was at least 70 points better than Harvard. Notre Dame could have run well over 50 points against Tulane.

Army and Navy should have exchanged schedules these last two years. Army was equipped to face Navy's schedule—and Navy could have done extremely well with Army's schedule.

One of the main features of the year so far is the rise of Captain Tom Hamilton's Pittsburgh Panthers. They have beaten the team that beat Michigan. Here's a nod to coach Walter Milligan who has turned in one of the season's best jobs.

And we might as well slip another chaplet of wild plum blossoms to Paul Bryant, Kentucky's coach. Paul Bryant is one of the best of the younger coaches. He is an old Alabama end, brought up under Frank Thomas, one of the masters.

Mississippi was rated a good chance against Kentucky and Kentucky won 47 to 0. Kentucky beat Georgia 25 to 0.

Save Your Game!

If you want to prevent waste on that hunting trip of yours this autumn, it would be wise to follow these directions issued by the U. S. forestry service:

GO PREPARED—Take at least a hunting knife, belt-axe, 30 feet of ¼-inch rope, some twine, several pieces of clean wiping cloth, red flagging and four muslin sacks—each large enough to hold a quarter of the animal you hope to get. A small meat saw and some black pepper will also come in handy.

DRESSING OUT KILL—Tag animal as soon as it is killed and do not destroy evidence of sex. Open carcass from crotch to throat. Turn animal downhill so it will bleed freely. Be careful not to puncture the intestines or the paunch. In all operations prevent hair from coming in contact with meat. Open chest cavity by spreading with a stick. Drain off blood and wipe with clean cloth. Do not wash with water. If the animal must be taken out of the woods before cooling and quartering, leave the liver and heart in the body cavity.

Don't make a target out of yourself by carrying an exposed hide or antlers.

COOLING—Because the animal's body heat causes rapid spoilage, your kill should be completely cooled as soon as possible, preferably by hanging in a shady place.

QUARTERING — If state laws permit, it is best to quarter the animal before moving. The hide is worth saving and should be removed in one piece if possible Place quarters in clean muslin bags and hang in shade. In warm weather, hang out only at night and wrap meat up during the day ALWAYS KEEP THE MEAT COOL.

TRANSPORTATION — Don't make a target of yourself by carrying an exposed hide or antlers! Don't transport the animal on an automobile fender next to a heated motor. Transportation is, of course, easier if it is possible to pack the animal from the woods in quarters on a horse or in a pack sack

STORAGE—Always unpack meat as soon as possible and store in a dry place. If weather permits, it should be allowed to "cure" for about a week or 10 days before storage.

No value in dollars and cents can be attributed to the recreational values of the sport of fishing and hunting. The fact that 50,000 fishermen and 70,000 hunters annually take to the field with rod or gun is proof, however, that this type of recreation is considered valuable to a large segment of our population.

Picking Pheasants

According to experts on the subject, many people who skin pheasants are destroying the fine flavor of this game bird.

Because of its tender skin, the pheasant is difficult to pick once it has become cold after shooting. They may be picked very easily without breaking the skin, however, by brushing off the feathers immediately after the bird has been killed.

In warm weather, the bird should be rough dressed in the field, and the cavity stuffed with coarse grass, cornhusks or newspapers to help the cooling-out process.

After picking and dressing, the birds should be dropped into individual paper sacks before being placed in the hunting coat. Head and feet should always be left attached in the field for identification.

Under a new law, effective July 1, New York state game protectors alone may issue hunting licenses to minors under 17 seeking their first licenses and then only after the protector has schooled the applicant in the proper handling of firearms.

Adirondack Deer

Deer hunting prospects for the fall of 1949 will be better in the Adirondacks than they were last year. In the Catskills there will be little change, with some counties improving, others declining.

In the western counties where bucks and does were legal last fall, the deer population is substantially less than a year ago, but in the other counties of the region a general increase in number of deer will be evident.

No Cooking! Great Eating!

Meat dishes been looking a little tired lately? On the platter, good looks matter! But a good cook's time is valuable, too. Here's a relish that peps up meals, but takes almost no time to make:

CRANBERRY ORANGE RELISH
4 cups Eatmor Cranberries
2 oranges, quartered and seeded
2 cups sugar

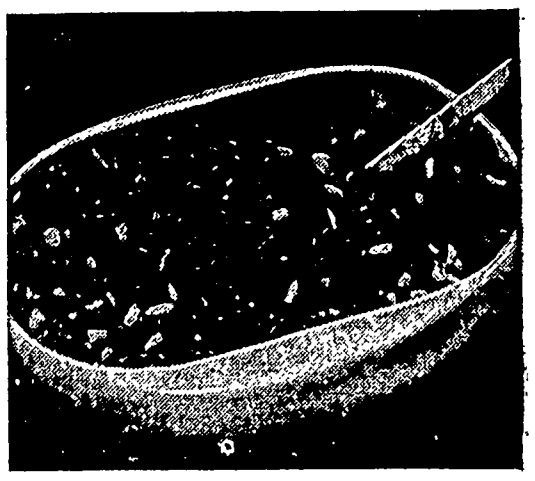
Put raw cranberries and oranges through food chopper. Add sugar and mix well. Chill in refrigerator a few hours before serving. Makes one quart relish. This relish will keep well in the refrigerator for several weeks.



And you don't have to stop there! Cranberry-Orange Relish can do 'most anything for any meal! Vary the basic recipe by adding chopped pears, apples, carrots. Spice it up by stirring in a pinch of powdered cinnamon and cloves. Add diced celery to Cranberry-Orange Relish and you have Crunchy Cranberry Relish—new garnish for hamburgers that makes them *Cran*burgers! Substitute part honey for part sugar—that's sauce for the goose—and duck and pork, too! Add horse-radish to taste for a little extra kick with all kinds of meat! But whatever you do, don't serve Cranberry-Orange Relish in little dabs! Serve it in generous mounds, in big, big spoonfuls—and watch it do a fast disappearing act!

And did you think that Cranberry-Orange Relish was just a relish? No, ma'am, it's also a quick 'n-'tempting dessert! It's all done with tart shells or hollowed-out cupcakes—buy 'em or make 'em yourself—but heap 'em high with relish—and garnish with orange segments, whipped cream or meringue. Sounds good? Just wait until you try this one: freeze Cranberry-Orange Relish to a mush—spoon into orange shells or halved avocados. Serve with whipped cream cheese or mayonnaise.

It's a relish you'll relish—and often! Here's a good eating idea: start today to keep a big bowl of Cranberry-Orange Relish on your table from now to the end of the fresh cranberry season!

FORMER KLEMME BOY IS WED IN GERMANY

Ursula Lutter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Karl Lutter of Berlin, Germany, and Herbert Mueller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mueller of Denver, were united in marriage in Berlin, Oct. 22.

A civil ceremony which was attended by the bride's father and her girl friend was performed by the Justice of Peace in the morning in the magistrate's office of the American Sector.

The wedding service was performed at 3 o'clock in the afternoon in the Temple of the airfield chapel, the chaplain officiating in the double ring ceremony.

The altar was decorated with white chrysanthemums and candlebra. Preceeding the ceremony, songs were sung by the choir. To the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, the bridegroom and his best man, Col. C. Chulze, took their places. The bridesmaid came down the isle, followed by the bride and her father. Soft organ music played during the ceremony The recessional was the singing of "So Minim Den Meine Hande" by the choir.

The bride was attired in floor length white silk nylon dress, with closed neck and long sleeves. She wore a finger-tip veil, held in place by a pearl tiara. She carried a bouquet of pink roses. Her bridesmaid wore a floor-length pink silk nylon dress and carried a bouquet of red roses.

The bridegroom and his best man wore military uniforms.

The bride's mother was attired in a black velveteen dress and she wore a corsage of pink carnations.

Immediately after the ceremony a dinner was served at the apartment of the bride's parents for a few relatives and close friends. The bride's table was centered with a three-tier wedding cake, topped with a white wedding bell. This ornament was used to decorate the wedding cake at the golden wedding of the bridegroom's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Christ Riebe of Garner. A toast given by Paul Rudolph, a grand uncle of the groom.

The bride came with her parents to Brooklyn, New York, when she was a small child. There she received most of her education. Shortly before the outbreak of World War II they returned to Berlin. Mrs. Mueller has been employed as typist at Templehof airfield.

The bridegroom was graduated in 1945 from Klemme high school. In February, 1946, he enlisted in the airforce and spent three years. In March, 1948, he re-enlisted for another year and was sent overseas. He was stationed at the Templehof airfield. He expects to return to the states after the first of the year. The bride will come by plane to Denver to the home of Mr. Mueller's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mueller, as soon as her visa is approved.

Opl. and Mrs. Mueller expect to attend the Northrop Aeronautical school in Englewood, California.

Herbert was born and grew to manhood in Klemme. The family recently moved to Denver.

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

The biggest show on the road these next few months may be the Great Ice Follies with more than a million Iowa drivers participating A grim preview of this coming distraction is shown in the Iowa records for last January-February when the ice caused 110 per cent more fatal accidents than in the same months a year ago.

For that first day when you drive on hard packed snow or ice here are some findings of safety experts who have made winter driving tests:

Realize first, they say, that it takes about 5 times more distance to stop your car on ice or snow than on dry pavement If you drive on ice with chains it will take at least 190 feet to stop from a speed of only 20 miles an hour.

For the quickest, safest stop on ice "pump" the brakes. Holding the brake pedal down may lock the wheels and start an uncontrollable skid. Friction between tires and ice is greatest at the moment the brakes are applied but decreases quickly.

Keep a steady foot on the accelerator when driving on ice. A sudden let up or push at the gas can be enough to overcome the weakened friction between tires and ice and start the skid Round icy curves under slight, steady engine power. This helps prevent side skids.

If you do start to slip, turn your wheels in the direction of the slide to make recovery. This maneuver takes room, however, more room than you may have on the highway.

Lowering the pressure in tires or placing weight over the rear wheels does not help control the car on ice, the safety testers say. The practice simply causes tire wear and increases the chance for a later blow-out.

HOLD FIRE SCHOOLS IN 45 COUNTIES IN 1949

Under the direction of a three-man staff from the Iowa State College Engineering Extension Service, Iowa fire schools have served Iowa fire departments in 45 county meetings since Jan. 1.

In turn, the county schools serve all departments, paid or volunteer, in the county. The average attendance at the schools, which are 1-day stands, is about 50 firemen. Thus, a total of 2,500 Iowa firmen have received advanced training in these fire schools.

In addition to the county schools, 550 firemen attended the state fire school at the college in May of this year. This 4-day lecture and demonstration session is also directed by the Engineering Extension Service. Cooperating in conducting both the county and state schools are Robert Byrus, fire protection engineer for the Engineering Extension Service, and Mark Brosier and William Myers, both staff members of the service.

Farmers Warned Not To Boost Hog Output To Strong

RATES WILL BE HIKED BY SOME TELEPHONE COMPANIES

The signing of the new Minimum Wage and Hour Law by President Truman on Wednesday, October 26th, will probably result in an increase in the telephone bills of a good many of the subscribers of the Independent Telephone Companies of Iowa, stated Clyde McFarlin, President of the Iowa Independent Telephone Association, commenting upon the effect of the new law in a statement released in Des Moines Oct. 31.

All Independent Telephone Companies having over 750 telephones will be affected by the Act. Such companies will be required to pay operators not less than 75 cents per hour, and any time worked over 40 hours per week must be compensated for at the rate of time and a half. President McFarlin stated that the rate fixed by law is in his opinion higher than the rates paid for women workers employed in industries requiring comparable skills, in the bulk of Iowa communities served by Independent Companies.

There are 48 Independent Telephone Companies in Iowa which will be directly affected by the new Minimum Wage and Hour Law. It is probable that many of the exchanges having less than 750 stations will be indirectly affected.

Mr. McFarlin stated that telephone companies are required to operate on around-the-clock basis and that any wage increase hits them three times a day.

By its terms, the law goes into effect 90 days after the signature of the President.

Mr. McFarlin predicted that none of the 48 companies that are directly affected will be able to absorb the increased costs and will be required to pass the same on to their subscribers.

There are 518 Independent Telephone Companies in Iowa operating 300,000 telephones and serving about 75 percent of the area of the State.

PRICE RATIO IN FAVOR OF CORN

Consumer Income To Drop; Pigs Increase

Ames—As farmers size up the hog outlook at breeding time this fall, they find several differences from a year ago, says Francis Kutish, extension economist at Iowa State College.

Corn prices are higher, and hog prices lower than last fall. In fact, the situation has changed enough to cause the below-average hog man to think very seriously of cutting back his 1950 spring pig drop.

Ratio Declines

The hog-corn ratio, which last year was 18 to 1 in Iowa, is now 13 to 1. Farmers do not have the discount on cash corn this fall they had a year ago. The supply of "free corn" is shrinking. Corn is now selling around $1 10 in many Iowa communities. Corn prices should approach loan levels by spring.

Meanwhile, the hog price outlook points to lower hog prices next year. The business outlook, the key to pork demand points to steady business during the first half of 1950, with the demand easing somewhat during the last half of the year.

Thus, consumer incomes may be a little lower next fall when spring pigs come to market, Kutish points out. The USDA expects hog slaughter to be up. It is forecasting a 5 per cent boost in the 1950 spring pig crop.

Announce Supports

The government will announce price supports for these hogs sometime this winter. But these price supports will have to be carried by buying pork and pork products. There is serious question whether such a support operation can be carried out successfully if hog numbers go up very much.

Summing up, it looks as though it will hustle the man who is below average in efficiency to get much more than loan price for his corn by shelling it through hogs, Kutish says. It probably would be more sensible for him to cut back some and raise his efficiency by saving more pigs and pushing them off to market faster than to handle a larger number of pigs.

If the Brakes Don't Work Just Hit Something Cheap

By BILLY ROSE

A fellow tried to sell me a helicopter the other day. He told me I could hop from the roof of my theatre to my place in Westchester in 20 minutes, and added that it was as easy to drive as a car I told him I wasn't interested because I couldn't drive a car.

How come? Didn't I ever try and learn? Just once. And here's what happened.

One day several summers ago, my wife said, "I wish you'd learn how to drive. Every time you want a paper or a pack of cigarettes, I've got to stop what I'm doing and chauffeur you into the village."

"Okay," I said, "if you'll play teacher."

Next morning I crawled into the car beside Eleanor "Just turn this jigger over," she began, "push in this dingus, pull out this doohickey, step on this wingdoodle, press down on this thing — a mabob, and you're all set to go."

Billy Rose

"What's this gizmo?" I asked.

"The hand brake," she said. "You throw it on quickly in case of emergency."

"What happens if the brakes don't work?"

"Hit something cheap," advised my spouse.

A MOMENT LATER the car went hiccuping down the road Then for a mile it went smooth as you please A feeling of confidence came over me, the same feeling all new drivers get just before the lights go out. I pressed down on the gas

"The pistons seem to be knocking," I said professionally.

"Pistons nothing," said Eleanor. "Those are my knees."

Everything went fine until we got to the traffic light in the village. I forgot to press the hickeymadoodle on the gilhooley and the car stalled The lights changed from green to red, and from red back to green. A cop came over.

"What's the matter?" he asked. "Haven't we got any colors you like?"

After switching the radio on and off, I suddenly pressed the right thing In the order of the way it happened, I grazed the cop, skidded through the safety zone, clipped the fender on a bus, and came to rest with my bumper against a fire plug The cop stalked over, took a handkerchief out of his pocket and dropped it in front of the car.

"Lookit, Gene Autry," he said. "I wana see you do that all over again, and this time pick up the handkerchief with your teeth."

Eleanor gave him the smile that used to make the front cover of "Life." "He's learning to drive," she said.

"No kidding!" said the cop. "How long is this class going to last? Some other drivers would like to use this road when Sonny Boy gets through with it."

"What did I do wrong?" I asked the officer.

"Didn't you hear my whistle? Didn't you see my signal?" he demanded.

I shook my head.

The cop sighed. "I'd better go home," he said. "I don't seem to be doing much good around here."

I THREW THE CAR into reverse and backed away from the fire plug.

"If you're going to drive much," yelled the cop, "I'd have the car painted red on one side and blue on the other, so the witnesses will contradict each other."

I had only one more mishap getting home. I scraped a guy's fender He was pretty nice about it. "It's my fault," he said. "I saw you coming. I should have driven into the fields and avoided you."

There are two stone posts [illegible] drive which leads up to our home. I got past them without a scratch—also without the rear bumper. That did it.

Since then, I've never been behind a wheel. When Eleanor and I go driving I sit in the back seat and read the Burma Shave signs. The only concession I've made to the Automotive Age is to learn how to fold a road map.

The Brave of Earth

STRONG with the shining shield of their high purpose,
Brave with the silver armor of their prayer,
We see them face the day, their unseen crosses
Almost too heavy for their hearts to bear.
Yet uncomplainingly they live the hours,
And patiently they face the lengthening years,
With none but God, himself, to know their heartbreak,
And none but God to mark their unshed tears.

The hurt of earth! How ably they dissemble!
They bear with courage grief they never tell:
Self-conquerors they go, the strong, the valiant,
The brave, who smile and say that all is well.
When all awards for courage have been given,
Surely the highest will be theirs in Heaven.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Name Calling Is Profitless

By Lawrence Gould

Does calling names get you anywhere?

Answer: Not often, if ever. It relieves your feelings (though it may make you feel guilty later) and perhaps wins you some sympathy from people who already feel as you do. But expressing your hatred of someone — which is all calling him names amounts to—neither changes him nor helps you to deal with him more effectually. It merely distracts you from the tasks of understanding why he does the things you fear or dislike and what can be done to counteract them. To a mature mind there are no "villains"—only grown-up "problem children."

Can you be sure a psychiatrist will help you?

Answer: I'm afraid not—in fact, I doubt whether any honorable man would guarantee to cure a given patient. But if you are mentally ill, remember that your very doubt of whether psychiatric treatment can "do any good" is part of your illness; it grows out of the resistance your unconscious mind sets up against a process which may weaken its hold on you. If you find a doctor whom you can trust "some of the time," take your doubts to him and discuss them along with your other symptoms. He won't mind, and probably can help you overcome them

Does reading ability improve with practice?

Answer: Under normal circumstances, Yes. Up to your limits of fatigue, the oftener you do anything, the more it tends to become automatic, and therefore to be done faster and with less expenditure of effort. A competent book reviewer really can get the gist of a whole book in the time that it would take most people to read, say, two or three chapters. But if you've acquired bad reading habits — like just looking at words without stopping to think what they mean—the more reading you do, the less you will understand or remember.

THANKSGIVING TURKEY

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

IMOGENE sat at the kitchen table and listened starry-eyed while Tony read the letter. "Dear Tony and Imogene: I was sorry to hear about Tony's ill luck down there in Carolina, and know you must be having rather a hard pull. But things are bound to straighten out. Under separate cover I am sending you a turkey for your Thanksgiving dinner. Please don't acknowledge its receipt, as your Aunt Sara might read the letter. She doesn't know I'm doing this, and I doubt if she'd approve—you know how she felt when you two got married and started out on your wild venture. My love to you both. Uncle Rufus."

Tony pulled off the last wrapper and grinned happily. Within the cardboard box there nestled a handsome, fat turkey; a delicious, palatable turkey. Tony's mouth watered at sight of it.

Accompanying the bird were vegetables galore, nuts and fruit and a real plum pudding ready for heating. It was a complete, old-fashioned Thanksgiving dinner.

At length Imogene stirred. She turned and looked through the window and there was something queer about the expression on her face. Tony saw the look and he came and sat down on the table and took her hand in his.

Imogene looked at him squarely. "I was thinking, Tony, about the Santrells. I can't help it, with this big turkey here in front of us."

Tony's hand tightened its grip. "Precious," he said gently, "you're a dear."

He was silent, then, staring thoughtfully out into the yard. The Santrells, he reflected, had probably never had a turkey for Thanksgiving. It was doubtful this Thanksgiving if they'd have anything to eat They were poor, dirt poor, and there were eight children in the family Mr. Santrell was sick half the time; he couldn't work, even if work were available. Their plight was pitiful. They had been too proud to ask for help; had reached a state of near destitution, when the town discovered their condition.

"Darling," she said, "I've been trying to figure out one good reason for marrying you since our wedding day."

PRESENTLY TONY turned. He said: "Listen, sweet, as far as I'm concerned, I'd like to live through one Thanksgiving without a turkey I've had to eat one every Thanksgiving since I can remember to will be a welcome relief. Besides, Thanksgiving down here doesn't seem to call for a turk. And we still have the smoked shoulder we'd planned on."

And Imogene smiled in prodigious happiness and began rewrapping Uncle Rufus's turkey. "Darling," she said, "I've been trying to figure out one good reason for marrying you since our wedding day. And now I've found it." Whereupon she kissed him and Tony held her tight in his arms.

And so they marched over to the Santrells and undid the package on Mrs. Santrell's kitchen table and watched with a curious tugging at their hearts as the eight Santrell children and the two grown-ups stared and stared at the great fat bird. They left very soon after that because Mr. and Mrs. Santrell seemed to have difficulty in finding adequate words to express themselves.

They raced up the walk of their little stucco bungalow—and stopped dead still on the veranda.

A great package reposed before the front door, and a letter lay atop the package.

Tony picked up the letter, stared at the package curiously and tore open the envelope. "Dear Imogene and Tony," he read. "Your Uncle Rufus wouldn't like it a bit if he knew I was doing this. You know how he disapproved when you two got married and went away down South. However, I know you must be lonesome and rather discouraged, and so, under separate cover, I'm sending you a turkey for your Thanksgiving dinner. Please don't acknowledge its receipt, as your Uncle Rufus might read the letter and I'd never hear the end of it. Love to you both, Aunt Sara."

Glutamic Acid Improves Intelligence

By Dr James W. Barton

I HAVE WRITTEN a couple of times about the use of glutamic acid—an amino acid—in helping to brighten the mind. This discovery was first reported by Dr. C. C. Pfeiffer, professor of pharmacology, Illinois College of Medicine, who stated that glutamic acid brightened the wits in a series of 69 mentally defective children one and one-half to 17 years of age.

More recently an editorial in "The Journal of the American Medical Association" stated that glutamic acid had been found of great help in the mild form of epilepsy (petit mal). Still another group reported that they had observed a rise in mental age and intelligence quotient in adults.

Since the above favorable reports, some research workers have stated that they failed to obtain favorable results in treating "backward" children with glutamic acid.

In view of the above favorable and unfavorable reports, a not unusual occurrence when any new drug or method of treatment is child is born); that is, the lowest form of intelligence.

Generally speaking a moron has an intelligence quota of from 80 to 90, an imbecile is much below this, running from 50 to 60, but an idiot has little or no intelligence, although he is lively and imitates well.

It would naturally be expected that little or nothing can be done to increase the intelligence of a mongolian idiot, but in "The American Journal of Psychiatry," Drs. F. T. Zimmerman, Bessie B. Burgemeister and T. J. Putman report their study of the effects of glutamic acid in 30 definite cases of mongolism idiocy or mental backwardness and 30 non-mongoloid control cases announced, it is of interest to learn that glutamic acid has been found to improve the wits or intelligence in what is known as mongolian idiocy (which is present when the

While too much should not be expected in all cases of mental backwardness, parents of backward children would do well to discuss this method of treatment with their family physician.

I have heard for many summers—and many winters too,
The advice you get from elders on the things that you should do.
They tell you of the early bird, who cops the worm so pat—
But suppose the worm slept longer—did they ever think of that?

Throw your bread upon the waters—yes, I've heard that one
Did you ever try to work it as you added up the score?
You will find this answer waiting, if you ever tried to do it—
Throw your bread upon the waters, and a carp will beat you to it.

It Happens in Football

PITTSBURGH'S PANTHER had beaten Penn State in her final game last fall Walter Milligan's alert squad had beaten William and Mary, Northwestern, West Virginia and Miami this year Captain Tom Hamilton's outfit was under way, full steam

Grantland Rice

Indiana had dropped 11 straight Here were some recent scores: Notre Dame 49, Indiana 6; Ohio State 6, Indiana 7; Iowa 35, Indiana 9 Then Indiana completely wrecked Pittsburgh, 48 to 14.

SMU loses to Rice, 41 to 27. Rice loses to LSU who had lost to Kentucky, 19 to 0 But SMU, minus Doak Walker, smashes Kentucky 20 to 7.

Here was a variation of some 40 to 50 points Minnesota was a far different team against Ohio State than it was against Michigan And Michigan was a far different team against Minnesota than the Wolverine was against Army.

The trouble is that from Saturday to Saturday there is a big shift in the physical mental and psychological set-ups Let one team drop off and the other pick up and you get a shift of two, three or four touchdowns. Take two touchdowns from one team and add two touchdowns in strength to a rival and you get a stew you never dreamed about.

This is why the consistency of Notre Dame is so remarkable. To move through 31 to 32 games, facing the best teams that will play you, not only week after week but year after year requires not only fine material, fine coaching, but a blazing spirit that keeps burning.

Considering the fine young material Red Blaik has and the schedule he faces through 1950 and 1951, makes it rather unlikely that his Army outfit will lose any particular game for another two years Michigan may give him trouble next fall, but this will be a fine team for some time to come.

Games against such opponents as Harvard and Columbia and V M I do no good to anybody -especially to Harvard. Columbia and V M I Don't forget V M I. was beaten 54 to 6 by William and Mary.

Unbreakable Barrier

A well known eastern coach, with a football team that hasn't been doing so well, was looking through indigo glasses recently.

"We are down," he said, "and it will be quite a while before we ever get up again. Maybe years. This means even worse football and wider margins than we've had so often this year."

"Why is this?" I asked him. "Is there no way to crawl out from under?"

"Not a chance, for us," he said, "and several others I could name. The first reason is the scholarship situation. Most of the men we want and need and would like to come to us, can't get in our school. If they get in they can't stay in. The scholastic going is just too tough. But I see these stars or potential stars scatter out to other places and often come back to beat out our brains.

"The second reason is that once you are down, the better football players are likely to pass you up. They want to be on winners. I guess you can't blame them for that "We can't give an athletic scholarship of any sort It costs a lot of money to send a boy through our university now."

"We have no soft courses, which are a big help. So we are stuck. We can't get working jobs any more largely because boys who play football and keep up in their studies can't honestly handle a job that brings in the needed $100 a month.

"If every college were the same, this would be fine. But in spite the sanity code the scramble for good football players is terrific. And some one is taking care of more than a few. Our alumni would also be willing to help, but they can't get them in.

JUST RESTING

Just Wait

The widow probably would have been better off if she had stood over the stone-cutter as he chiseled the epitaph on her late husband's tombstone. But she was terribly grief-stricken and gave him a slip of paper with the wording she wanted on the stone.

Instead of making two separate lines he ran two sentences together with not even a comma separating the thoughts so that the epitaph read:

"Thou art at rest 'til we meet again."

The Kindergarten has finished with their Thanksgiving decorations. They learned about the Pilgrims and the meaning of Thanksgiving.

Collyn Bridges celebrated his birthday and treated the class to cup cakes.

Linda Christie came to visit us Wednesday afternoon. We hope we can have more visitors.

—Miss Christ

FIRST GRADE NEWS

We have made many things for Thanksgiving and are looking forward to vacation. We know we have many things to be thankful for.

New helpers in the room are: Housekeeper -- Patricia Ulrich Gardener ------- Billy Heginer Librarian ---- Jerry Stokesbary Erasers -- Sharon Bachman and Judy Jorgenson

—Miss Tulp

SECOND GRADE NEWS

The girls are getting farther ahead in the race to see which, the boys or the girls can get their dental cards signed first. Jane Renner and Roxanne have brought their's back last week making the score 8 to 5 in favor of the girls.

Maurine Johnson is the new president of our Good Citizens Club. Jane Renner presided over her last meeting Friday at which Maurine was elected.

Those who wrote perfect spelling papers for the entire six weeks were Donald Anderson, Paige Patterson, JoAnne Jacobs, Roxanne Back, Sherryle Clabough and Jane Renner.

Last week was our "Eat everything on your plate" week. Many of us found ourselves liking what we never thought we could like. We are going to try to eat everything for the rest of the year; not only in school, but at home also.

Monday was Donald Anderson's seventh birthday.

—Miss Brones

JUNIOR HI NEWS

There were quite a few disappointed students last week when the reoprt cards came out. But of course there were those with the better grades too. Those on the honor roll this six weeks are as follows:

Seventh Grade

Faye Janssen ---------- 2A-4B
Lois Boland ---------- 3A-3B
Graydon Barz ---------- 3A-4B

Eighth Grade

Noel Egeland ---------- 4A-2B
Janice Swanson -------- 2A-4B

We have a Demerit System in our room now. Each person is entitled to five demerits a day. Each time someone is caught whispering, out of their seat without permission, or anything else they're not suppose to be doing, they have a demerit taken away from them. If they have all five demerits taken away they have to stay one hour after school.

Our mottor for this week is—"What you are speaks so loudly that people cannot hear what you say."

—Janice Swanson

JUNIOR JOTS

In English Nellie, Darlene Harley and Luverene have lead class discussions. We have done debate, introductions, and discussions.

Economics class has been very interesting. We learned how to exchange and invest our money and also studied mnay kinds of insurance.

In home economics we girls have been making one-and two-crusts pies. To some of us this is new.

Mr. Patterson has given the typing class many speed tests to bring back our accuracy.

The sociology class has been studying "Establishing Our Position In Society" We all have found that some of the class discussions are very interesting.

SOPHOMORE SALLIES

Most of the sophomores have been busy studying for our second six weeks tests and very patiently waiting for Thanksgiving vacation.

In Biology we have been studying about microscopic plants and animals. We also looked at preserved starfish, clams, and an octopus.

In world History we finished studying about the Dark Ages and have been working on our themes over the first 235 pages in our texts. They have to be finished by December fifth.

In English we have finished essays and unit tests.

SENIOR SCRIBBLES

In English we are preparing to go into the third six weeks work which will consist mostly of grammar. In the past six weeks we have been working on oral interpretation of poetry with technical discussions which included the poets lives. With two seniors still to do make-up work, the other sixteen had memorized a total of fifty-two selections from our poems. We spent the week end reading the novelette, "The Voice of Bugle Ann" by MacKinley Kantor Recitations on Monday and Tuesday included individual discussions by each member of the class with original character sketch es of the four main characters of the story given by Don Finders and his committee Virgil Pringnitz, Marvin Schmidt and Calvin Schmidt.

In agriculture we have been studying beef-cattle, which included how to have successful herd and what are the factors which make it so. We have also been studying dairy cattle

In American history we have been studying the Industrial Revolution, and the settlement of the west. Also we have had a lecture on unnecessary running around in the halls and the spanking which is to be the punishment!

In bookkeeping we have been studying cash receipts and cash payments, which can be complicated if you don't understand it. Also we had a new teacher, Richard Kaduce, in Bookkeeping and we have learned a great deal, since most of us like a temporary change in teachers.

GROUNDLESS FEARS

"What would happen if we struck a big iceberg?" asked the nervous passenger

"The iceberg would pass along as if nothing had happened," answered the captain

The passenger sighed with relief

ALWAYS A GENTLEMAN

His car and her car met head-on. Both drivers got out and, with that fine courtesy so characteristic of motorists nowadays, both began to apologize profusely.

"I'm sorry," said the woman; "It was all my fault"

"Not at all, madam," the man responded with a gallant gesture; "I was to blame myself'

"But I insist the fault was mine. I was on your side of the road"

"That may be true; but, my dear madam, I am responsible for the collision I saw you coming blocks away, and I had ample opportunity to dart down a side street."

Doctor's Advice

Doctor. "The best thing for you to do is to give up drinking and smoking."

Patient: "Doctor, I feel I don't deserve the best "What's the second best?"

DEFINITE REPLY

Th. teacher explaining to her young pupils that the earth was round, asked questions to bring out her point "Herman," she asked, "could you walk around the earth?"

"No, ma'am," promptly replied little Herman

"Why not?" asked the teacher.

"Because my mother won't allow me to leave the back yard."

NEWSPAPER STYLE

The cub reporter had one bad habit: his stories were too long and wordy. After being warned to cut them short, he reported an accidental death as follows.

"J. Jones looked up the elevator shaft in the Blank building to see if it was on the way down. It was. Age 46

Slightly Deceiving

A woman ·ned her bank to arrange for the disposal of a thousand-dollar bond

"Is the bond for redemption or conversion?" a clerk inquired

There was a long pause, then the woman asked "Am I talking to the First National bank or the First Baptist church?

Lucky Girl'

In the park, the kindly lady making conversation with a bright little girl inquired "Tell me dear, have you any little sisters at home?"

"No," the youngster replied, "but I have two brothers—and they have a sister" And then she joyfully added, "And I'm the sister!"

FISH NETS

Willie: "Dad, how do fishermen make their nets?"

Dad. "That's very simple, Willie. They just take a handful of holes and sew them together."

A GOOD REASON

A man, filling out a job application blank, came to the question: "Have you ever been arrested?" His answer was, "No." The next question asked "Why," was meant for those who answered the first part in the affirmative Nevertheless he answered it with, "Never got caught."

Run, Brother, Run!

Two absent-minded hunters strolling in the African jungle had forgotten to bring their gun. They realized it when they saw a rare saber-tooth tiger coming toward them.

"What shall we do?" asked one.

"I don't know what you're plannin' on doin'," the other hunter replied, running "but I'm getting ready to spread the news through all South Africa"

Modesty

Mrs. Smith was vigorously powdering her face before going out

"Why do you go to all that trouble?" asked Smith, who was waiting impatiently

"Modesty my dear," was the reply

"Modesty?"

"Yes—I've no desire to shine in public."

Fussy Patient

Patient· "Why stick me in the ward with that crazy guy?"

Doctor: "Hospital's crowded— is he troublesome?'

Patient "He's nuts! Keeps looking around saying 'No lions, no tigers, no elephants'—and all the time the room's full of 'em."

Unlimited Popularity

TWO American music-hall artists sought employment in one of London's leading theaters.

The manager inquired the length of their act

The pair hadn't had an act for a month of Sundays and didn't know just what to say; but, being resourceful, replied, "Twenty-five minutes."

"Twenty-five minutes!" exclaimed the manager. "Why, my dear sirs, ours is a long bill. I cannot give you 25 minutes. I suggest that you go on for eight minutes."

The performers stared at him aghast.

"Eight minutes!" they screamed. "Why, we bow for seven minutes!"

SOME PARTY

Bobby came home from the party with a big hole cut in his clothes.

"What happened to your new suit?" gasped his mother.

"We were playing grocery store," said Bobby "I was the Swiss cheese."

Dark Fruit Cake
(Makes 10 pounds)

- 1½ pounds candied cherries
- 1 pound candied pineapple
- 1¼ pounds candied apricots
- 1 pound citron
- 3 pounds seeded raisins
- 1 pound currants
- ½ pound raw, shelled almonds
- ½ pound (2 cups) sifted flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- ½ teaspoon cloves
- 1 teaspoon nutmeg
- ½ pound shortening
- ½ pound brown sugar
- 1½ cups cider
- 6 eggs, separated

Cut the cherries in halves Thinly slice the pineapple, apricots and citron. Wash raisins and currants and dry them Blanch and chop almonds. Mix all these ingredients together Sift together flour, baking powder and spices Combine fruit and flour mixtures thoroughly. Cream together shortening and sugar. Add egg yolks and beat thoroughly. Add cider alternately with fruit mixture until all are thoroughly mixed. Beat egg whites stiff and fold into cake mixture Line the bottoms of 4 pans (8¾ x 4¾ inches) with brown paper. Grease the paper and fill pans with cake mixture ¾ full. Place pans on a rack in a large roaster which has about ½ inch of water at the bottom. Cover the pan and set in a slow (275°f.) oven for 2½ hours. Remove pans from roaster and set in oven, at same temperature, for ½ hour to allow cake to dry

Plum Pudding
(Makes 2 3-pound molds)

- 1 pound seedless raisins
- 1 pound currants
- ¼ cup chopped nut meats
- 2½ cups sifted flour

- 2 cups buttermilk
- 1½ cups finely chopped suet
- ½ cup grape juice
- 2½ cups fine, hard bread crumbs

Beat eggs, add crumbs, sugar, molasses, buttermilk, suet and grape juice Add raisin mixture and blend thoroughly Add flour mixture; mix thoroughly Pour into two greased three-pound molds. Cover and steam for three hours. Cool puddings, wrap in heavy waxed paper and store in a cool place. Re-steam to heat and serve with hard or other type sauce.

Garnish your ham with steamed apples which have been molded in cider or lemon gelatin. The flavors suit the ham perfectly

When you want to stuff a roast of pork or pork chops, you'll find that apples and prunes or raisins and apples have a wonderful flavor affinity to the pork

Minced pork sausage and rice mixed with egg, shaped into cakes and fried in the skillet, slowly and to a golden brown are a deliciously different dish to have for breakfast.

How Shot Is Made

Although millions of hunters use shot shells for hunting, trap and skeet shooting, few realize that the manufacturer of the tiny lead pellets in the shells is based on a curious but fundamental law of physics.

Instead of being formed by casting or by some other mysterious process, lead shot pellets get their spherical form by being dropped from the top of a shot tower into a tank of water Molten lead is poured into perforated dropping pans As the lead passes through the perforations in the bottom of the pan, the pan is automatically and rapidly tapped With each tap, a pear-shaped drop falls away Surface tension causes the molten lead droplet to change from its pear-shaped form into a perfect sphere. At the 9-story Winchester shot tower which is one of New Haven's landmarks, the pellets fall 154 feet into a tank of water Water is used to cushion the fall.

Scooped up from the tank of water, the pellets are then sorted with the few imperfect ones weeded out by the use of another ingenious scientific principle The pellets are poured over a series of inclined planes. Round pellets roll straight and attain sufficient speed to leap a gap into a trough. Imperfect ones either wobble off the sides of the planes or fall into the gap. Imperfect pellets that roll into the gap are remelted. Final operations include sorting and polishing with graphite.

Contrary to popular misconception, the hardness or softness of shot pellets is determined by the alloy used and not because hot shot is dropped into cold water At the start of a dropping operation the water is cold. Continual dropping of hot shot warms the water but does not affect the hardness of the shot pellets.

Pheasant Kills Snake

Warren Cody, 13-year-old Kansas fisherman, gives an account of a fight he witnessed near his home in Decatur County. "While on the way to my old fishing hole, I ran across a rooster pheasant fighting a bull snake three and one-half feet long. The snake would strike at the pheasant, but the bird would fly just high enough over the snake to spur it in the head. I watched for 10 minutes before the pheasant saw me and flew away. The snake was so near gone that I finished it. An examination revealed that the pheasant's spurs had penetrated through the head."

New Phantom Line

Phantom Products, Inc., manufacturers of what many anglers declare is the "finest casting rod on the market," has added glass spinning rods, fly rods, surf rods, trolling rods and new muskie and boat rods to its line for 1950.

There is no doubt about the fine performance which may be expected of the Phantom line of fly rods if they match the quality and performance of the Phantom glass casting rod. Those who own Phantom glass casting rods, especially in the extra-light models, know the flexibility and resiliency of the tip and the smooth, delightful action which makes using them such a pleasure.

Turkey Differences

The most noticeable difference in the wild and domestic strains of the turkey is the markings on the tail feathers. The tips of the tail feathers and tail coverts are deep rusty or chestnut in the true wild turkey while in the domestic strain they are white. Also, the wild bird has longer and more slender legs and has a more slim and erect appearance as a whole. The domestic bird has short, rather thick legs and is plump.

Prophets False & True

Lesson for December 4, 1949

GOD is neither silent nor dead. He has his spokesmen today. We hear myriads of voices—preachers, teachers, editors, columnists, poets and politicians, all professing to tell us the truth.

Dr. Foreman

When a man claims to speak in the name of truth, is there any way by which his claim can be tested? It is an old problem.

Away back in Bible times every prophet had his rivals, the false prophets The false were far more numerous, they often had immense prestige and government subsidies besides. How was the common man to tell the true prophets from the false?

Notion of Man or Word of God?

ONE DIFFERENCE between the true and false prophets, of course, was that the false ones passed out their own ideas, while the true ones gave voice to the ideas of God. Some of the false prophets even dug down into what we now call the subconscious, and told their dreams as if they meant something.

The false prophets of our own times are still the people who draw on their own minds, even on their day-dreams, to furnish messages for the people. The gypsy dream-books are still with us Astrologers flourish, and not always on the side streets. All sorts of queer cults profess to tell us what is coming next and what we ought to do

Before we take a modern "prophet" seriously we should ask: Is what he is saying his own idea or God's idea? In this 20th century after Christ, it should be easier to know God's ideas are than it was 27 centuries ago in Jeremiah's time.

For now that Christ has come, we can safely check all the self-styled prophets with the measage and the mind of Christ.

Is the voice of the people the voice of God?

THE FALSE PROPHETS were always popular, the true ones seldom. Mere unpopularity does not prove a man a true prophet, but you may be sure that if a man says only what people like to hear, always tickling the ears and feeding the pride of his listeners, he is no true spokesman for God.

Not that the true prophet is always insulting his hearers. The Lord's prophets often speak comforting and welcome words, to be sure. But a steady outpouring of soothing-syrup is not what we would expect from a genuine prophet.

Man is often most proud when he is most wrong, and then God has to sweep the man down. Don't take too seriously the men who merely reinforce your prejudices and shore up your pride, they are more likely fake prophets than true. The voice of the people is not always the will of God.

Time is the Test

That great prophet Moses (Deut. 18) had already given a practical test of a true prophet Does what he says turn out to be true? Can he really see into tomorrow? Alas, we may have to wait until tomorrow to find out for sure, but tomorrow always comes, and when it comes, the prophets of today will be shown up for what they are, true or false. Time is the test. Not, Is it likely?

Truth and Right are Twins

PERHAPS the worst feature of the false prophets who were Jeremiah's competitors was their real immorality "Their course is evil and their might is not right," he said (23:10, American translation). "They commit adultery and walk in lies, they strengthen the hands of evildoers so that no one turns from his evil ways" (v. 14).

God's spokesman can never also speak for the enemies of God. Whenever you hear anyone talking as if we could now get "beyond good and evil," or as if the Ten Commandments were something we had outgrown, then you may know you are listening to a false prophet.

There are no new commandments but the one which sums up all of them: Love one another. Prophets of hate, prophets of dissension, of lust, these may be speaking for themselves or for the devil —but not for God.

FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE

by Roger C. Whitman

"Checked" Enamel

QUESTION Is there any way to smooth the enamel on our woodwork without completely removing it? It has several coats of various colors of enamel and varnish on it There are fine cracks or checks in some of the enamel. Could we rub it with turpentine or something, then sand it before repainting? If we have to remove all the old paint, how should we do that? Use a paint and varnish remover? We want to repaint our woodwork, but those checks show through so that it doesn't look nice.

ANSWER: You have the right idea, but in reverse—that is, you should use the sandpaper first, and then clean off with turpentine before repainting. If you were going to varnish, you would have to take off all the old finish, but as long as you are going to use paint again, I do not believe it will be necessary to take off all the paint, which would be quite a job. But the cracks and checks should be sanded out smoothly so that they will not show through the new finish.

MILDRED MEINDERS BRIDE OF DUARD LEWIS ON NOVEMBER 18TH

Miss Mildred Meinders, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Meinders, Klemme, and Duard Lewis, son of Mrs. Fred Bell, of Klemme, exchanged nuptial vows on November 18, 1949 at 2:00 p. m.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Reverend Becker of Geneva, at the Klemme Evangelical and Reformed Church.

The bride wore a gray gaberdine suit with black accessories and a corsage f yellow roses. Mrs. Laurice Lemke, of Liberty, her sister, was the maid of honor. She wore a gray gaberdine suit with black accessories and her corsage was of red roses.

The groom wore a blue suit and his brother-in-law, Junior Pringnitz was best man and wore a brown pinstripe suit. Both men wore carnation boutonnieres.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis are both graduates of the Klemme high school. Mr. Lewis is employed as a serviceman for the Corn Belt Power Cooperative with headquarters at Humbolt, where the couple will make their home following a short honeymoon trip.

On Sunday, December 4th a reception was held in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis in the parlors of the Klemme Evangelical and Reformed Church. The neices and nephews of the families gave a short program and Rev. Becker gave a very nice talk.

While lunch was being served Mr. Ernest Gerardi entertained with accordion selections.

GROUPS TO DISCUSS COMMUNITY HEALTH PROBLEMS IN DEC.

"Community Action for Better Health" is the topic taken up in the December Program Service for Rural Leaders. Copies are now available from the Iowa State College Extension Service to be used as guides for local discussion during the month.

According to Paul Henderson, county extension director, the current program service uses the familiar technique of not giving the answer to the problem, rather it asks thought-stimulating questions and provides statistics showing the seriousness of various diseases.

Then, after discussion groups ask themselves all the questions and learn just what the problem is they devote thought to determining what would be the best approach to use in trying to improve community health.

Some of the questions included are as follows: Is one's health entirely a personal matter? Can local sanitation be improved? Is health legislation undemocratic? Are hospital and nursing services adequate? Could accident prevention be promoted by education?

The more opinions and the thought given to the above matters the greater are the chances for improving community health.

Do yourself a favor and attend the discussion when this topic is taken up.

Bought Pure Bred Shorthorn Bull At International Show

The brothers purchased a purebred Shorthorn bull at the show which came from a breeder in Ohio.

CHRISTMAS MAILING OF GREETING CARDS TWO CENTS THIS YEAR

Buy Your Stamps And Mail Packages Early To Avoid Christmas Rush

Printed unsealed Christmas greetings cards will require 2c postage this year according to a report from Postmaster Kluckhohn.

Mail Eearly

Mailings for distant States should be deposited well in advance of December 15th, to assure delivery before Christmas Day. Greeting cards for local delivery should be mailed at least a week before Christmas.

Helpful Suggestions

Prepay postage fully on all mail matter. Address all matter plainly and completely, giving street address or box or rural route number whenever possible. Pack articles carefully in strong durable containers. Wrap parcels securely.

Perishable articles likely to spoil within the time reasonably required for transportation should not be mailed.

Written greetings such as "Merry Christmas," "Happy New Year," "Best Wishes" and names for the purpose of discription, may be enclosed with third or fourth class (parceu post) mail. Other written additions subject parcels to letter postage. This also applies to unsealed greeting cards mailed at the third class rate of postage.

Christmas seals or stickers should not be placed on the address side of mail.

Mailers may save time in buying postage stamps in advance.

PHEASANT SEASON CLOSED AFTER 25-DAY SEASON

The 1949 pheasant season closed December 5th after a 25-day season in 68 counties and 7 days in 11 additional counties. Commission spokesmen termed the season good, with large numbers of successful hunters the first few days. As the season closed, the birds were extremely wild and bag limits of two cock birds few and far between.

E. B. Speaker, superintendent of the biology section for the Commission, believes, "We have plenty of roosters going into the winter to assure a safe cock-hen ratio for next year. We have, however, less winter cover available for the birds than for many years. Unusually severe late winter and early spring storms could cause a lot of trouble."

Speaker explains the lack of winter cover as due primarily to late summer drought and corn borers. "Corn borer control has necessitated especially clean farming in cornfields, one of the major sources of winter cover. Late summer drought prevented a normal growth of weeds in the fields, and the dry fall weather resulted in the burning of many marsh and weedy areas that are normally winter homes of the ringnecks." The biology chief believes that a normal winter will not seriously effect pheasant populations, even in spite of abnormal cover conditions.

BUSINESS PLACES HAVE DECORATED FOR THE CHRISTMAS TRADE

Klemme business places are getting their Christmas decorations put up and Main Street is taking on a very nice holiday look. Most of the stores have put up interior decorations and window displays which are very attractive.

Outstanding is the outdoor display at the Klemme Cooperative Grain Company. This display is very pretty at night with a large red star on top of the elevator that is visible for several miles. A lighted cross is displayed above the office and on the street side of the office is a lighted outdoor Christmas tree and another nice arrangement of colored lights in green and blue.

the Highway Story
IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

The man practiced for nearly ten years a part that took less than ten seconds to play on the highway. In one respect, he played that bit part with such perfection that for a short time he had top billing in a cast of hundreds.

In 1948 he began making house to house deliveries along a route that at one point took him beyond the town limits and along a stretch of highway

It was a steady job and he was a steady man, dependable in his habits. He was so dependable, in fact, that town motorists learned to give his truck a wide birth when they saw it parked at the curb.

They knew the delivery man had a habit of pulling to the left into the street without looking for cars that might be coming from behind. It got to be something of a town joke.

The driver went on practicing this habit for years. Remarkably, he was involved in only one serious accident during that time. He took one of his quick turns from the curb and met a driver who was apparently a stranger in the town.

No one was hurt, but that accident was a full dress rehearsal for the delivery man. His big scene came less than a year later.

He had made his last delivery along the highway section of his route and started a full left turn across the road to head back to town. The unseen car coming from behind was traveling 70 miles an hour when it hit the light truck on the driver's side and rammed it nearly 80 feet down the highway.

The years of practicing a dangerous driving habit ended in about ten seconds of violent action The delivery man was dead. For a few short hours his name topped the list of all those who had died before him on the highway Practice can perfect many things● even the fatal traffic accident.

Egeland went on to Evanston, Illinois to visit their daughter, Mary who is a student at Northwestern University there The two men returned to Iowa on Friday, their wives remaining behind to visit in Cambridge and Evanston, for a few days longer.

Mr Ernest Schrage of Butler County was elected as Director for District 2, replacing Jack Dethmers, who has moved out of the state. Hancock County can well be proud of their large delegation to this State Farm Bureau meeting. The Hancock County Women's Chorus sang at two sessions of the State Women's Conference at the Hotel Fort Des Moines and received many favorable comments from those in attendance

The old saying of: "We learn to do, by doing." is ever true. Attendance at these state meetings, your county, and township meetings, gives us the information and understanding needed about your farm organization. Mis-information and misunderstanding does more to retard progress than anything else. "We learn to do, by doing."

HAMPTON GIRL IS BRIDE OF HAROLD STROMER, KLEMME

Miss Isabel Dohrman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Dohrman of Hampton, and Harold Stromer, Klemme, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Stromer of Garner, were united in marriage Friday, November 25, 1949 in the Evangelical and Reformed Church at Latimer, with the Rev. ### VITAMIN-RICH FRUITS IN ABUNDANT SUPPLY

In spite of grapefruit shortages earlier this fall, homemakers won't have any troubles providing their families with their daily vitamin C quota this winter. There should be citrus fruits on the market at reasonable prices the rest of the winter, along with other vitamin C-rich foods, according to nutritionists at Iowa State College.

The early crop of oranges just coming to market is 7 percent over this year's supply. This means oranges should be less expensive from now on, and lower still in the spring.

Grapefruit supplies aren't so good as they were last year, but in the spring prices should be about the same as they were in the spring of 1949.

The nutritionists point out that there is twice as much frozen citrus juice on hand this year as last. But there won't be so much canned citrus juice on the grocer's shelves.

Canned tomatoes and tomato juice will be plentiful. The nutritionists point out that fresh and frozen green leafy vegeables and such stored foods as cabbage, potatoes and cauliflower have a good amount of vitamin C to offer also. Canned foods and stored vegetables may lose some of their vitamin C value over the summer months, but frozen broccoli and other vegetables if held at zero degrees will not.

About 40 large drawers are in the back of the cabinet for storing additional merchandise and supplies.

Leonard Swanson built the cabinet for Josten. He did a very nice job, better than a factory unit could have been built.

The Bulldogs got off to a 6-3 lead at the quarter which they stretched into 18-13 at the half. At one point in the third quarter the Shamrocks were 10 points in the deficit column but whittled it back and were trailing only 1 point at the end of the third, 26-25. With 1 minute and 12 seconds left in the final stanza the Shamrocks looked like they had a comfortable 3-point lead,, 31-28 when they lost control of the ball on a basket attempt which Kanawha grabbed and raced for a bucket. A free toss and another quickie won the Bulldogs the game.

Josten rang up 14 counters, Kaduce 9, Schmidt 6 and Pearson 2.

In the third the Shamrocks rang up 9 more as Corwith made 6. In the last quarter the highly touted Corwith team found their shooting eye and outscored the Shamrocks by dumping in 8 points, while the Shamrocks coasted along on a field bucket and a toss to end the game ahead 33-21.

The Shamrock scoring was well divided with Josten leading with 11, Kaduce 9, Brinkman 5, Pearson 6 and Laverne Schmidt 2.

The Go-Getter Son Learned To Take It Easy, Live Awhile

By BILLY ROSE

It was one of those days. What with the phones going, a show rehearsing in my theatre, and people popping in and out, my office was like backstage at an Olsen and Johnson musical.

One of my appointments was with an ex-soldier who had recently returned from the Pacific. Like a thousand other kids, he was anxious to get a job in show business. I told him I'd get in touch with him if anything turned up, and asked him to excuse the short interview because I was rushed. He smiled and walked to the door

"What are you grinning about?" I asked.

"Oh, nothing," he said. "I just happened to think of another fellow who was in a hurry

The way he said it made me curious "Tell me about the other fellow," I said.

Bill Rose

"He was nobody important," said the ex-G I. "He and his father farmed a small piece of land, but except for their name and the patch of ground, they had little in common. The old man believed in taking it easy. The son was the go-getter type.

"One morning, they loaded the cart, hitched up the ox and set out for the city. The young fellow figured that if they kept going all day and night, they'd get to the market by next morning. So he walked alongside the ox and kept prodding it with a stick.

" 'Take it easy,' said the old man. 'You'll last longer.'

" 'If we get to market ahead of the others,' said his son, 'we have a better chance of getting good prices

"THE OLD MAN pulled his hat down over his eyes and went to sleep on the seat. Four miles and four hours down the road, they came to a little house. 'Here's your uncle's place,' said the father, waking up 'Let's stop in and say hello.'

" 'We've lost an hour already,' complained the go-getter.

" 'Then a few minutes more won't matter,' said his father. 'My brother and I live so close, yet we see each other so seldom.'

"The young man fidgeted while the two old gentlemen gossiped away an hour.

"On the move again, the father took his turn leading the ox. When they came to a fork in the road, the old man directed the ox to the right. 'The left is the shorter way,' said the boy.

" 'I know it,' said the old man, 'but this way is prettier.'

" 'Have you no respect for time?' asked the impatient young man.

" 'I respect it very much,' said the older fellow. 'That's why I like to use it looking at flowers.'

"The right-hand path led through woodland and wild flowers. The young man was so busy watching the sun sink he didn't notice how lovely the sunset was. Twilight found them in what looked like one big garden. 'Let's sleep here,' said the old man.

" 'This is the last trip I take with you,' said his son. 'You're more interested in flowers than in making money'

" 'THAT'S THE NICEST thing you've said in a long time,' smiled the A minute later, he was as

"Before sunrise, the young man shook his father awake and they went on. A mile down the road, they came upon a farmer trying to pull his cart from a ditch. 'Let's give him a hand,' said the father.

" 'And lose more time?' asked the son.

" 'Relax,' said the old man. 'Some day you may be in a ditch yourself.'

"By the time the other cart was back on the road, it was eight o'clock. Suddenly a great flash of lightning split the sky. Then there was thunder. Beyond the hills, the heavens grew dark.

" 'Looks like a big rain in the city,' said the old man.

" 'If we had been on time, we'd be sold out by now,' grumbled his son.

" 'Take it easy,' said the old gentleman. You'll last longer.'

"It wasn't until afternoon that they got to the top of the hill overlooking the town. They looked down at it for a long time. Finally the young man who had been in such a hurry said, 'I see what you mean, father.'

"They turned their cart around and drove away from what had once been the city of Hiroshima."

A Certain Cure

I HAVE often known a heart to find quick comfort
Through reaching out to help another's woe
There is a healing in it, a forgetting
Of one's own self that starts an inner glow
Of warmth and light where there had been but ashes,
Sodden and gray because of some deep grief,
And suddenly a golden flame starts singing
Because another's heart has found relief.

Across the world there are so many burdens
Long borne by shoulders bent beneath their load.
A cure for care—a healing of one's sorrow
May be found in the lifting of a load,
The sharing of it with some staggering brother . .
O burdened one, to find a certain peace
Go forth, reach out to help where help is needed,
And surely your own quivering hurt will cease.

Thunderstorm 'Batteries' Charge Earth's Energies

LOS ANGELES.—A giant electrical system, with the sun as a generator, thunderstorms as batteries and the earth and the ionosphere as a condenser was pictured in a recent seminar on the Los Angeles campus of the University of California by Dr. Robert E. Holser, professor of geophysics.

On the average of 1,800 "thunderstorm batteries" are busy at all times maintaining the negative charge of the "earth-ionosphere condenser," he said.

The concept of thunderstorms maintaining the earth's negative charge is not entirely new, Dr. Holzer pointed out. Nobel prize-winner C. T. R. Wilson suggested it several years ago. Current investigations tend to bear out that hypothesis.

The greatest number of thunderstorms occur when it is afternoon over such land areas as South America and Africa. Measurements of the earth's charge indicate that it is at the maximum during this period.

Further investigation in this field may prove highly significant to weather forecasting, Dr. Holzer said.

Rubber Mask Fad Attracts Attention Of Mental Probers

NEW YORK.—The wearing of rubber masks by otherwise normal people—a practice that apparently is spreading rapidly in the bigger cities—has engaged the attention of the psychiatrists.

Why are the masks going like "hot cakes?" Why are so many ordinary people buying false faces to make them look like witches, pirates, glamour girls and boys?

According to the mental probers, folks who wear the masks are just "little guys who don't think much of themselves and are trying to show a brave, bold face to the world.

The psychiatrists put it into longer words, but that's the gist of their diagnosis.

According to a clerk in a drug-store at 51st and Sixth avenue, the store sells on an average of 100 masks a day—to businessmen, well-dressed women, "all sorts of people."

For $1, it appears, you can transform yourself instantly into a pirate, a witch, a glamourpuss, the devil or 10 other assorted personalities.

You'll look real enough to scare yourself too. The masks are thin, face-fitting, and realistic down to the last wen and wrinkle.

Most of those on the market are turned out by designer Keith Ward and manufacturer Fred Hagemann. Production started last May and they can't keep up with orders. Chain stores are selling masks all over the country.

Enter now the psychiatrist, Dr. J. L. Moreno.

How, doctor, do you account for this mass masquerading?

"Many people," he says, "are dissatisfied with themselves, with their personalities.

"Wearing a mask does two things for them. First, it hides their faces. It enables them to become anonymous. Second, it enables them to play at being someone else—someone more glamorous, perhaps.

"I am not surprised that many persons have taken to wearing masks. It was a perfectly natural development, once the masks became available. A relatively harmless development, I should say. Much better than becoming a blind, anonymous follower of some Hitler."

Power Issue Spreads

WHEN ONE THINKS of hydro-electric power, the average person at once turns to the far west or the far northwest, where these great dams have been constructed to harness the rivers for the development of cheap public power

Therefore it seems almost incongruous that hydro-electric power and the cost of private power has become a burning issue in the highly industrialized New England states.

The facts are, however, the power question has become so important it is involved in the coming political campaign with the Democrats promising to harness some of the rivers in the New England section to provide cheap public power and the Republicans pointing to the coverage of the solidly industrial sections, even the rural areas, with privately owned electricity.

There can be no denying the fact, however, that New England as a whole has the highest industrial and residential electric rate in the nation. This question is not a new one in New England. It has been seething since industry began to move away from the New England states, starting with the textile industries. And labor leaders declare it is not southern labor which has lured so many of these industries away from New England and into the southland, but it is the hgh cost of electricity.

Already several measures have been introduced in congress setting up regional authorities for the development of the Connecticut and other rivers and the fact that none of these has as yet seen the light of day, insofar as any congressional action is concerned, may be a reason why this issue has become such a hot one in the 1950 election.

The lobbyists set up another record of spending in the 81st congress, with totals for the first nine months of 1949 showing that 253 lobby organizations spent $8,693,622 for the period. Of all these organizations the American Medical association was the biggest spender with an outlay of almost 1.25 million dollars in its fight to defeat the administration health insurance measure.

Study Business Failures

Although small business failures are not happening at an alarming rate, and as a matter of fact are far below the rate which was considered normal back during the lush years of the 1920's, a joint congressional economic committee has been studying the causes and effects of these failures. One reason considered was the lack of so-called "risk" capital. Commercial banks are not permitted to make this type of loan today. And so one proposal is to form a number of capital banks in each federal reserve district which would make risk loans to smaller enterprises The banks would operate under the authority of the federal reserve bank and under general policies laid down by congress and administered by the federal reserve board.

Dried Egg Surplus

The annual industrial use of dried eggs in the country is about seven million pounds for noodles, cookies, mayonnaise and other products.

The government now has 63 million pounds on hand, enough to last about nine years at the present rate. This 63 million pounds cost the commodity credit corporation 81 million dollars.

How much of this will be lost of course cannot be known at this time. And speaking of surpluses, the government also has on hand 175 million pounds of skim milk, nearly 55 million pounds of butter and 2.25 million pounds of cheese.

Junket Trips

With scores of members of the house and senate on junket trips in various parts of the world at taxpayers' expense, word comes from some senators in transit that they believe Marshal plan aid can be cut to some countries. If true it will certainly be an easy way to balance the budget once congress reconvenes next January.

Truman Pattern

President Truman has set the pattern for answering the Republican charges that his Fair Deal program would constitute socialism or a welfare state. The President says the Republicans are afraid of more democracy, that his program will give the people more freedom, not less, that "between leftist reactionaries who talk about revolution, and stand patters to the right who say it means bankruptcy," the truth is

CALL A DOCTOR

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

OGDEN TURNED over in bed, muttered, then sat bolt upright. There was a wild, unholy light in his eyes. Great globules of perspiration stood out on his forehead His hands felt cold and clammy.

For a moment he sat rigid and tense Slowly he relaxed. Then he switched on the bedside light. Five a.m. In four and a half hours it would be over. He would have entered Mr Mitchell's office and said, in effect: "Mr Mitchell, I have worked for you for three years. I am a valued employee and feel that I deserve more money." And Mr Mitchell would reply—Well, what would Mr Mitchell reply"

He got out of bed without waking his wife. It was 5:30 and still dark. He went into the bathroom and turned on the shower. At 6 o'clock, fully dressed, he came downstairs. He put coffee on to boil, set a frying pan over a gas jet, cut open an orange plugged in the toaster.

Presently he sat down to eat. He ate automatically Food was tasteless in his mouth

He left the house without waking Helen During the half hour it took him to reach the office he was beset by all sorts of terrifying fancies He grew hot, then cold He changed his mind twice about approaching Mr Mitchell. He thought he'd postpone the ordeal. Then he pictured himself coming home to Helen Helen was proud of him. What would she think if he had to admit lacking the courage to face a common ordinary man like Mr. Mitchell?

Now, there was something. Mr Mitchell was, after all, nothing more than a common ordinary man. Like himself. Built the same way. Capable of having toothaches and stomachaches and liking his eggs fried only on one side. Just a man.

Ogden tried to picture himself in Mr. Mitchell's position. What would he do if an employee of three years asked for a raise? What? Why, he'd look at the matter coldly, impersonally. He'd add things up and decide whether or not the employee was worth more to him in dollars and cents. He'd try to figure out in his own mind how little he could get away with paying.

Ah! There was something now. If you asked for a raise, act as though you deserved it. Give the impression that the possibility you weren't worth more never entered your head. It was merely a matter of arriving at a figure.

People spoke to Ogden when he entered the office. Then they looked at him curiously. He wasn't the same. He was ill. Or perhaps he had a hangover. He seemed pale. His hands trembled when he hung up his hat. He was sweating. Perhaps he should call a doctor.

AT 9:05 Mr. Mitchell came in, nodding and speaking to everyone as he always did. Ogden opened his mouth to reply, but no sound came.

He wet his lips, started to rise, sat down again weakly. Mr. Mitchell's door opened. Mr. Mitchell came out. "Ogden!" he yelled, and his voice had a rasping sound.

Ogden jumped. What had he done now? Certainly Mr. Mitchell acted as though he was going to bail him out. Perhaps fire him. Good. Firing would be a relief. It would settle the whole problem. He could tell Helen that he had asked for a raise and Mitchell had fired him and it was her fault.

Mr. Mitchell was behind his desk when Ogden entered.

"Ogden, I've been thinking about you. You've proved yourself valuable to the firm. That western deal now. You did a good job. You have the sort of stuff we need in this organization. I'm the sort of man who believes in paying a man what he's worth. Now, I need a junior partner. If you're interested I'd like to groom you for the post. You'd start at double your present salary. Then in a year Hey! Miss Ryan! Quick, a glass of water. Ogden's fainted! Good Lord, call a doctor!"

Star Dust STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

WHEN JOHN DEREK first came to work at Columbia for "Knock on Any Door," in which he shot to stardom, he said "I never knew a temperamental player to get anywhere. You don't have to worry about my getting that way." Perhaps the reason is that he was born in Hollywood, and that both his parents are actors. In New York to help publicize his new picture, the sensational "All the King's Men," Derek wanted to see the city, but got very little opportunity. Columbia press agents booked him so solidly for photo layouts and interviews, as well as for appearances on the radio, that he never really had any time for sightseeing.

Donald Woods, popular leading man, joins Bing Crosby and a star-laden cast in "Mr Music"; it's his first Paramount picture since he made "A Son Comes Home" with Mary Boland 12 years ago. In recent years Woods has been concentrating on radio—is currently being heard as wealthy "Richard Rhinelander" on "My Friend Irma" He plays another rich young man in "Mr. Music."

Use of a helicopter as a traveling camera crane proved to be so effective for chase scenes in "They Live By Night" that RKO is now using one regularly as camera carrying equipment. In this case the plane also had its value as an aid to drama; it hovered over the players, to create the feeling of a relentless fate pursuing them—and worked fine.

Jane Greer will break away from dramatic and romantic roles in "The Richest Girl in Jail," an original comedy which has been bought for her by RKO. As a very rich girl who lands in a small-town jail she will be a comedienne.

Joseph Julian, who plays the detective, "Sam Cook," on CBS's "Mystery Theatre," literally talks with his hands By working his clasped hands, compressing air between them, he makes word-like sounds—you should hear his "Mary Had a Little Lamb"!

A piece of parchment, apparently very old, and containing a message from Napoleon, is an important prop in "The Inspector General" The prop man aged it by applying glycerine and rubbing it with dirt; an expert forged Napoleon's signature.

Mayan Woman Bought Items Of Pottery During Revolt

LOS ANGELES. — The Mayan woman may have undergone periodic revolts against the status quo just as the modern housewife does, says Dr. G. W Brainerd, University of California at Los Angeles anthropologist and authority on Mayan civilization.

What did she do about it? She couldn't switch her living room furniture around, because she didn't have enough to bother with. She didn't go out and buy a new hat, because the Mayas didn't wear hats.

Dr Brainerd says she may have acquired a new set of pottery. A constant change in pottery-and-jug fashions, he points out, was a very fortunate thing for archaeologists and anthropologists today.

Pottery has been one of the main sources of the analysis of the cultural history of these ancient people. Without it we may have known much less about them than we know now, the U C.L.A anthropologist emphasizes

Dr. Brainerd and Dr W S. Robinson have worked out a statistical analysis technique of variations in patterns of buried ceramics. This new technique has made possible greater accuracy in determining the chronology of deposits in important Mayan sites

The Mayas, Dr Brainerd points out, didn't change their pottery design as regularly as women change fashions today But the change was enough to be of decided assistance in accurately determining the age of various ruins with the use of the statistical analysis method

ORIGINATED IN ENGLAND DURING THE 18TH CENTURY BY HUNTSMEN OF THE MIDDLE CLASS. DEPRIVED OF HUNTING GROUNDS BY THE RICH, THEY SOUGHT A SUBSTITUTE SPORT AND IN 1832 A GROUP CALLED THE "HIGH-HATS" WAS ORGANIZED. THEY PLACED LIVE BIRDS UNDER THEIR HATS, AND ON SIGNAL, LIFTED THE TOPPERS, CLAMPED THEM BACK ON THEIR HEADS, AND ONLY THEN ALLOWED THEMSELVES A SHOT AT THE SOARING BIRDS. SOON ARTIFICIAL TARGETS AND SPRING TRAPS DEVELOPED AND BY 1880, IT HAD A FOLLOWING OF THOUSANDS AND BECAME THE SPORT THAT WE KNOW TODAY

The Winnless Derby of 1950

Colonel Matt Winn, for the first time in 75 years, won't be present at the Kentucky Derby. But the late colonel's spirit will be with the great crowd and run down the stretch.

Grantland Rice

The 1950 derby can be one of the best of them all if unkind fate doesn't cut in and remove most of the leaders. Among the better possibilities for next May—a long way off in horseland—we have the following to consider.

Middleground from the King ranch set, Theory and Rearmed from Calumet, The Diver, Hill Prince, Curtice, Wisconsin, Guillotine (the Futurity winner), Greek Ship, Quiz Show, Ferd, Detective and More Sun. Among the many others some unknown may develop as Ponder was an unknown a year ago at this date.

Wisconsin Boy is a grand son of Teddy, and Curtice is a great grandson of the same able sire The Diver must certainly be given a big advance chance. The bay son of Devil Diver is a first class colt in every respect. He has speed and he has shown signs of liking distance

The greatest gamble in racing, or one of the greatest, is the switch from a two-year-old to a three-year-old. At this spot last season, Blue Peter and Mr Busher were the two leading two-year-olds Ponder hadn't won a race But neither Blue Peter nor Mr Busher had the chance to run and there were other good ones who were left out on the big Kentucky day Just at this spot the leaders must include, Middleground, temporarily resting, Theory from Calumet, The Diver, Hill Prince and Guillotine

It may be that all of these will be present when the derby is run next spring. It may also be that none of them will be present on that date. It also may be that if all are present, some outsider will do most of the running.

That's the way derbies go. Last fall at this date or months later, Ponder would have been 200 to 1. But no Calumet starter will ever get away again at any such odds as 18 to 1. That's one sage gamble you can make. The Jones family has done too well in Kentucky derbies in the past few years to be overlooked again.

A Kentucky Derby without Matt Winn will be a strange adventure Even if you never saw him, you knew the colonel was there, from 1875 on. To all who knew him, he will still be there in 1950

The Top Three-Year-Old

It was generally taken for granted some time back that Ponder would be named the three-year-old of 1949

But after Capot beat Coaltown there has been renewed chatter by Greentree supporters. They figure that while Ponder whipped Capot in the derby, Capot came back to beat Ponder in the Preakness and the Belmont, two extremely important tests. They'll also tell you that Capot had quite a lot to do with Ponder's victory in the derby by killing off Olympia.

Ponder ran extremely well in the Lawrence Realization stakes and also in the Jockey Gold Cup But Capot won the Pimlico Special on October 28. Suppose Capot should win Jim Butler's big International Gold Cup Race?

The racing season for 1949 isn't over yet. There are several things that can happen before the finish arrives in connection with the several awards to be made.

It might be mentioned here that a visit to Baltimore the latter part of October afforded a rare sporting adventure You got to see the Pimlico Special on a Friday and the Notre Dame-Navy football game on a Saturday

MOTORS

ELECTRIC MOTORS NEED PRE-WINTER CHECKING

Electric motors need a pre-winter check-up as well as other farm motors, according to Harold Beaty, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College.

He suggests giving electric motors the one-over, wiping out dust, excess moisture and excess oil. These three things may cause electric motors troubles. Keeping a motor clean, dry and properly oiled will do a lot toward keeping it on the job and out of the repair shop.

Dust in motor bearings or in the oil which lubricates its bearings can be as abrasive as emery powder. It sifts into a motor every minute the motor is working. Dust fills up open spaces in the windings, preventing proper ventilation and causing the motor to overheat and burn out. It quickly unites with moisture and excess oil to form a gummy substance that is hard to remove.

Proper and regular oilings is essential to the life of any motor, according to Beaty. But he says that oil improperly placed in or on a motor is dangerous. In addition to uniting with dust to smoother proper ventilaion, excess oil destroys insulation and may cause a motor to burn out. Follow directions of the manufacturer when oiling.

As for moisture, Beaty says the best rule is to keep a motor as dry as possible. Unless a motor is of splash-proof design, be sure that water does not splash on it. Keep portable motors inside when not in use. If a motor becomes wet, Beaty recommends having it dried off by a trained serviceman.

Polio Hitting More Adults Says Duke Epidemiologist

No longer an "infantile disease," poliomyelitis is now attacking persons over 20 to an increasing degree, according to a Duke hospital physician.

And, "when older persons are infected, there is a greater chance of paralysis and death," says Dr. D. S. Martin, epidemiologist at Duke.

"In the epidemic here in 1944," he pointed out, "only a few persons infected were over 20 years of age, but the case fatality rate was much higher in this group."

Meanwhile, "all over the world, almost without exception, this increase in the number of cases of polio in adults suggests that immunity is decreasing," Dr. Martin said.

In the New York City epidemic in 1916, 80 per cent of cases were in children under five, but in 1944, only 25 per cent of cases were in children of this age group.

Most significant aspect of immunity is that in rural areas there is apparently less immunity to the virus than in crowded cities. Explanation may be that people in crowded regions pick up the virus in small doses and develop an immunity.

One study showed, Dr. Martin said, that 71 per cent of the urban population in one area was immune, but only 20 per cent of the rural.

Generally, residents of suburban areas in the better-than-average income groups are hardest hit."

Immunity to polio is highest in tropical areas and in heavily-populated countries where sanitation conditions and living standards are lower. Frequent contact under poor conditions of sanitation permits the population to acquire the disease and develop immunity to it.

Know Your Feed Source, Is Advice to Stockmen

How animals may develop illness due to a mineral deficiency, even though that mineral is abundant in the local soil, is explained by the nutrition committee of the American Veterinary Medical association.

Many owners find it necessary to "import" hay and grain because they do not produce enough to feed their stock. "Take the example of an eastern stockman who buys hay and grain from the Great Lakes region," the committee said. "Iodine deficiency does not exist in that stockman's area, but it does exist around the Great Lakes. Because his animals are fed almost entirely on this iodine-deficient feed, borderline cases of goiter may develop. And the same goes for cobalt, manganese, and other minerals."

Producers of commercial feeds nearly always guard against this possibility by fortifying their products with essential substances not naturally present, the committee said.

But if stockmen mix their own feeds, they should know the source of the ingredients. Laboratory analysis should be made of feeds from questionable sources, and necessary vitamins and mineral added if the analysis reveals deficiencies, the committee advised.

Even Faster Jet Planes

Boeing XB-47 Stratojet, holder of the all-type transcontinental record at an average speed of 607 miles per hour, is to be equipped with even more powerful jet engines, Boeing Airplane company announces. Installation of the General Electric J-47 turbojets in one of the two experimental XB-47's will service test the new, higher power, engines for use in the production B-47's now being built for the use of the air force at the Boeing Wichita, Kans., division. Use of the new G-E J-47's will raise the total power of the Stratojet more than 25 per cent. Each of the new engines develops more than 5000 lbs. thrust, compared with 4000 lbs. thrust per engine of the earlier J-35 turbojets.

Home Accident Hazards

Your home is not a "haven of safety and happiness" unless it is free from accident hazards. You might ask yourself these questions to check on a few of the most usual points of difficulty: Are your rugs skid-proof? Do you have a screen for your fireplace? Are electric cords and plugs in good repair? Are there handrails for your stairways? Are windows opened for ventilation securely screened? When using a sharp knife, do you always cut away from you? Are poisons and medicines clearly labelled and stored out of reach of children? Do you immediately wipe up water and grease spilled on the kitchen floor? Is some member of your family qualified to give first aid?

Tarnished Silver

Tarnish can be removed from silver with an aluminum pan, containing water in which a spoonful or so of bicarbonate of soda is dissolved. Put the silver in the solution, and heat the pan if you want to speed up the process. A rather complex electrochemical reaction takes place, in which the sulfur is removed from the tarnish (which consists of a chemical combination of silver and sulfur) and the silver is redeposited.

FOR THE KITCHEN—

CHOOSE AN ELECTRIC CHRISTMAS

Big or little—there are many useful electric gifts for today's kitchen, electric mixers, grills toasters and waffle makers, to say nothing of hot plates, electric timers, clocks and coffee makers. Shoose wisely for best satisfaction, say home equipment experts.

Shining new mixers, irons, waffle makers, grills and other small electrical appliances fill the shop winodws. Dressed up in colorful ribbons and cellophane, they're offered as gifts for the family's Christmas stocking.

Nomi Shank, home management specialist at Iowa State College, has some tips to offer Christmas shoppers who have small electric appliances on their gift list.

Waffle Maker

A waffle maker brings the cooking and the cook to the table, she points out. With so many different types of waffles, you can use the maker to add variety to any meal. Look for a waffle iron that has an expansion hinge between the top and lower grid. Otherwise the waffle can't rise and is soggy.

A wide base to catch any batter overflow, a heat indicator and an automatic control are convenient features also. The bottom of the maker should be insulated to protect the table. Watch that the wires which connect the upper and lower grid are well insulated and won't be damaged when the iron is opened and closed, Miss Shank advises. Tests at Iowa State College have indicated that when the knobs on the grid are high and close together the waffles will be crisp. Soft, moist waffles are made when the knobs are shallow and farther apart.

There's no jumping up and down from the table when an electric grill is used for toasting sandwiches, frying eggs, broiling meats or baking griddle cakes. If you're making this appliance a Christmas gift, Miss Shank suggests that you look for the same qualities as those she listed for the waffle maker. Many grills feature a small drip pan beneath a spout to catch the grease and an extra set of grids for waffles.

Electric Iron

An iron is a welcome gift for any women. Be sure to check the guarantee, Miss Shank advises. It will usually tell you how many years you may expect the iron to last. If possible, try to find out what type of heating element is in the iron. A coiled wire element placed in the grooves of a porcelain insulating brick may wear out quite rapidly. Others which have a 3 to 5-year guarantee have a metal ribbon element wound on mica sheets. Lifetime irons usually have the wire embedded in an insulating material.

Check to see if the iron is comfortable to hold. The handle should be far enough away from the iron to prevent burns and should be heat-resistant.

Automatic heat controls which turn the heat off and on to maintain a constant temperature will prevent damage to the iron from over heating. The temperature indicator should have selections for different types of fabrics as well as high, medium, low and off.

Most families who have a mixer would never be without one again—they're that useful. In selecting a mixer, consider the size that will be needed by the person who will be using it. Some of the most inexpensive mixers have small motors which are not capable of mixing even semi-heavy batters. Choose a mixer which will be easy to clean.

If the safe size fuse or circuit breaker continues to "blow" when equipment is turned on or operating, don't substitute a larger fuse or circuit breaker to correct the trouble, Beaty cautions. It's probably time to start overhauling the wiring system. Replace old wiring with larger wire, or change some of the appliances and lights to other circuits if available.

CATTLE

MANY WAYS FOR CATTLE FEEDER TO SAVE LABOR

Labor saving and efficiency in feeding operations is important for all cattle feeders, says Rex Beresford, extension animal husbandman at Iowa State College. However, the overhead cost of maximum mechanization in storage, procession and handling of feed, and feeding operations often makes it impractical except for the big operator

There are some principles which apply to most conditions, Bereford says Convenient arrangement of feed storage, shelter, lots and gates will minimize the time and labor required in feeding and handling cattle

Haul, don't carry feed Where number are small, the feed wagon may serve as temporary storage bin in the feed yard. And fill the wagon directly from the silo, bins or hay storage As for water, Beresford suggests a constant and convenient automatic supply that is easily accessible to all stock

Where cattle are being full-fed, large-capacity self-feeders permit handling feeds in full loads with a minimum of labor

The paved feed lot is another saver of labor, as well as of feed and manure Pave at least around the water tanks and a 10-foot strip on each side of the feed bunks

FALL

A deep scalp wound clear across the top of her head, and other injuries resulted from the fall.

SHOT IN LEG

Symbolic Trains Dramatize CROP

A miniature railroad train is being used by approximately 2000 agricultural counties in the nation to dramatize their participation in the Christian Rural Overseas program (CROP), the overseas relief project of American churches.

After a county fills an actual railroad car with bulk commodities for the needy abroad, the county CROP chairman sends a miniature boxcar to state headquarters to be joined to the state train. Ultimately, the state trains will be joined into one long national train, symbolizing the expression of Christian brotherhood by Rural America. Rita Berger, of the Chicago CROP office, holds one of the symbolic Friendship Food Trains which are being distributed to counties.

The harvest season drive, to collect 3500 railroad carloads of commodities such as wheat, corn, milk and beans, now is in progress in this and 34 other top agricultural states. The program is sponsored by Catholic Rural Life, Church World Service (22 Protestant denominations) and Lutheran World Relief.

Owner Claims Mule Frightened to Death By Airplane Noises

CINCINNATI, OHIO. — Jack is dead—frightened to death by low-flying airplanes near here.

Jack was an eight-year-old mule owned by John Merkle, who was at work on a farm on North Bend road. Jack died with his harness on, Merkle said, as he pulled a sled.

Merkle declared that the strain on the mule's heart caused by the bedlam from the aircraft was "just too much" for Jack, who never had known a sick day in his life.

Mrs. Carrie Baum, who owns the farm where Jack was being worked, told of Jack's passing thusly:

"That mule was like a member of our family," she said. "He really belonged to Mr. Merkle, who runs the farm, but I handled him and worked him all the time.

"We had him hitched to an empty sled. My son, Louis, he's 22, was driving and I was leading Jack. Then those airplanes came over. They swooped down almost to the treetops and it looked like they were diving on us.

"Then it happened. Jack looked up at those planes for a second. He put his front feet out a little then started to back up He shook a little, too, then collapsed and died—right in his harness. When I saw his tongue get purple I knew he was dead. So I called a veterinarian.

"The doctor told me that Jack was scared to death, that his heart just stopped beating. The purple tongue and all—he had all the symptoms, the vet said."

Picture Hangs Upside Down Three Weeks; Artist Irked

COLUMBUS, OHIO.—Emerson C. Burkhart, Ohio artist, probably is still pondering the age-old query: "What IS art?"

Burkhart submitted a canvas for exhibition at an Ohio state fair. For an entire week, patrons visited the canvas, looked at it and said they admired it.

Then the artist strolled in to see how his work compared with others. He was stunned. Look, he told officials, this picture should be hung horizontal, not vertical.

"A colossal mistake," he complained to the director of the show.

The director took a natural, if not purely objective view of the situation. Why change it, was the gist of his answer. Everybody, the director said, liked the picture just as it was. The director stood his ground. The picture was unchanged.

The picture was the underside of an abandoned bit of machinery—really should have been exhibited horizontally.

Winged Visitor to Chicago Surprises Ornithologists

CHICAGO—A winged visitor to Chicago sent members of the city's ornithological society scurrying to their reference books. What they found there was hard to believe, but seven of them verified that they had seen a large-billed tern, a native of South America's inland rivers.

Emmett R. Blake, assistant curator of birds at the Chicago natural history museum, reported the closest a large-billed tern ever got to Chicago before was some years ago when one was spotted in the West Indies.

The species is a water bird, about 15 inches long, with a heavy chrome-yellow bill, olive feet and legs, and a square tail.

Car Owner Has Long Run Of Strange Misfortunes

NEW YORK.—Ed Roberts needed a change of luck after these things happened:

1. Vandals stripped the mirrors, hubcaps and spotlights from his convertible.
2. A pickpocket lifted $500 from him in a subway.
3. His brother got a ticket for speeding in Buffalo, N. Y., had a flat tire and smashed his fender.
4. His sister was caught in a jammed elevator and rescued by firemen.
5. Driving her home from the hospital, after a serious illness, Robert's convertible top wouldn't function when a sudden rainstorm broke.

Aviator Injured Holding Back Pilotless Plane

NEW YORK.—A young aviator was injured when he seized the tail of his runaway plane and managed to stop it from taking off without a pilot from Staten Island airport.

Arthur Serota, 26, of Corona, N. Y., said he was cranking the propeller of his two seat monoplane when its passenger, a 19 year old girl, accidentally pushed the throttle and the plane started to take off.

Serota grabbed the tail of the plane as it went by and attempted to hold it on the runway. He was dragged along the ground for several minutes before the plane came to a halt.

He suffered bruises, a cerebral concussion and a possible fractured shoulder.

PET SQUIRREL

A pet squirrel belonging to Mrs. Sigurd Tovson of Ossian created quite a stir in Decorah recently. It accompanied her there on a shopping trip and collected quite a crowd as it happily munched its lunch on the back of the front seat.

CLOVER

LADINO CLOVER IS FIT FOR ALL LOWA

It Is Good Crop To Include In Seedings That Are To Be Pastured

Ladino clover will be included in Iowa State College recommendations for rotation seedings for pasture in all parts of Iowa in 1950.

Last year agronomists recommended ladino for eastern and northeastern Iowa However, after observing its excellent performance this past summer in Iowa and other states, agronomists feel that they may have been to conservative in previous recommendations. In view of its good showing, they are now recommending ladino in limited amounts for all parts of Iowa.

The comparatively new legume does especially well in eastern and northeastern Iowa. It is being recommended in other parts of the state at the rate of ½ pound per acre with bromegrass and alfalfa, and with timothy and red clover mixtures where meadows are to be used for pasture during or following the first year.

Use In Rotation Seeding

Although ladino clover grows low and close to the ground it is finding increased use in rotation meadow seedings that are ultimately used for pasture, says H D Hughes, agronomist at the Iowa State College.

He advises Iowa growers to buy only certified seed, since it is impossible to tell ladino clover seed from that of ordinary white clover.

Development and changes in recommendations of this giant white clover are coming at just the right time to offset a marked shortage of other legume seeds. Seed production has been low on most legumes and grasses this year and the carryover from other years is also small. Too, with a cut in corn acreage expected in 1950, hay and pasture crop expansion is expected to increase the demand for grass and legume seed.

Other Seed Scarce

While the 1949 timothy seed crop is 51 percent larger than last year's, it is still classified as a small yield with current prices three times those of the 5-year average. The sweetclovr seed crop is the smallest on record while the 5 million pounds of bromegrass seed produced this year is approximately 52 percent of the 1943-47 acreage. Red clover seed supplies are down again this year, with the total figure down 13 percent from last year's,

The bright spot in the legume seed picture is ladino clover—with the largest crop on record. A considerable amount of ladino has been grown on Iowa State College experimental farms and by farmers in the eastern part of the state. Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Ohio have grown the new legume with success under most of the conditions to be found in the combinations of soil and climate Midwest.

Ladino clover was first imported from Italy about 1900 and is high-yielding, exceedingly palatable, and has a high protein content.

OAT RUST MAY BE HEAVY NEXT YEAR

Race 45 Is On Increase And Clinton Is Susceptible To Its Attack

There's a possibility of rust hitting Iowa's oat crop in 1950. That's why Iowa State College is recommending a shift of some oat acreage to Cherokee, Nemaha or Colo next spring.

Race 45 of crown rust is the one feared. It didn't hurt much in 1947 and 1948, but was found in Iowa's oat fields last summer. Race 45 along with a few other races of crown rust caused estimated damage last year of 10 to 15 percent, according to Arden Sherf, extension plant pathologist at Iowa State College.

Clinton oats and its close relatives are susceptible to race 45 of crown rust. In 1948 and last year 95 percent of the Iowa oat acreage was seeded to those varieties.

Don't Quit Clinton

The college men do not recommend quitting Clinton. It has too many good qualities. What is being suggested is that farmers seed a few acres to Cherokee, Nemaha or Colo, which have shown considerable resistance or tolerance to race 45. This procedure would help offset the possibility of rust causing severe losses to the entire oat crop, according to Sherf.

While Cherokee, Nemaha and Colo are not completely resistant to the rusts, hey stand up better under race 45 than do Clinton and other Bond strains.

Shelby, the new variety released under contract this year to a few farmers for seed increase, is expected to help ward off race 45. Shelby is a high yielder, has shown considerable tolerance to race 45 and a little more resistance to smut than Clinton. However, seed of Shelby is not available for seeding next year.

Change To Meet Diseases

Since 1941 Iowa farmers have faithfully followed the recommended oat variety changes made necessary by fungus diseases, according to Sherf. Since 1941, farmers have changed varieties twice. In 1941 such varieties as Boone, Tama, Cedar, Control and Vicland were introduced to stave off losses from most rusts and smuts. In 1946-47,Helminthosporium blight had struck these varieties and farmers shifted to Clinton, Benton and similar varieties resistant to the blight.

When Clinton was released, oat breeders and plant pathoiists explained that it was susceptible to a few races of crown rust, especially race 45 which at that time was of very minor importance. However, now that it is building up, another shift in oat varieties seems likely in the next several years, according to Sherf.

WINTER BEST TIME TO SEASON HEAVY LUMBER

Besides being a period when the farmer has plenty of time to cut timber, fall and winter is the best time to season heavy, dense lumber such as oak, says R. B. Campbell, extension forester at Iowa State College.

In summer months these heavy lumbers dry rapidly and may end-check in spite of proper piling.

Campbell advises picking out the larger trees, preferably those showing defects or some sign of deteriorating, for this year's cutting. He lists some other factors to consider in deciding which trees to cut.

First, check to see what effect removing each tree will have on the surrounding area. If removing the tree will aid the growth of nearby trees and give seedings a better chance to start, it's a good thing to do. On the other hand, avoid exposing large areas or leaving big gaps so hat the soil is left bare and exposed to extreme drying conditions.

Another important preliminary measure is to figure out a way to fell the tree so that young standing trees won't be damaged. Campbell recommends saving the smaller, sound trees for future use.

He suggests determining the number of board feet of native lumber needed for the coming year and then cutting just that much. Pocket-size tables for figuring the amount of usable lumber in standing trees may be obtained at county extension directors' offices or by writing campbell at Iowa State College, Ames.

...feed according to pro... This will require pro... ...ords and at least oc... testing of milk. Milk ...be had either through ...herd improvement ...the local dairy plant, or by owner sampling.

An analysis of records shows the importance of production efficiency. In 1949, DHIA cows averaging 337 pounds of butterfat returned $2.40 for every dollar's worth of feed, while cows producing at the Iowa average of $ 200 pounds of butterfat returned $1.74 for each dollar's worth of feed. Cows producing 500 pounds of fat returned $2.70 for each dollar of feed cost.

Labor Returns

Looking at the amount of return for labor, record analysis shows a loss of 25 cents an hour from cows producing under 175 pounds of butterfat. Cows averaging 337 pounds of butterfat produced a labor return of $1.16 per hour, or $1.41 more than cows averaging 175 pounds of fat. Cows in the 475 to 524-pound range paid their owners $2.08 per hour for labor.

Fincham says that under the present trend in prices, one needs to do a good job of feeding and management to increase the level of production rather than to put all the emphasis on labor saving.

Some management practices reduce labor and at the same time increase production, Fincham says. Proper milking is one example. Milking at the same time each day, washing udders, and milking fast decidedly reduce labor and increase milk output.

Set The Stage For Hospitality—

MAKE YOUR HOUSE GAY

Some evergreen, some plain ordinary candles and something you have on hand as center of interest, and you have a pretty table arrangement. Chrismas decorations need not be expensive, or even hard work to make.

What would Christmas time be without the scent of pine in the air, a tree laden with ornaments, bells and wreaths and gilded stars?

For the whole family, much of the fun of getting ready for the holidays is decking the house and making it gay. Mrs. June Brown, home furnishings authority at Iowa State College, says that's what Christmas decorating should be—good fun for the whole family. It doesn't pay to make hard work of it, she says.

She does believe, though in carrying your Christmas decorating "all through the house." It might even be fun to decide upon one theme this year, and use it from the front odor to the guest room upsairs. Suggestions might be red apples used with evergreen, or a combination of green ribbon with evergreen and pine cones or large tree ornaments. Flower pots, painted red or gold and turned upside down, make fine Christmas bells.

Use Your Own Ideas

Some of your Christmas decorating is traditional, of course. But there's no need to stick to the same way of doing things year after year. Any number of lovely and different decorations can be improvised with a little imagination. Your kitchen utensils, bits of bright-colored paper and ribbon, tree ornaments, dried catalpa or locust pods, a cluster of green bananas—all these can be used in decorating. Even a cluster of red peppers, evergreen and an old tray painted yellow-green can make an attractive centerpiece.

A common semi-circular kitchen grater, gilded, might make a "lantern" with a short candle burning inside. Set this in front of a background of evergreen. Cracked or broken pieces of kitchenware can be gilded and used in combination with evergreen, candles, or perhaps a figurine.

Make your own gilt paint with powder and thinner, Mrs. Brown advises. Inexpensive gilt paint which comes ready-mixed may have too much oil in it to stay on. Other helps for Christmas decorating and florists' wire and clay.

If you saved some green osage orange seed balls, you'll find they make pretty candleholders with a bit of gilt paint to give them extra sparkle. Large-size apples serve the same purpose. If you have a clear wide vase or deep bowl, you might set a fat, low candle inside along with nonflammable "angle hair" and ball ornaments.

Paper-Cutting Is Fun

The old game of folding and cutting paper can bring forth some pretty decorations, Mrs. Brown says. Get the youngsters to cut snowflakes from tissue paper, and paste them to a mirror or window. To make a Christmas tree centerpiece, simply cut two tall triangles of green paper, fold them down the center and set together, fold to fold, perhaps on a cirlce cut from blue paper. Top off with a gilt star or Christmas tree ball, and place other balls around the base. Whole "strings" of Christmas trees or angles cut from folded tissue paper can be used in many ways.

Christmas tree lights can add special glamor to many an arrangement. String them around a circular mirror and feature in the center Santa's sleigh and a small evergreen branch or two

CORNSTALK CUTTER CAN'T LICK BORER

In Tests It Has Killed Only About Half Of Borers Found In Stalks

Use of cornstalf cutters generally may aid corn borer control but you shouldn't expect the practice to do anything specific for the immediate corn borer problem on your farm.

Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist at Iowa State College, says that stalk cutters will beat up and scatter corn borers but they won't kill enough borers to make your corn crop borer-free next summer. Use of stalk cutters may dilute the corn borer population but won't eliminate the need for using insecticides next June if weather favors the borers.

In field demonstrations, stalk cutters have reduced borer populations all the way from 20 percent to 90 percent, and on the average 50 to 55 percent depending on the type of machine.

Need Spray or Dust

Even if you could destroy 90 percent of the overwintering borers, Gunderson says it wouldn't elimate need to spray or dust next June if conditions favor borers. In the fall of 1948 an average of 202 borers were present per 100 stalks in Iowa. Natural mortality caused by the weather and picking operations was about 50 percent, leaving 100 borers per 100 stalks to go through the winter. That number produced the borer crop that took the unprecedented slice out of the 1949 corn crop.

This year the average corn borer population for the state is 772 borers per 100 stalks. A 90 percent reduction if possible through destroying cornstalk residues would still leave 77 borers per 100 stalks next spring. This number under favorable conditions could lay enough eggs to hatch a crop of borers large enough to duplicate the 1949 damage, according to Gunderson.

Community Job

He also points out that adult corn borer moths fly. This means that a farmer who destroys overwintering borers may still find his corn infested next June through eggs laid by borers that overwinter in his neighbors' corn.

Gunderson doesn't discourage the use of stalk cutters, double disking or clean plowing before May 15 to reduce overwinter corn borer numbers. However, he cautions farmers not to rely on that one practice to do the whole job of corn borer control. Destruction of overwintered borers by any practical means is only one phase of corn borer control. It depends for success on community cooperation, and will not remove the possible need for insecticidal control on individual farms in early-planted corn in June, or in late-planted corn in August, according to Gunderson.

PONIES KILLED

A Halloween prank caused the death of four ponies at Lohrville Someone opened the gate to a field in which Winkelman & Sons kept 65 ponies. Four of them wandered out on the Great Western tracks and were killed by a freight train.

BUYING CLEAN SEED AIDS IN WEED FIGHT

Iowa farmers can get up their first line of defense against the ever-increasing weed problem by buying clean seed high in germination for 1950 spring planting, according to E. P. Sylwester, extension weed control specialist at Iowa State College.

A farmer can tell what is in the seed he buys and how well it will germinate by examining the tag. Seed that's been tested is labeled as to purity and germination.

Sylwester says that the assurance that seed is free from all noxious weeds is worth a considerable sum to the farmer who has worked to keep his farm free from noxious weed infestation.

Planting seed high in germination is a big aid to weed control. A thick stand of strong vigorous crop seedlings competes favorably with weed seedlings. It keeps the early weed crop in check until a farmer can get in the field with cultivating equipment or in broadcast grain until the crop is far enough along to crowd out weeds.

Sylwester recommends buying certified seed if possible. It usually is the best seed of a particular variety available. It has been inspected in the field and in the bin by an agency that deals with people who are interested in selling seeds of crops that will perform well, he points out.

Too, if seed is certified, farmers are guaranteed that they're getting the strain that they pay for and not another variety or a mixture.

BOW AND ARROW

Marvin Stratton, former resident of Oto, Iowa, recently bagged a deer with a bow and arrow. Stalking his quarry during a heavy fog, he let fly from a distance of 57 feet, and the arrow struck the deer in the shoulder, passed through the heart and out on the other side. The deer ran for about 100 yards before it dropped dead. Stratton is now a resident of Minnesota.

Ell Midgets Meet

The regular meeting of the Ell Midgets 4-H club was held at the Clifford Greiman home.

Our newly elected president, Lyle Goll, presided over the meeting. We made out our program schedule for the coming year. We discussed a club tour during Christmas vacation to see that the members get a proper start on their projects.

The meeting was adjourned after which table tennis and "500" was played. Lunch was served by Mrs. Greiman.

Four Red-Faced Detectives Nabbed as "Armed Men"

MT. VERNON, OHIO.—It was too hot for all this to happen, but it did—and the soaring mercury was the cause of it all.

Police here received a call that four armed men were heading North on Route 3 in an automobile. The state highway patrol, the sheriff's office and police went to work and set up a roadblock.

The sheriff of Columbiana county, headed for Ohio penitentiary with a prisoner, heard the police broadcast. He turned back to join the manhunt.

The roadblock worked, the "armed men" were halted—but they turned out to be four Cleveland detectives.

The dectectives had stopped along the highway near Sunbury to remove their coats because of the heat—and someone saw their service revolvers.

Percentages Scrambled In California Election

SAN CARLOS, CAL.— Residents of San Carlos figured either there were some ballot-counting shenanigans or statistics can't be trusted.

In a petition circulated to find out whether residents favored or opposed new sidewalks, 51 per cent of the population said "Yes," 51 per cent said "No."

The uproar caused City Clerk Beatrice Roberts to resign and Chief of Police Ed Wheeler was threatened with a lawsuit for false arrest for trying to eject from the city council a leader of the anti-sidewalk movement.

'Dream Voyage' Ends For Boston Engineer

PITTSBURGH.—The Seven Seas, "dream ship" for the Frank Potter family, ended an 11-month, 6,000 mile voyage here. The trip was begun at Boston where Potter, a sales engineer, dreamed his dream of a sea voyage, and then made the dream come true.

On its journey from Boston, the vessel—a 46-foot schooner carrying two masts—followed the Atlantic coast around Florida, crossed the Gulf of Mexico and sailed up the Ohio and Mississippi rivers.

Potter bought the schooner at a Long Island dock. He sailed her up to Boston, where he quit his job as a sales engineer, packed his wife and children aboard and set sail for his home town of Beaver.

After a brief stopover in Pittsburgh, the Potters set sail again up the Ohio river to Beaver. There the Seven Seas was to be put up for sale.

"Dreams have to end sometime," Potter philosophized. "Now we expect to settle down and buy a home and I'll have to hunt a job."

First Incubator Baby Asks It as Anniversary Present

CHICAGO—Perlee Mathers, who was America's first incubator baby, would like to have that incubator for his 59th birthday.

The incubator, first ever used in this country, saved Mather's life after he was born in 1890. At birth, he weighed only one pound and was only eight inches long.

Just as doctors despaired of keeping him alive, the incubator he now wants arrived in New York from France.

12-Year-Old Has Big Time Spending Pilfered $375

BOSTON—A 12-year old boy had a wonderful time spending $375 he pilfered from a pocketbook. He told police this is how he spent the money:

He spent $75 treating his pals to ice cream and soda pop.

He tore up $100 because he thought it was a counterfeit bill.

He gave $100 each to two friends.

One friend cashed his $100 bill in a store and the clerk kept $30 for making change. With the remaining $70 he bought a harmonica, a cowboy suit and a Sunday-go-to-meeting jacket and pants.

The thrifty member of the trio banked his $100 to buy new clothes for the fall school term.

Man Paralyzed 6 Years, Gets New Car, Cash From Friends

GREENVILLE, Pa.—The shiny new automobile rolled to a stop in front of the Ralph Riley home. Ralph, paralyzed for six years, guided his wheelchair to the street. A salesman popped from the car and asked Ralph how he'd like to try the special driving controls that eliminate the use of the feet in driving. Maybe, the salesman said, the controls could be fitted into Ralph's 10-year old car.

Ralph got into the car. The controls worked fine. Another auto pulled up behind him. Some people jumped out. They told Ralph the car was his. They also gave him a collapsible chair, $75 in cash and paint for the Riley house.

The gifts were from friends and former co-workers. Ralph was hurt while welding on a wartime ship order.

M.D. Lifts Own Appendix, Back at Work in 2 Days

TELLURIDE, COL.,—Dr. George C. Balderston was back at work, two days after removing his own appendix.

While at the American Legion hospital Dr. Balderston got all the proper tools together and summoned a friend, Dr. Richard Gladman, to stand by in case anything went wrong.

Then, without using mirrors, Dr. Balderston went to work. In a sitting position he handled the entire operation on himself and after about 45 minutes he closed the wound with clamps and stitches.

The idea?

"I wanted to get a first-hand reaction of a patient to local anesthesia. And I wanted to study post-operative effects."

He said he figured he'd proved patients should "get back on their feet as soon as possible after surgery."

He said he felt fine.

Parrots have no wishbones.

Historic City Of Colonial U.S. Still Is Growing

WILLIAMSBURG, VA. — The Colonial capital of Virginia now 250 years old is not content with its wealth of history and tradition, nor is it prone to just settle down and dwell on its past.

The past means everything, of course, to Williamsburg, but the old town isn't letting the vision of the past obscure its vision of the future. Instead, the old town is still growing.

Naturally, its growth isn't quite like that of other communities, for Williamsburg is unique in all the world. It is the restoration of an entire town, just as it looked and, to an amazing extent, just as it lived in those days when it witnessed the first great scenes leading to U.S. independence.

New-old Buildings

To mark its 250th anniversary, two new-old bulidings were dedicated; one an arsenal dating from 1716, the other a guardhouse first erected in 1755.

Two centuries ago, Williamsburg was the center of the political, social and commercial life of Virginia—the largest, wealthiest and most populous of England's American colonies.

Following the establishment of near-by Jamestown as the first permanent English settlement in America in 1607, the harassed settlers built a tall stake palisade across the entire Tidewater peninsula in an effort to curb the Indians and protect the settlements of the peninsula.

But the palisade did not guarantee peace for Jamestown. Finally after years of pestilence, massacres, fires and other privations, the general assembly passed an act in 1699 directing the building of a capitol and the city of Williamsburg on higher ground, six miles farther inland.

That same act gave explicit directions as to how the city was to be developed, one of the earliest examples of city planning in America.

Streets were carefully laid out with the pleasant addition of spacious public greens to set off the imposing public buildings. A certain uniformity of building was required and the foresight of those early day planners two and a half centuries ago is evident today in the dignity of the restored city.

Two-sided Nature

As capital of the colony, Williamsburg had a two-sided nature. During normal seasons it was a quiet college town, county seat and governmental center, but during the "publick times" when the house of burgesses was in session and the courts convened it became a teeming metropolis notable for "the prodigious number of coaches that crowded the deep and sandy streets." Plays, balls, entertainments, fairs and horse races were held and the money business of the colony was transacted.

Eighty years during that period saw the spark of liberty smolder and finally burst into flame as members of the house of burgesses, America's first legislative assembly, stoutly maintained the colonists' rights.

Such patriots and great Virginians as George Washington, Patrick Henry, Edward Pendleton and Thomas Jefferson were familiar figures along the streets. It was in the capitol building in Willamsburg that Patrick Henry made his famous "Caesar-Brutus" speech, shouting, according to tradition, "If this be treason, make the most of it," in protest to the stamp act.

Heavy Coat on Hot Day Trips Smuggling Ring

LONDON.—A man who made the mistake of wearing a heavy overcoat on a hot summer day was reported to have given Scotland Yard information that may break a huge international currency smuggling ring.

Police became suspicious of the unseasonal garb of Capt. Maurice Coppin, master of the Belgian ship Saphir, and questioned him. He was carrying a bullion belt and a briefcase containing $156,000 in gold bullion, gold coins, currency and industrial diamonds.

Coppin was sentenced to 18 months imprisonment after his attorney promised he would give Scotland Yard the names and addresses of members of the ring which allegedly operated in Paris, Brussels, Cairo and Marseille.

Man Sues Radio System To Get Elephant Prize

OXNARD, CALIF.—Any elephant given away on a radio quiz program would be a white elephant for most participants, but not for Mr. and Mrs. George King.

They filed suit against the Columbia broadcasting system for $3,000 damages; charging that a promised Indian elephant had not been delivered.

King, an elephant trainer, says he has been waiting for the pachyderm since Mar. 17, 1948, when his wife won it at a quiz show

What did he get? A case of peanuts, a suit of clothes and a ticket to a circus, where he could watch an elephant, says the complaint.

Gigantic Sea Turtle Hailed by Koreans As Prosperity Omen

SEOUL, KOREA.—An upsurge of spirits came to this republic recently with the arrival of a gigantic sea turtle—possibly the largest ever caught.

The turtle, getting into the spirit of things, downed three crocks of wine offered it by fishermen who snared it off the south tip of Korea.

"It's an omen," solemnly declared President Syngman Rhee. "The turtle is our symbol of longevity and prosperity. It means prosperity for the nation."

The turtle was described as being six or seven feet long and was estimated to be 1,000 years old.

President Rhee ordered it brought to the Seoul zoo and radioed the Korean embassy in Washington on the care and feeding of turtles.

The President wasn't kidding about the prosperity and longevity omen. It goes far back into Korean folklore and also is bolstered by history.

In 1592 the famous Korean admiral Yi Sun Sin devised a turtle-shaped ship credited with being the world's first armor-clad vessel.

With a small fleet of these strange craft, he thwarted an invasion by the Japanese dictator Hideyoshi, ramming and sinking the enemy ships with the great turtle-headed prow while archers fired flaming arrows from beneath the armored carapace. It was 300 years before Japanese seapower recovered.

Rhee did not mention this, but every Korean knows the story and will get the significance.

Report Made Gasoline Can Be Taken From Coal

WASHINGTON.—The federal bureau of mines has reported that gasoline can be made from coal to sell for only three or four cents a gallon more than natural gas.

The estimate was part of a report prepared by staff members of the bureau's coal-to-oil demonstration plant at Louisiana, Mo.

James Boyd, bureau director, said the report demonstrated that "unlimited quantities of premium gasoline now could be produced from coal at a cost that would increase the current service-station price by only three to four cents a gallon."

"Through the sale of by-products phenols, for which demand may be limited, a few initial plants could produce gasoline at an even lower cost," Boyd said.

On March 21 and September , day and night are of equal duration in every part of the world.

Chlordane Proves Itself Effective Against Ants

Newest and most effective insecticide against cockroaches—"water bugs"—and certain kinds of ants is chlordane, which has proved a more powerful killer of these particular pests than DDT, says Dr. F. Gray Butcher, entomologist of North Dakota Agricultural college extension service.

In the research being conducted by entomologists of the U. S. department of agriculture, chlordane shows promise also against carpet beetles, clothes moths and some other household insects, but further testing is needed before recommendations are made.

Two-percent chlordane sprays, with oil or water base, now are for sale in many department, drug and hardware stores under various trade names. When buying, shoppers should note whether 2 per cent chlordane is among the ingredients listed on the container. Oil-base sprays are transparent and often slightly straw-colored; water-base sprays look milky white. Both evaporate after spraying leaving an invisible odorless film on surfaces to kill pests coming in contact with it. The killing power of the film lasts weeks or even months.

Butcher advises that chlordane should not be used for general spraying of rooms, as DDT may be used. It should be directed only on places where the insects crawl, hide or enter the house. If preferred, it may be applied with a paint brush.

In general, use the same precautions as when spraying with DDT or other insecticides. Remove foods and utensils in the kitchen before spraying cupboards and replace them only after the spray dries. Wash hands after using. Any oil spray may irritate skin, nostrils or throat so care should be taken to have the room well-ventilated and to aim the spray carefully.

Nazi War Crimes Evidence Exhibited at Duke Library

Complete records of the Nazi war crimes trials at Nuernberg have been received by the Duke university library.

Thirty-nine wooden cases, weighing more than two tons, made up the shipment. Duke was one of 12 institutions in America chosen to receive the documents. Two other Southern universities were selected, the Universities of Georgia and Arkansas.

Copies of the evidence presented in the trials amounts to 132,855 pages. This does not include the accounts of the early trials of top-ranking Nazis in 1945-6.

The Duke law library received a complete transcript of these early trials, totaling 17,077 pages, in February, 1947, through former law school dean H. C. Horack.

The documents are available to the public in this country at Duke and the following other places:

The United Nations at Lake Success, N.Y., New York public library, Military Academy at West Point, Harvard law school, University of Washington law school, Stanford and Northwestern universities and the Universities of California, North Dakota, Georgia and Arkansas.

Value of Astronomy

Astronomical observations are necessary for the determination of time and of accurate positions on the surface of the earth. Modern physics is closely allied with astronomy because in the stars we may observe atoms under conditions of temperature and pressure that we can never hope to duplicate on earth. Scientists first learned that atomic energy could be released by studying the sun and stars, where such processes are going on all the time. However, the chief value of astronomy is probably a philosophical one that is no less real even though it is intangible, and that is the concept it has given us of the place of man in the universe of which he is part.

Swine and Salt

Allowing swine to consume excessive amounts of salt without giving them all the water they can drink is worse than feeding no salt at all, according to a veterinary bulletin. Two severe outbreaks of salt poisoning are described in which affected pigs developed convulsions, paralysis and blindness, and some of them died.

One of the outbreaks was blamed on failure to provide enough salt during the fattening period followed by an abrupt change to a feeding schedule that allowed the pigs as much salt as they wanted. Being starved for this mineral, they ate too much of it. In the other outbreak, snow had melted into a salt dispenser and pigs drank the brine.

Aid to Cancer

Recent animal studies indicate that a new radioactive cobalt-nickel alloy material made in the atomic ovens at Oak Ridge, Tenn., may, like radium, become a useful aid for the treatment of cancer. Available both as wire and in the form of needles, this alloy can fit into certain places impossible to reach with radium. A break in a radium gas-filled needle may cause injury to a patient or contaminate the surroundings, but a similar break in the radioactive wire makes no difference.

HERE ARE IDEAS FOR—

CHOOSING BECOMING CLOTHES

Whether you buy ready-mades or make your own clothing, consider more than just the color and line of the garment, suggest Iowa State College clothing specialists. Becoming clothes are those which also suit your personality.

Ever stop to wonder why some clothes look just right on you and you like them very much, while others, which may look pretty on the hanger, do absolutely nothing for you?

That's not so hard to understand, say clothing specialists of Iowa State College. The reason may be that you haven't considered that unknown quality known as your personality or expressiveness.

Figure, coloring and expressiveness all play an important role in choosing clothing But, say clothing authorities, if only figure and coloring are considered, then the picture is not complete.

For example, short women are often told to wear long lines to make then appear taller. But that advice doesn't always work A very severe dress or suit with long lines may look to severe on the short woman who has a dainty air and informal personality But her friend, who has a rather dignified, reserved manner, may look fine in a plain, long-lined dress.

The same is true with color Not all blue-eyed blondes will look equally well in sky blue and dainty pink. The more dignified, reserved blondes are much more striking in the richer and quieter tones of pink or blue.

Now what about expressiveness? You may be passing a store window and in it see a dress that makes you exclaim "That dress looks exactly like Jane Brown." You do not mean that it is 5 feet, 4 inches tall, and weighs 120 pounds, nor that it is the blue of Jane's eyes. Rather you mean that there is something about that dress that has the same kind of look Jane Brown has. Perhaps it repeats her appearance of delicate dignity, or, if she is cute and pert, something about that dress may make you think of "cute and pert."

Suit Your Personality

You are probably not completely a soft, dainty person or a strong, dignified or reserved woman. For that reason the following characteristics which are well suited for the definitely soft, dainty and delicate woman or those for the definitely striking, forceful woman, must be modified to suit your own appearance-personality

For a delicate looking woman, the lines of the dress are short and gently curved There are no long, unbroken, up and down lines or panels. Designs in the fabrics are small, all-over figures which blend with the background. Buttons, bows, lace, tucks and all the other decorative features are small in size and placed to break up the plainess of the dress. Thiness and delicate crispness are characteristics of the texture of the fabric.

On the other hand, the striking, forceful, dignified woman would more often wear long, unbroken, up and down lines. Patterns in the materials can stand out from the background and be medium to fairly large in scale. Decorative features will be larger and plainer such as large, plain pockets, wide bands and wide, plain yokes. The colors will be darker, richer and more vivid to express dignity. There will be more contrast in dark and light than for the soft, dainty woman. Fabrics will have more of the feeling of richness and heaviness.

ICE BOX

An old icebox nearly cost the life of four-year old Charles Fuller of Jefferson. He wandered away from home and a search was instituted. On a hunch, police opened the ice-box which was in an old garage building and found the youngster in there with his cat. Charles was close to suffocation but still able to say, "Here I am."

What Is a Seiche?

A seiche (pronounced saysh) is a stationary wave, or see-saw motion of the body of water as a whole. Seiches are most often observed in near-landlocked ocean bodies such as San Francisco Bay and Honolulu harbor. They may be initiated by heavy winds or distant seismic action, but their continuance and period of oscillation depends on the length, width, and depth of water in the bay.

FISHING

SEASON CLOSED ON INLAND FISHING

The season on all inland game fish, except bullheads and crappies, on which there is a continuous open season, closed Nov. 30th. Rough fish, including sheepshead, redhorse, suckers, gizzard shad, mooneye, goldeye, carp, buffalo, quillbeck, carpsuckers, gar, dogfish, eel, burbot and chubs, are also on the continuous open list.

Conservation officials termed the 1949 fishing season average, with some lakes producing excellent fishing far above average and others below. Early stream for catfishing was excellent, with midsummer and fall fishing far below par.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Healthy Love Creates Health

By Lawrence Gould

Can love be a cause of illness?

Answer: In itself, No. For love is a source of happiness or pleasure and these create health not illness But love for a person who is unattainable, or of whose return love you're uncertain, may arouse anxiety and "nervous tension" that will be both mentally and physically harmful The less sure you are of your own worthiness to be loved, the more anxious you'll be, and while you will probably attribute your "lovesickness" to the loved one's being fickle or capricious (as may be true) it will be your self-doubt that makes you so vulnerable.

Do men speak in softer tones to women?

Answer: Not instinctively, at any rate, reports Dr John D Black, Minneapolis psychologist in the Journal of Speech and Hearing Disorders. In experiments intended to find whether the pitch at which you are spoken to affects the loudness of your answer, it was noted that thirty male college students responded more loudly to a woman's voice that to a man's of equal volume If this is the way that most men react, it might be because to the average male the presence of a woman is a challenge to his self-assertive instincts

Are single women lonelier than bachelors?

Answer: I know of no way to prove it, but I am inclined to think so And there are some realistic reasons for it. For instance, a single woman is less welcome than an unattached man at most parties, and there are still many places where she cannot go without an escort. But this does not mean that every single person would be happier married If you find it hard to "compromise" with other people's tastes and ideas, the home that sometimes appears so empty without anyone to share it will at least be happier than one filled with conflict.

What Is a Psychoneurotic?

By Dr. James W Barton

IN THESE DAYS when all of us are more or less upset for various reasons, we can understand why the nervous, emotional, anxious individual is greatly upset. This mental and emotional disturbance affects the various organs and processes of the body, so that this type of individual is constantly consulting his physician or many physicians in an effort to be free of these various symptoms. We call this individual a neurotic

A good definition of a neurotic is given by Dr. Joseph L. Felterman, Cleveland, in the Merck report:

"The psychoneurotic is one who has failed to make an adjustment to life, who is troubled by inner conflicts of a greater degree than the average, and whose conflicts lead to a tendency to unhappiness, poor adjustment to others and to a great variety of physical complaints for which there is no organic basis or cause."

Sometimes the symptoms are limited to one region, but they are more likely to be in a number of regions—heart, stomach, intestines, head, joints—and change often from one region or organ to another. Some of the symptoms pass away quickly, others seem to remain in the one region or organ. While some neurotics have a woebegone expression others assume the attitude of being indifferent to their sufferings.

Unfortunately for the physician, many neurotics are above the average in intelligence, yet fail to understand how their inner mechanisms convert disappointments and frustrations into disturbing physical derangements.

Most physicians blame neurosis on parents who allowed the youngster to complain of illness when he was forbedden to do something he wanted or bidden to do something he did not want to do. Thus when the child grows up, he develops symptoms only "when overwhelmed by major trials and rejections of life."

The treatment of the neurotic is a thorough physical examination in case some physical ailment is really present. If present, it is treated. Then follows an estimation by the physician as to the extent to which his emotional disturbances are to blame for his symptoms.

Lesson for December 11, 1949

ELECTRICITY was discovered, long ago, but there are millions of people today who never use it and don't know anything about it. Modern plumbing has been in use ever since most of us were born; but most human beings still walk for their water instead of getting it from pipes All inventions take quite a while to get around. So it is in the realm of the spirit. Jeremiah the prophet, it has been said, is the "man who discovered the individual." But 2700 years after his time, the individual needs rediscovering. Even in the church, some people live and act as if Jeremiah's discovery had never been made.

A Man Stands Alone

ALTHOUGH JEREMIAH was a priest and aristocrat by birth, his own class disowned him The story in Jeremiah 26 shows dramatically why this was. He predicted doom for his nation, and since his own "upper-bracket" people were the nation's leaders, they considered Jeremiah's attitude not only unpatriotic but a downright personal insult.

If it had been left to the priests and the official prophets, the day of Jeremiah's sermon at the temple would have been his last. To put it bluntly, the difference between Jeremiah and all the other "prophets" and priests could be put this way: He knew the nation was too rotten to last, but they thought it was plenty good enough.

They probably could have agreed with him that a wicked nation deserves divine punishment, only they could see nothing wrong with Judah.

Religion by Proxy?

THEY were mistaken many ways. Mistake number one: They thought the Temple, with all that went on in it, was much more important to God than it really was. The whole business—Temple, white-robed priests, chanting choirs, the burning of animals, the incense and the mystic lights—it had become in their eyes a sort of immense good-luck charm. They thought. Surely God will not destroy a city that contains this Temple!

But Jeremiah saw through that mistake. Institutions, rituals, organizations, ceremonies, sacraments, these are all simply means to an end, they have no value in themselves. Everything we call "public worship" is good only if and so far as it lifts and cleanses the spirits of the worhipers and brings them nearer God.

The most perfect and impressive worship, engaged in by those whose hearts are evil, beomes a blasphemy A fine church is no substitute for fine people. A beautiful worship program will not conceal from God's eye unbeautiful souls.

Mistake number two. The priests and prophets supposed there was such a thing as religion by proxy. They thought the priests by carrying on their duties could take care of the situation.

God writes on the heart

ANOTHER MISTAKE made by those poor fools of false prophets and priests was in supposing they had the Law of God, when all they had was two tables of stone shut up in a box (I Kings 8:9). They were proud of those tables of stone, they were the Commandments of God, and they were guarded most carefully in the Holy of Holies in the Temple Surely, God would not destroy the city that possessed the Sacred Law! But Jeremiah knew better. In the long run, the only place the Law of God does real good is when it is written on the heart.

In Jeremiah's most famous prophecy (chap. 31) he looks forward to the day when God's handwriting shall be not on tables of stone but on human hearts. That prophecy is being fulfilled day by day as persons turn their hearts to the Lord and open the book of their lives that God may write his laws there.

Yet how many people have never learned this truth! Having a great tradition is good; owning and reading the Bible is good; but it is not the Bible on the shelf that counts, not carrying a testament in the pocket, but the Word of God "hid in the heart" of those who know, love and do what God desires.

S.S. Class Will Meet

The 50-50 Class of the Klemme Methodist Sunday School will meet for a Christmas party Tuesday evening, December 19th.

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

By R. A. Jorgenson, Sr.

The way we look at it, and we are far from being alone in our views, is that Hancock County should be divided into three supervisor districts.

At their first meeting in Jan., on even years, the Board of Supervisors have the authority to set up supervisor districts. This is the year the Board can set up the districts and it looks like an opportune time. In the past the Board has used the excuse that it was not the proper time because of candidates in the field that it would be unfair to set up a district at that time.

Hancock County is one of the three or four counties in the State using the old county-wide plan of electing supervisors at large. All the other counties have supervisor districts and the people vote for their own supervisor in their own district.

Hancock County can be easily divided without upsetting the present plan. It can be divided so that road maintenance and county machinery would still remain in its own district as at present.

With this plan in mind, as an example: District 1 would have the townships of Crystal, Madison, Ellington, Garfield, and Concord. The machinery is at present located at Crystal Lake, Miller and Garner.

District 2 would be Erin, Liberty, Ell, Amsterdam, Twin Lake and Avery. The machinery is at present located at Kanawha, Goodell and Klemme.

District 3 would be Bingham, Orthel, Britt, Boone, and Magor. The machinery is now at Woden, Britt and Corwith.

District 2 is one township larger in area, but one district must have 6 townships, the other two 5 each. Townships cannot be split. District 3 would be slightly larger in population, but that would make but little difference.

With the above plan in effect, each district would vote for their own supervisor, which is as it should be. On the present plan of county-wide voting it could be possible that all three supervisors could reside in the same township. Probable, but not very likely to happen.

The district plain is fairest to the voter. He votes for the man he really wants in his own district, and not for some man way out in the other part of the couny whom he does not even know very well.

The Board at their January meeting can put this plan into effect. They do not need any petitions to act on as the law gives them full power to set up the districts. This is not anything new, it has been talked about for years, but like the weather, there has never been anything done about it. This is the year to act. This is fully provided for by Sections 331.8 to 331.11, inclusive, of the 1946 Code of Iowa.

Auxiliary Has Christmas Party

With Mrs. Carrie Schwichtenberg presiding, the Klemme American Legion Auxiliary met Tuesday evening, December 6, at the Community Hall. Mrs. Margaret Thomas was appointed to send a Christmas card and a money gift to the boys still in service. Mrs. Leafy Coobs, rehabilitation chairman, gave a report on the gifts and supplies sent to various schools and hospitals in Iowa.

Mrs. Ferrol Patterson led the group in the singing of Christmas carols. Everyone enjoyed the grab bag exchange. All those present had their fill of oyster stew following the meeting.,

CAN'T AFFORD TO SKIP FERTILIZER

Price Is Up But It's Likely To Pay On Crops In 1950, Economists Says

It may pay farmers to use more fertilizer in 1950 even though prices of many things they have to sell are going down and fertilizer will cost about the same as this past year.

Each year for the past several years, farmers have used about 10 percent more fertilizer than the year before. Year by year they have had to pay more for the fertilizer, as they have for most things they have bought. Some farmers may be thinking of leaving fertilizer out of their 1950 crop plans in an effort to cut farm production costs.

Francis Kutish, Iowa State College extension economist, thinks that leaving fertilizer out of cropping practices may cut the profits more than costs. He says that many farmers over the state can use more fertilizer profitably, especially on feed crops, pastures and other crops that haven't had much fertilizer the past few years.

How much fertilizer farmers can use to advantage differs from farm to farm. Kutish cautions farmers to carefully calculate costs and returns from the use of fertilizer. Consider the cost of fertilizer, how much it costs to apply, and the cost of harvesting the extra yield it will produce. Then consider the additional returns from the crop on which you apply fertilizer. Kutish also says to figure the extra returns fertilizer, especially phosphate, will give in later years.

He suggests that farmers talk over the problem with county extension directors and have soil tests made. Inefficient use of fertilizer this year may shrink farm profits.

GAMES AND SONGS ADD MUCH TO YULE CHEER

It doesn't take muck preparation beforehand to make a holiday dinner the occasion for family fun.

Mrs. Gertrude Sanford, recreation specialist, Iowa State College, says the dinner table is an ideal place for games the whole family can enjoy.

It's a good setting for singing carols together, she suggests. Many games give us a good chance to sing our favorites.

Charades can be played at the table, Mrs. Sanford says. It isn't hard for groups of three or four to get their heads together and then act out titles of movies or books or carols.

Mrs. Sanford also suggests choric reading as an activity for dinner-table family fun. One person acts as leader and the rest of the group answers in chorus. This is an interesting way to read psalms, other poetry or Christmas stories.

Guessing games are always a possibility. Quizzes are another, with the group divided into teams and the questions chosen according to the special interests of the group.

Be sure the games are chosen so that all members of the family, young and old, can enjoy them, Mrs. Sanford advises. It's always a good idea to plan an active game between the main course and dessert, to give the guests a chance to move around a bit.

BRUCE H. PECK WILL HOLD FARM SALE NEXT WEDNESDAY

Bruce H. Peck, who lives on a farm 6½ miles straight east of Klemme, will hold a public sale next Wednesday, December 22. Mr. Peck is quitting farming on a large scale and will move to his farm in Minnesota.

Mr. Peck offers two tractors, a combine, picker and a lot of other power equipment, all in excellent condition.

Turn to his ad in his issue for complete details and a list of the property to be sold.

BY BOB HULLIHAN

If the rope had been strong and the driver had been headstrong, this would be the story of the most pathetic Iowa traffic accident of the year. It turned out to be only one of the most unusual, but is still makes frightening reading.

Traveling along a busy highway, a driver noticed what seemed to be a rope lying across the pavement in his path. He slowed down immediately. That simple little action saved him months of sleepless nights. For just as his front tires were about to pass over the rope, it sprang into the air and stretched taut in front of his car.

The amazed motorist jammed on his brakes and hit the rope at a blessedly slow speed. He got the car stopped in about ten feet and climbed out weak in the knees. What he found made him weak all over.

A small boy lay on each side of the highway. One boy was seven and the other eight years old. Each boy still had one end of that rope tied around his waist. They had been playing a game with the passing cars.

When the car hit the rope it had broken close to the biggest boy and he had only been knocked down. The smaller boy had been dragged a few fee but, except for rope burns and scratches, he too was unhurt.

What if this motorist had been of the headstrong variety; the kind who might have noticed the rope lying on the highway but who would have plowed on at his usual rate of speed? It is too easy to imagine the children being snapped to their deaths at the ends of the rope.

The driver involved in this strange accident was a wise man. He knew that danger on the highway is often revealed by the most insignificant signs.

ASSESS DRAIN DITCH LEVIES

Hancock County supervisors have ordered drainage levies in the sum of $21,703.57 spread against several Hancock County draniage districts to pay warrants issued for minor repairs in recent years.

Of this total $1 726.01 was levied against 6 small districts based on a percentage of the original classification of the various districts; $19,977.56 was levied against the laterals and main of 7 reclassified districts.

The tax levied is to be spread and collected with the regular tax of 1949 due on January 1, 1950, a report from the office of County Auditor Maynard Schoneman indicates.

In spite of drier conditions existing in Hancock County for the past 2 years, more drainage work has been done than at any time in recent years. The reason advanced is that farmers are draining the wetter areas of their farms to prepare for seasons when the moisture again is excessive. Higher farm prices in recent years have made this a profitable venture.

HANCOCK FARM BOYS HONORED AT CHICAGO

Delwyn and Norman Stromer, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Stromer, Liberty township farmers, won a $40 wrist watch as a result of placing in the red ribbon class with their demonstration "Save That Extra Pig" at the International Livestock show in Chicago. First prize went to a team from Nebraska presenting "Control of Cattle Grub."

The Stromer brothers also attended the national 4-H club congress and were taken on a guided tour of the city by Iowa adult leaders. The boys attended the musical comedy hit "Kiss Me Kate" and dined at the famous Swedish smorgasboard restaurant.

TREE FOUND TO COOL OR WARM IN HOMES

New York,—Here's a new way to beat the summer heat and the winter cold: planned planting f trees and shrubs.

James I. E. Ilgenfritz, president of the American Association of Nurserymen, reports that such scientific planning can control climate on a good-sized lot as much as 10 to 15 degrees.

Thus, according to the expert, the home can be made cooler in summer and warmer in winter.

At the same time, he said, the home owner can save on fuel bills.

Break Against Wind

One of the surest ways to make a house warmer, Ilgenfritz said, is the use of hedge s or trees and shrubs to break the wind. He pointed out that to heat an ordinary house, it takes twice as much fuel at a temperature of 32 degrees and a wind of 12 miles an hour as it does for the same temperature and a wind of three miles an hour.

He said tests have shown that the fuel requirement is little larger for the combination of 32 degrees and a 12-mile wind than it is for zero temperature and little wind.

And as for cooling the house: Ilgenfritz reports that by using one or more trees close to the dwelling the roof can be kept cool, and if the foliage of the tree shades the roof and the west wall, the temperature in the house may be reduced as much as 20 to 40 degrees.

Such planned planting, he said, eliminates the "attic furnace."

To Help All Homes

The new science-climatic control by planting—is expected to be used by more and more home builders, according to Ilgenfirtz.

"A great field is opening up to co-ordinate local measurements of prevailing winds, temperatures, rainfall, sun position and other natural phenomena with plantings, which, in addition to beauty, will insure greater comfort and economy for home owners," he said.

Meanwhile, a new tree to take the place of the American elm, which is gradually disappearing because of Dutch elm disease, has been developed by the Siebenthaler nurseries, Dayton, Ohio. The new tree is a honey locust called the Moraine locust. It is thornless and seedless and does not require the biennial pruning of lower branches.

Futhermore, the new tree reaches a height of 25 to 30 feet in seven years and at maturity it reaches to 125 feet.

The leaves do not have to be raked up in the fall. Their thin and soft tissues decompose almost ove night and help to fertilize the ground, the developers say.

CROP DRIVE LAGS IN HANCOCK COUNTY

The Rev. G. J. Kupke, chairman of the CROP drive, reports that approximately $1,000 has been sent to headquarters from this part of the county.

Real Roses in the Cheeks — You Call That a Handicap?

By BILLY ROSE

When Eleanor and I first moved up to Mt. Kisco, some of our neighbors dropped by to pay their respects, but I didn't encourage these visits. The landed gentry of Westchester are nice enough folk, but they don't talk my lingo. Besides, I see no point in cultivating people who think it's smart to chase a fox.

But a little down the road from us live a couple I cultivate as often as they'll have me. Their names are Fred and Jane Newell. I met them through Eleanor two years ago, and I'll never forget the first night we had dinner at their house.

Jane answered the doorbell. She was pretty all over, and I liked her right away. "Excuse the peasant skirt," she said. "I have a baby penciled in for the fall."

Fred was in the living room listening to the radio. He had the tweedy look of the good guy in the women's magazine stories. We talked for a couple of minutes before I realized he was blind. He told me he was a writer, and answered my unspoken question by explaining he dictated his stuff to his wife.

Billy Rose

It was a fine dinner and a fine evening. Jane carried her child as if baby-having were some kind of party. Around eleven o'clock, Fred said to Jane, "Maybe the Roses would like ice cream."

"Maybe they would," said Jane, "but we haven't any. I'll drive down to the village and get some."

"I'll go with you," I said, "just to make sure you don't forget chocolate."

ON THE WAY to the ice-cream parlor I said, "Tell me something. What makes you kids act as if you had a gold mine in the cellar?"

Jane smiled. "I don't know. I guess we've been pretty lucky."

"Lucky!" I said, and then stopped, embarrassed.

"It's all right," said Jane. "Of course, it would be nicer if Fred could see, but neither of us thinks that's very important."

"How'd it happen?"

"War stuff," said Jane. "Fragments of a land mine on Okinawa. We weren't married then. Fred was moved to a hospital in San Francisco The first letters he sent me weren't in his own handwriting. He explained that he was dictating to a nurse because he'd been wounded in the right hand.

"At the time, he still had some hope that a special operation might restore his sight. He didn't want to tell me about his eyes until he knew for sure.

"WELL, THE OPERATION was a complete miss-out. When Fred knew he'd never see again, the darn fool wrote me that I was free to marry anybody I liked. Of course, I hopped a plane to San Francisco and got my fella."

"Atta girl," I said. "Now tell me to shut my face if I'm out of line, but doesn't it ever bother you—I mean, making this sacrifice?"

"Sacrifice, my foot," said Jane softly. "Look at it this way. I'm two years away from 30. In 10 years, I'll be two away from 40. When Fred went off to war, I was 23. Real roses in cheeks. Probably the best I ever looked in my life.

"From here in, no matter what happens to me—wrinkles, dry skin, gray hairs, babies—Fred will always see me as the fresh-faced kid he kissed goodbye at Penn station in '42. For the guy I'm crazy about, I'll be 23 the rest of my life. Is that bad?"

"No," I said. "That isn't bad at all."

Thorns

SHARP were the thorns on my Saviour's brow,
Forked and crimson-stained,
And till the last sharp breath was drawn,
They remained.

Out of great suffering one cried
Thrice to be rid of a thorn,
But from that long unanswered prayer,
Strength was born.

Who am I to be bitter now
Over a bitter thing:
I who am neither evangelist,
Nor a king?

Let it depart from me, O God,
Lighten my path, my days,
But may Thy grace, Thy strength be mine,
If it stays

Mistletoe Kiss Began as Myth

Practice Symbolized Expulsion of Evil

The origin of the yuletide custom of kissing under the mistletoe is shrouded with some uncertainty, but it is believed that the original practice was symbolical of assurance that never again would the mistletoe be used as an instrument of evil, as it was in Scandinavian mythology.

The Norsemen believed that Balder, the god who personified the sun, was disliked by Loki, god of mischief. According to the legend, Loki planned to destroy Balder, but Frigga, Balder's mother, obtained a promise from all living things that they would not harm Balder. But she forgot to extract such a promise from the mistletoe.

Knowing this, Loki made an arrow from the mistletoe and gave it to Balder's blind brother, Hoder, and told him how to use it. The occasion was a demonstration that all things so loved Balder that nothing could harm him. Hoder did not know the mistletoe would prove a lethal weapon

The arrow killed Balder. Frigga was desolate, but won a promise from Odin, chief of all the gods, that if every living thing would weep for Balder, he would be restored to life. Frigga had everyone weep for Balder but Loki. Disguised as an old witch, he declined to weep.

As a result, Odin permitted Balder six months of life and six months of death, which explained the summer and winter seasons to the old Norsemen. Frigga was given care of the mistletoe so it would never again bring sorrow.

Keep Safe AT CHRISTMAS TIME

Christmas this year should be a safe Christmas—safe for everyone from the tiniest tot to the oldest grandparent. Too much emphasis cannot be put on safety in decorations, especially in the use of electric lights.

Too often a set of defective lights is the cause of a tragedy or near tragedy during the holiday season.

Sockets for miniature electric tree lights must be deep so the metal at the base of the plug is completely covered and tinsel and trimmings canot touch it.

If buying new lights this year, be sure to get those with deep sockets so none of the metal will be exposed. It might even be a good investment to replace all shallow-socket strings of lights with deep socket ones.

It would be well for every family that expects to use lights this year to check them closely and make necessary replacements in time.

Regular illuminating bulbs, 15 watts or higher, must not be used on Christmas trees. They can get hot enough in a few minutes to set the tree on fire.

Christmas in Mexico

Unless he is very much Americanized, the Mexican child knows nothing of the Christmas tree. Mexican parents search the markets for little trinkets, toys and sweets for the Pinata—a jar made of coarse, red earthenware and shaped usually like a clown or dancer or other amusing figure or object.

On Christmas Day the Pinata is suspended from the ceiling.

Is God Available?

Lesson for December 18, 1949

DOES GOD EXIST? Yes. There is every good reason to believe that he does. But when we have answered that question in the affirmative, we have not settled the most important questions of religion. There are the other two questions of equal importance: What kind of God is he? and, Is he available? Let us give some thought to this last question. One of our Christmas carols begins, "Draw nigh, draw nigh, Immanuel!" Immanuel is one of the names by which Jesus is called, for the Christian church has always read Isaiah 7:14 as a prophecy of Jesus Christ. The name means "God with us" and is the answer to the deepest cry of the heart.

Dr. Foreman

God in heaven far away, God the Creator who set in motion this mighty universe, God the All-powerful ruling beyond the stars, God the Eternal who knows neither youth nor age.

Such a God has sometimes been believed in by men who nevertheless walked in a dark cloud of loneliness, doubting that so great a God could possibly have any interest in their own affairs.

Is God WITH us? Is God with US? Is GOD with us? That is the question that torments the troubled mind. With one voice, the whole church of God answers Yes; the name of the one in whose face we see the glory of God is named "God-with-us."

In the first chapter of the Bible we hear of a God who walked with his children in a garden. In the first chapters of the Gospels we hear songs to the God who has "visited his people;" and in almost the last chapter of the Bible we hear the promise, "God himself shall be with them and be their God.

"When ye shall search for him with all your hearts"

MOST TRUTHS are two-sided. You have to keep both sides in mind or you will not fully understand. God is with us yes; God is with all men, yes—that is, there are no favorites with him, he refuses his presence to no one. God is always available, available to all. That is one side of the truth.

The other side is this: God is not equally with all men. Some men are alienated from God. Some men are godless. Even among those with whom God lives, we may fairly say that God is with some in a higher degree, in fuller measure, than he is with others. Jeremiah gives the clue to this truth: "Ye shall seek me and find me, when ye shall search for me with all your heart." (Jer. 29:13.) Those who do not search for God will not find him.

Those whose search is half-hearted only half-find him. God does not enter uninvited. He is available, but he will not force his way in. We can see how this is when we think about Christians we know. It does not make sense to say that they are all equally godly.

We have known some great Christians of whom we might almost dare to say that Paul's prayer had been answered, that they have been "filled with the fulness of God." (Eph. 3:19.) But in other Christians, who certainly have some small seed of faith in them, it may be hard even for a kindly observer to see many signs of God's presence.

"Thou can'st, a little baby thing. . . ."

GOD IS in all things, "he shines in all that's fair," as we sing the familiar hymn. But the center of the Christian faith is that God comes to man especially and most closely in Jesus Christ.

No matter how strongly men believed in God in olden times, always they looked forward, as the prophets show, to a time when God would come nearer than he had been before. True, it was a surprise when finally he came to Bethlehem, "a little baby thing that made a woman cry."

A world accustomed to kings in purple robes, in well-guarded castles, was surprised that the King of the Universe would be found as a child among the poor. But after all, which better represents the All-Available God— a king behind his palace walls, or a child in a home that loves him?

By Richard H. Wilkinson

town of Dexter. Al Slater is determined to be elected state representative from the 31st Belknap district. Al has tried for three consecutive terms to win out over Tyler Jenkins. At every election he had the vote sewed up. But Tyler, who is one of the shrewdest politicians a man would want to meet, always contrived to pull a fast one, two or three days before voting day, and succeeded in swinging the vote his way.

3-Minute Fiction

"Folks think I'm dumb," Al confided to his wife. "It's got to be a joke, me running for office against Jenkins."

Al began his campaign 10 months before election. He knew that folks in Dexter were eager to have the contemplated new state highway run through town, instead of swinging off to the northward toward Bartlett. And he knew that if he could persuade the highway commissioner to chart the course of the proposed road through Dexter, it would mean a big thing; it would probably mean Al's election.

And so Al went to the capitol, looked up the highway commissioner, whose name was Higgins, and talked the thing over. At first Higgins was obstinate. The highway, he told Al, was scheduled to run through Bartlett.

Well, Al didn't get discouraged. He called on Mr. Higgins a month later and talked things over again. This time he took Mr. Higgins to lunch and bought tickets for the theater afterward. Higgins began to weaken. Al talked himself blue in the face, and finally went away with a promise that Mr. Higgins would think the matter over.

"Folks think I'm dumb," Al confided to his wife. "It's got to be a joke, me running against Jenk."

Al was mighty satisfied with himself. A month before election a story came out in the papers that, through the efforts of Albert T. Slater, the new state highway would run through Dexter.

AL RECEIVED a lot of credit for his work, and a lot of promises of votes.

Tyler disappeared shortly after that. He didn't show up until two weeks before election, and then it was to announce a piece of news that overshadowed Al's great work. Tyler, it seemed, had made a trip to the capitol himself. He had consulted the proper authorities and received a promise that the state would employ local labor in constructing that section of the road that ran through Dexter.

The news was something to cheer about. It began to look as if Tyler had pulled another fast one.

Well, Tyler might have been elected if news hadn't drifted back into town that the state, because of adverse business conditions, had decided to abandon the idea of building the road that year.

Al made a hurried trip to the capitol. He didn't return during the next week, and folks began to forget he was even a candidate.

And then on the day before election one of the newspapers from the capitol that claims a fair-sized circulation in Dexter came out with the announcement that the road would definitely be put through. The words were a direct quotation from Commissioner Higgins, whose picture appeared on the front page alongside a picture of Al Slater. It was through Al's efforts, the article read, that the course of the road would pass through Dexter.

Dexter was jubilant. At the polls on the day following, Al was unanimously elected to fill the expired term of Tyler Jenkins.

"Dumb, am I?" Al said to his wife after it was over. "Well, this is one time Tyler pulled his fast one too early in the game. He thought the psychological moment was two weeks ago, instead of yesterday. I wonder," he went on, "what Tyler would say if he knew I started that rumor about abandoning the road idea. I wonder if the folks would say I was dumb if they knew I just did it so's I could make it appear like I persuaded the state to change its mind on the day before election. Dumb, am I? Dumb—like a fox."

Jane Wyatt was puzzled when crowds of visitors arrived at the Samuel Goldwyn studio to see her work in "Our Very Own". She discovered that her 12-year-old son, Christopher, was responsible. The power of radio has never been better demonstrated than in the success of the fund raising project to aid the fight against polio which is being conducted on Horace Heidt's "Youth Opportunity" and Ralph Edwards' "This Is Your Life" shows. Helen Hayes' appearance as one of the guest speakers on the former was touching, since her daughter died of polio.

No matter how he switched plane and train schedules, Don Ameche couldn't figure a way to get his whole family together for Christmas. So he will have an early celebration with his two boys in school in Iowa, then spend Christmas Day in New York with his wife, who accompanied him East for the Manhattan broadcasts of the Jimmie Durante show.

"OPERATION BOOTSTRAP"

● Faced with economic difficulties five years ago, Uncle Sam's "Little Nephew," Puerto Rico, has followed a master plan of economic recovery that has brought 50 new industries to the island. It is one of the most spectacular achievements of its kind in post-war history. Photo above shows new Las Casas housing development. These five- to seven-room modern apartments rent for from $2.50 to $14 a month—almost unbelievable figures to rent-dizzy Americans.

Sugar is one of Puerto Rico's traditional staple products. The little island ships nearly a million tons of raw sugar to U. S. refineries each year. In photo above, truckloads of sugar cane roll to the centrales for grinding —a caravan of sweetness for Puerto Rico's economy.

Not all of Puerto Rico's new industries are large. This girl (above) works in a small weaving shop which creates its own original designs especially adapted to the American market. # Army-Irish Tilt Would Be Grim

By GRANTLAND RICE

I SAW Notre Dame beat Navy, 40 to 0, and I saw Army beat Fordham, 35 to 0. Fordham was unquestionably as good a team as Navy was, probably better defensively. In looking at the two leading teams, only a week apart, it would be tougher than merely difficult to rank them

Both are blessed with fast, hard-striking backs who can pass, run and block. Both have two brilliant quarterbacks in Arnold Galiffa and Bob Williams. They are just about on a par. Williams has a slight edge in offensive worth, Galiffa in defensive strength when needed.

Grantland Rice

In the matter of backfield strength Notre Dame has the call with more good backs—Williams, Sitko, Zalejski, Coutre, Swistowicz, etc., vs. Stephenson, Galiffa, Cain and Martin, also Bob Blaik. The top Army four can match the top Notre Dame four, but Notre Dame can reach in the fat for more runners.

There isn't much difference in the play of the two lines. The main difference is that Army uses two sets of lines, Notre Dame only one. I doubt that Army has a group to match 260-pound Hart, 245-pound Tonneff and 235-pound Martin—all can handle the better part of 60 minutes whenever needed.

Both teams are brilliantly coached. Both have the ability to strike with such speed and devastation they can wreck good teams in less than 10 minutes. Army's defensive line is about as strong as Notre Dame's. I'm not sure her offensive play is quite as good, although it is deeper.

Notre Dame proved against Michigan State that Frank Leahy needs his first team strength against strong opposition.

Michigan State grabbed 14 points before Leahy could blink twice, as he rushed his first team back into action after a 34 to 7 lead.

Army vs. Notre Dame would be a terrific game. Those who have seen Oklahoma in action tell me that Bud Wilkenson's outfit is an even match for either with just as much power and just as much all-around speed. The three don't happen to meet.

Among the unbeaten teams left we have Notre Dame, Army, Oklahoma, California, Boston U., Virginia and Cornell. None of these meet. Every team in the Big Ten, the Southwestern, and the Southern conferences has been beaten, most of them several times. Fordham is among those beaten only once and it should be stated here that Ed Danowski's Rams put up as gallant a fight against superior numbers, competitive experience, and all-around class as anyone would care to see. Outside of some three or four teams, Fordham is a match for anyone today.

Army's Schedule

"Those who are criticizing Army's schedule overlook one fact," Red Blaik said before the Fordham game. "These boys are up at 5:30 a m, well before daylight. They face 16 hours of hard physical and mental work It would be cruel to ask them to play a schedule of nine major games. Each year I see the Army team fading out, but its last two games, or losing its earlier edge.

"This year we had Penn State, rated before as one of the stronger teams in the East. We had Michigan—at Michigan. We had Harvard—they almost beat us last year and looked to be a much improved team this fall, until the trip to Stanford practically wrecked the Crimson. We had an up and coming Fordham team. We had or still have Pennsylvania and Navy, two old traditional rivals who always give us a battle to the finish. I claim that schedule is all Army can handle. In 1950 we have Michigan again. We meet a powerful Stanford team at Stanford. We have Harvard and Pennsylvania who must be better than they were this fall. We have Pennsylvania and Navy. All told we have at least seven major games."

Captain Tom Hamilton, while head of Navy athletics, had this belief—"We'd rather be beaten by class than run over mediocrity Our system is to meet the best."

Navy was not equipped at that time—or now—to have any chance in its schedule. It had the sort of schedule Army should and could have played. Hamilton would play anybody—as long as they were good. So will Navy's present leaders. Navy has certainly earned more public acclaim from this plan than Army has sniping too many second or third graders

ORDER DDT EARLY TO INSURE SUPPLY

Last Year Supply Was Srot When First Brood Corn Borers Arrived

Prospects are there'll be enough insecticides and fungicides to control crop and livestock pests in 1950 and at prices about the same as they were the latter part of this year, according to economists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. However, they warn farmers and local dealers to get their orders in promptly.

The Department men note that the materials and facilities needed for making insecticides and fungicides are generally available. They think there will be enough insecticides, including DDT, rotenone and pyrethrum, unless the pests for which those materials are used turn out more abundant than usual.

Need May Be Large

This year several important insect pests were usually abundant over wide areas so that demand for insecticides was considerably above average. Local shortages developed. The economists say that most of the trouble came because farmers and local dealers underestimated their needs and delayed ordering.

In Iowa DDT was the insecticide that was short during the critical time of controlling first brood corn borers in June. With the large potential corn borer population in the state next spring, DDT is the chemical Iowa farmers and local dealers should make special effort to have on hand in adequate amounts. Its use for corn borer control demands large quantities over a short period of time because control of first brood borers is effective normally only if application is made within a critical period of about 10 days.

Manufacturing Complicated

The newer insecticides, such as DDT, require complicated processes in their manufacture. They can't be manufactured and distributed as fast as the older standard materials such as lead and calcium arsenate. That's the reason it is important that farmers and local dealers determine as promptly as they can what kinds of insecticides they will need, how much, and get orders in early.

MEALS FOR A WEEK OF HOLIDAYS

Leftovers from the traditional turkey or goose or ham at Christmas time are expected and welcomed by one and all. So why not give them a tempting setting? Golden brown timbales, toast squares, or a casserole dish can be included in your pre-Christmas menu-planning.

There's company coming for the holidays and you have many things to do—last minute cards to address, gifts to wrap, and those extra touches you want to give the house so it will look as festive as possible.

Well, now's the time to take your menu planning firmly in hand so that this very important part of the holiday entertaining won't have you working overtime in the kitchen.

Be A Menu-Planner

If you're not a menu-planner at heart, chances are you'll wonder from one meal to the next how you're going to make everything look as festive as possible and still not dent the food budget too much. Well-planned menus, say food specialists at Iowa State College, are really blueprints of how meals can fit together and yet have each one as interesting and nourishing as possible.

And there are many food preparation short cuts to take. Count on your freezer locker for those meat supplies you have cached away. If you're buying your meat supplies from the local grocery or meat market, think in terms of more than just one festive dinner. Leftovers are eagerly greeted by the family if they are served attractively in casserole dishes, or golden brown timbales, or on toast squares. Using leftovers in interesting ways saves on the food bill.

It always pays to get out your Christmas recipes and have them on hand right from the start. The foods which are a tradition with the family, of course, come in for first-choice places on your menus. But plan your menus with this thought in mind—a well-balanced meal can be simple an easy to prepare. It can consist of a main dish, a salad or a dessert, or both, bread and butter and a beverage, or it can be much more elaborate, to fit the occasion. But plan first on the essentials of green leafy foods, a green or yellow vegetable, a of milk in some form, other meat dish of some kind, plenty vegetables, and interesting desserts.

If you're a veteran meal-planner, you'll know that the dessert can be more important than just the delicious finale for your meal. If well-planned it can furnish much food value and fit in with the whole meal plan.

Dessert Suggestion

One of the favorite Christmas desserts which is traditional and good to eat is steamed suet pudding. You will find that this recipe is enough for 12 people.

Mix the following ingredients together: 1½ C of dry, fine bread crumbs, 1 C brown sugar, 1 C finely chopped or ground suet, 1 C seeded raisins, ¼ C chopped citron, ½ C broken nut meats. Then mix together and add to your first mixture the following ingredients: 1 egg beaten, 1 C milk and ½ C molasses. Dissolve ½ tsp. of soda in 1 T hot water and add to the mixture. Sift together and then add to the basic mixture: ½ tsp. baking powder, ½ tsp. cinnmamon, ¼ tsp. cloves and one-eighth tsp. nutmeg.

Pour into two tightly covered, 1-pound coffee tins, buttered. Seam for 3 hours. Serve with lemon sauce. Reheat before serving by setting mold in a double boiler.

Ape Guards of Tradition Declining on Gibraltar

Only a thin simian line holds strategic Gibraltar for Britain these days, or so tradition has it.

The legend is that "when the apes go, the British go, too," and the celebrated Barbary apes that inhabit the famous 1,350-foot Rock have been declining in numbers of late.

Gibraltar's apes, the only members of the monkey family living wild in all Europe, have roamed the cactus-covered upper reaches of the Rock for centuries—perhaps since Roman times, notes the National Geographic society. Numbering 100 or more early in the 19th century, they have dwindled alarmingly close to the disappearing point several times since.

The British, however, are very conscious of the legend prophecy and each time the size of the ape colony has fallen too low, they have arranged to reinforce this unique garrison.

Most of the few apes at large on the Rock today are replacements brought in from Africa after World War II. Gibraltar in wartime was a bristling military citadel where monkeys on the loose could cause untimely confusion and serious damage. As the war clouds gathered, captivity became the lot of the "Gib" apes that had been free.

The powerful, tailless creatures are not actually apes at all. They are macaques. The size of a big Airedale, they are Gibraltar's only wild animal. They are common to the forests of Barbary, south across the Strait of Gibraltar in northwest Africa.

Bala, City of Festivals, Celebrates 400th Birthday

In 1549—nearly three quarters of a century before the Pilgrims landed, and 16 years before the founding of St. Augustine, oldest of U. S. cities—a little Portuguese settlement was born at a strategic site under the "hump" of the Brazilian coast.

Its full name was Sao Salvador da Bahia de Todos os Santos, "Holy Savior of the Bay of All Saints." Now more popularly known as Bahia, or Baia, according to the new simplified spelling, it is celebrating its 400th anniversary this year in colorful religious festivals.

Baia is both a museum of early Brazil and a center of modern Brazilian industry, notes the National Geographic society. Its double personality is expressed on two separate levels, linked by elevators, cable cars and steep roads.

Around the broad shimmering bay are the wharves, warehouses, and banks, the big export offices, and the city market. High above, amidst tropically luxuriant vegetation, rise the old colonial mansions, state buildings, libraries, colleges, and many churches.

Baia was the Brazilian capital until the government seat was removed to Rio de Janeiro in 1763. It is still the capital of rich and fertile Baia state. Traces of the city's original military character remain in the old forts built in and around the harbor when rival European powers were seeking land and treasure in the new world.

Neighbors of Shakespeare

Not everyone knows that George Washington's ancestors were near neighbours of William Shakespeare. The Washington family home is only a few miles from Stratford - upon - Avon and stood there centuries before the Bard traded genius for applause. Sulgrave Manor, in fact, is first mentioned in the Domesday Book in 1086 and later belonged to the Priory of St. Andrew of Northampton until seized by the Crown in 1539. In the same year Henry VIII turned his attention temporarily from matrimony to real estate and sold the property to Lawrence Washington, who built the present house. His descendants continued to live there for the next 120 years and it was Lawrence's great-great grandson, Colonel John Washington, who left England in 1656 to manage the land in Virginia, now Mount Vernon.

Mostly About Frogs

There are frogs that live both in and out of the water; some that live only in the water, and still others that never leave the land, depending on rainfall for their necessary moisture. Certain frogs, equipped with spade-shaped feet, lead an almost hermit life, burrowing into the ground like moles. The "flying frog" of Borneo leaps spectacularly from tree to tree. One tropical frog lays its eggs in the rain-filled crevices of tall palms, sometimes 60 or more feet high. Another carefully builds a circular wall of mud in a stream or pond, enclosing a sheltered nursery where the young can hatch.

Chemistry of Altitudes

Transformation of boiling water into ice takes place at high altitudes where the boiling point of the liquid falls below what would be its freezing point on the ground. Laboratory tests, in which high altitudes are simulated, show ice forming in boiling water at approximately 116,000 feet. The piece of ice appears in the center of the boiling, bubbling water. It grows rapidly and, almost as if by magic, the water is transformed into solid ice.

KEEP CATTLE LICE UNDER CONTROL BY SPRAYING WITH DDT OR LINDANE

This promises to be one of the "lousiest" cattle years on record, says Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist at Iowa State College.

The movement of feeders into Iowa probably has been one of the greatest on record, according to the Crop and Livestock Report. And while many cattle from areas where livestock pest-control programs have been carried out, many of them have extremely high infestations of lice, Gunderson says. As winter continues. these infestations will get worse.

A danger signal to watch for is scratching. Several things can cause scratching, but lice are most likely to be the cause.

Pays To Spray

While it has never been determined how great are the losses rsulting from lice, it is known that irritation causes rubbing puts a drain on the system, and prevents normal gains. Therefore, Gunderson says, it does pay to spray.

Good control can be had by putting on one application of one-half percent DDT spray. The spray consists of 8 pounds of 50 percent DDT wettable powder plus a box of wetting agent in 100 gallons of water. Use 1 gallon of the spray per animal.

Equally good control may be had with the use of lindane spray. Again, one application is sufficient. Make up the spray by adding 2 pounds of 25 percent lindane wettable powder and one box of wetting agent in 100 gallons of water. Rate of application is the same—one gallon prer animal.

Look For Grubs

Gunderson also suggests looking for grubs at the time of spraying for lice. From two to three treatments at 30-day intervals are necessary for good grub control. One treatment can be given at the same time cattle can be given at the same time cattle are being sprayed for lice. Add 7½ pounds of 5 percent rotenone powder to the above spray. The following grub treatments can be either as spray or dust. The same amount of rotenone and water (7½ pounds per 100 gallons) should be used, together with a package of wetting agent. If animals are to be dusted, use 1.67 percent rotenone dust, and apply 1 pound to 10 head.

When spraying, cover animals thoroughly, getting spray in and around the ears, brisket, front legs, back, and skin creases.

Gunderson says the wetting agent eliminates the need for high pressure. With it, spray can be applied at pressure from 30 ot 80 pounds. Such pressures make it possible to use tractor-mounted weed or corn borer sprayers. When no wetting agent is used, pressures of 200 pounds or more are necessary.

WISE TO UNDERSTAND CHILD'S PLAY WORLD

Wise parents will realize that 4-year-old Susie's new Christmas doll is "real" to her and make an effort to understand her "play" world.

Mrs. Alma Jones, child development specialist, Iowa State College, says youngsters' imaginative play gives adults a chance to bridge the gap of years and establish a warm bond of friendship and understanding.

If Mom, Dad and Aunt Mary will take the trouble to join with Susie in her play, they will be well rewarded.

Imaginative is one of the important "learning" types of play, Mrs. Jones points out. Childhood love for doll play shows the fundamental need youngsters have to imitate what the grown-ups do. The role of being mother to her beloved dolls gives a little girl a rich emotional outlet, and a sense of security and achievement.

When Susie shakes her head and explains, "My baby is sick. Please be quiet so she can sleep," mother will be wise to hide her smile and do as Susie asks, says Mrs. Jones.

Don't try to tell Sussie how to care for her doll. Let her make plans for herself with only a suggestion now and then. It's a mistake, too, says Mrs. Jones, to expect a child to keep a doll "looking new" or "looking beautiful."

YEARLY COST OF PLANT DISEASE IS 2 BILLIONS

Some 50,000 plant diseases are costing American farmers two billion dollars each year, says Arden Sherf, extension plant pathologist at Iowa State College.

Of that total corn has 144 of the diseases, potatoes 127, wheat 88 and apples 200. Many farmers believe that the blights or rusts which attack their crops are due merely to unfavorable weather conditons. Actually, the cause nearly always is a living fungus, bacterial or virus organism.

In the past, plant disease epidemics have caused great changes in the kinds of crops grown in certain districts, and they have even caused the movement of large numbers of people from one to another.

Fortunately most plant diseases do not reach epidemic proportions, but killing a few scattered plants does count up. Much can be done easily and economically to control many of the common diseases. Good control often can be had by planting treated seed and resistant varieties of crops, according to Sherf.

AVERY TWIN LAKE HUSTLERS 4-H NEWS

Avery Twin Lake Hustlers 4-H Club were awarded the 4-H Charter by the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture and State College of Agriculture in recognition of its organization as a standard 4-H club, at the county 4-H banquet at Garner December 3. They now must meet certain requirements outlined by the Extension Service. There are 7 Seals they are to work for. Not enough record books were turned into the farm Bureau office at the close of the year last October, so we didn't recieve our first seal with the Charter. Come on members let's get this one and more too at the end of this year.

Those attending from the Avery Twin Lake Hustlers were Mr. and Mrs. Donald Burk, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Brede, Delwyn Brede, Dean Burgess, Larry Langlitz, Kenneth Langlitz, Marvin Swyter and Byron Heginger.

Delwyn Brede received the Dairy Medal awarded that evening. The medal was awarded by the Kraft Food Products of Chicago.

Judith Brede was one of the few girls in the county who had completed her health check up and improvements on time. This group received their awards from the County Farm Bureau. Judy was the outstanding girl of her club.

Wednesday evening the Avery Twin Lake Hustlers 4-H club enjoyed a roller skating party at Forest City. They invited Avery Sunbeams 4-H club and the Twin Lake Go-Getters 4-H to go with them. There were 46 members, leaders and drivers in attendance.

Extermination Confronts 'Red Howler' of Colombia

A tough old conservative is the red howler monkey of northern Columbian jungles.

Families stick to their old homes and old ways until they starve to death, showing almost no ability to adapt themselves to changing times such as characterizes many of their close relatives. This is stressed by Dr. Philip Hershkovitz in a report on the mammals of northern Columbia issued by the U. S. National museum, Smithsonian institution.

Hershkovitz was at first puzzled by what seemed the endless variety shown by these animals. It was as if they were split into many races. But the difficulty is explained, he says, when their strong conservatism is considered.

"The red howler," he says, "is a comparatively sedentary animal, sluggish in movement, conservative in habits. Combined with its great ability to survive environmental fluctuations is its small capacity for adaptation to such changes.

"Under normal environmental conditions this howler, with its enormous vitality and almost complete freedom from predators, will flourish. Its natural habitat is rich with food and water. However, many red howlers taken by me appeared to be remnants of erstwhile large populations confined to small relicts of primary forest. In these hibitats clans of howlers have become isolated from the rest of the population. With continued deforestation they will be exterminated. Individuals persist, however, as long as nature provides them with a suitable tree and its fruit.

Chemical World of Future Envisioned by Scientist

A chemically transformed world of tomorrow, in which the United States alone could support a billion citizens living in earthenware houses and eating fats from coal, sugar from trees, and proteins from yeast, has been envisioned by a Harvard chemist who received a gold medal and $1,000 cash for helping to build a new industry out of sand.

He is Professor Eugene G. Rochow, winner of the biennial Leo Hendrik Baekeland award of the North Jersey section of the American Chemical society.

The world he pictures, which could have a total population as high as 15 billion, would be made possible largely by the use of inexhaustible instead of exhaustible raw materials.

Houses, for example, would be built of excavated earth fused into bricks and slabs on the spot. Meat and eggs would disappear from man's diet, because the animals producing them consume too much food. Cellulose from trees, a highly efficient type of plant, would be converted into edible sugars—and synthetic clothes, as well.

Right now, Professor Rochow believes, metal shortages in this country have reached the point where automobile manufacturers should merely lend cars to purchasers, instead of selling them, to guarantee complete recovery of scrap.

Flocks—Large and Small

Big flocks produce more eggs per hen than small flocks! This recent report by the USDA's bureau of agricultural economics, says D. D. Moyer, extension specialist in poultry at Ohio state university, tells only half the story. What he feels is important is that good laying records follow good management practices, and the more chickens a poultry raiser has, the better job he tries to do with them. Many small flocks are left to shift for themselves, Moyer points out, and a poor laying record results. When the flock gets above 100 in number, the owner tends to make poultry more of a business. "As a result," he adds, "they keep up-to-date on new methods, buy quality chicks, feed them scientifically and house them properly."

Rotation of Tires

Extra low pressure tires must be regularly rotated and regularly checked for correct air pressure. Like all other pneumatic tires, they should be rotated every 3,000 to 4,000 miles by this formula: spare to right rear, right rear to left front, left front to left rear, left rear to right front, and right front to spare. Thus the wear on all tires is equalized and tire mileage is kept below vehicle mileage. For example, if all five tires are rotated at 3,000-mile intervals, they will show only 12,000 miles of wear after the vehicle has been driven 15,000 miles.

Kitchen Convenience

Sufficient cabinet space to store at each work center the utensils which are first used there is a cardinal rule in kitchen convenience, says Miss Vera M. Ellithorpe, extension home management specialist, kansas state college. Among the storage convenience features that may be included are: Cutlery drawer, Lazy Susan shelves for utilization of corner cabinet space, step-up shelves for spices, cup racks, towel racks, tray racks, plate racks, metal-lined drawers for flour, sugar, bread, etc., and louvered drawers for vegetables.

Bones of Very Primitive Men Discovered in Africa

Excavations at the Makapan caves in South Africa have exposed the skull and jaw of another individual which scientists expect to yield important new information relating to early man and his pre-human relatives, according to Dr. George D. Barbour of University of Cincinnati.

In a lecture covering his field work last summer in South Africa he said:

"The jaw unearthed at Makapan is the first definitely associated under sealed conditions with crude stone implements of the early Stone Age and is reported to show resemblances to the Neanderthal type of Europe.

"More important yet is the finding in an adjacent cave of part of the skull of a young individual closely related to Australopithecus, which was found by Dr. Raymond Dart, South African scientist, at Taungs 20 years ago, and hitherto thought by some to be the closest to human stock of all anthropoids living at that time.

"As a result of these new finds, it looks as if isolated elements in a widely scattered but still fragmentary picture are beginning to be linked together."

Strong Watershed Program Urged by Chief Forester

Nation-wide cooperation and support for a program to increase and, where necessary, intensify good forest and range management on the country's highland watersheds was urged by Lyle F. Watts, chief of the forest service, in his annual report to Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson.

Watts said that the kind and degree of protection and care given these watersheds have far-reaching influences on the nation's stream flow and water resources. The lands to which he referred generally are forest and wild areas at higher elevations and the source of all our major rivers.

"We are paying a huge price every year — in heavy flood losses, erratic stream behavior, reduced water quality, sedimentation and in many other ways — for our failure to give enough care to the highlands that water our valleys," the chief forester declared.

Research and experience have revealed considerable about good watershed management, but there is much more to be learned, he said. "With the basic knowledge that water unless checked runs down hill, and that trees, grass and other vegetation help to check it, we can do much to prevent flood damage and increase supplies of usable water," he concluded.

Mortality Figures Disclose Strides in Medical Science

A summary of the causes of death in the United States in 1900, in contrast to similar figures for 1947, indicates the progress achieved by medical science, according to Hygeia, health magazine of American Medical association.

An editorial by Dr. Morris Fishbein termed the contrast in the causes of death "more impressive than any other demonstration of the great progress made by medical science."

In 1900, for instance, tuberculosis was first in causes of death and more than 200 persons out of every 100,000 died from the disease each year

- 6 ounces semi-sweet chocolate, melted
- 1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup chopped walnuts

Melt chocolate over hot water. Dissolve spices in boiling water. Pour over softened butter. Add sugar, molasses mixed with soda. Blend thoroughly. Stir in melted chocolate. Work in sifted flour and salt. Shape dough into a firm roll about two inches in diameter. Roll tightly in waxed paper and store in refrigerator until ready to bake. Cut in ¼ inch slices. Sprinkle with chopped walnuts. Bake on unbuttered cookie sheet. Bake in a moderate (350°) oven 15 minutes.

Pecan Pralines
(Makes 12 two-ounce pralines)

- 1 cup granulated sugar
- 2 cups light brown sugar, firmly packed
- 3 tablespoons white corn syrup
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1½ cups milk
- 2 teaspoons maple flavoring
- 1½ cups unbroken pecan meats

Combine the sugars, corn syrup, salt, and milk in a saucepan. Cook gently, while stirring constantly, to 236°, or until a little of the mixture dropped in cold water forms a soft ball. Remove from heat and cool to 110°, or until lukewarm. Stir in maple flavoring and pecans. Beat the praline mixture with a long handled spoon until mixture begins to thicken. Drop quickly from a spoon onto waxed paper to form patties about four inches in diameter. When firm, wrap in waxed paper.

Date Pinwheels
(Makes 5 dozen)

- ½ pound pitted dates, finely chopped
- ¼ cup sugar
- ⅓ cup water
- ¼ cup chopped walnuts
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- ½ teaspoon soda
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup lard
- ½ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 egg, well beaten

Cook together the dates, sugar and water for five minutes. Add nuts and salt. Cool mixture while preparing cookie dough. Sift together flour, soda and salt. Cream lard and sugars thoroughly. Add beaten egg. Add sifted dry ingredients. Chill dough slightly. Roll dough into a rectangle ¼ inch thick. Spread the date mixture over the sheet of dough, roll like a jelly roll, wrap in waxed paper and chill overnight. Slice ¼ inch thick with a sharp knife. Place on baking sheet. Bake in a moderate oven (375°) 8 to 10 minutes or until lightly browned.

Grapefruit sometimes insists on being a little on the sour side when you'd like a natural sweetness. Sweeten with honey rather than sugar for most effectiveness.

Moisten herbs in a little salad oil before combining them with other foods if you want to point up rather than mask their flavor.

Do you throw out a lot of old coffee in your home? Don't waste the beverage; sweeten it and add some plain gelatin, then mold and you have a perfect and simple dessert, served with cream, of course!

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Strangers Good Targets for Anger

By Lawrence Gould

Is it easier to "get mad at" strangers?

Answer: On the whole, Yes. Especially in the case of minor irritations such as being kept waiting or given a wrong telephone number, your immediate reaction may well be a childish fit of temper. And the less conscious you are of the individuality of the person who has frustrated your wishes, the more likely you will be to "bawl him out" without compunction. With someone you know, you may be ashamed to behave like a spoiled baby, and to realize that he (or she) too has problems for which you should make allowances.

Are hangovers based on the amount you imbibed?

Answer: Not wholly, at any rate. The immediate basis of that awful "morning after" feeling is of course sheer exhaustion from the alcoholic speed-up of your physical and mental functions. But another, often larger factor is a guilty conscience, due not only to your probably having been brought up to think that drinking is wrong, but to the forbidden impulses which you unconsciously got drunk to release—for instance, aggressiveness and exhibitionism, which most people display. A clear conscience generally means no headache.

Can an institution take the place of a home?

Answer: Never. And all modern-minded institutional workers know it. But as Bernard Scher, director of the Edenwald School for Boys, says in an article in Better Times, there are some children whose early experiences have made them "incapable of normal relationships with adults" because they assume that all adults are like their parents. Such unfortunates can get some measure of security and satisfaction in becoming members of a group of children very much like themselves, and a well-run institution offers them a chance to do this.

Attack of Jaundice Relieves Asthma

By Dr. James W. Barton

SOME YEARS AGO it was found that certain patients with mental ailments and partial paralysis who were attacked by malaria, recovered or were found to be greatly improved mentally when the attack of malaria was over.

In a Hamilton, Ontario, hospital, a number of these patients were inoculated with the malaria organisms, ran a typical course of malaria, and after treatment by the drug quinine (used in all cases of malaria) recovered their normal mental ability and paralysis disappeared.

Later it was found that almost as satisfactory results in the treatment of paralysis of the insane could be obtained by raising the temperature of the patient to 105 or 106 degrees Fahrenheit by electricity; that it was the great heat caused by malaria that cured or helped the patient.

I have referred to the cases of two close relatives who suffered with hay fever. One had a severe attack with throat symptoms and a deep crimson rash covering the entire body; the other had light throat symptoms only, and the rash, while covering a large part of the body, was very faint. In the one with severe rash and symptoms, no attacks of hay fever have since occurred, but the other, with light throat and skin symptoms, still has yearly attacks of hay fever.

Almost a similar occurrence of one disease causing another to disappear is reported by Dr. Nathan Gorin, Boston, in "The Journal of the American Medical Association." By chance, the observation was made that the development of jaundice in a patient with chronic intractable asthma was accompanied by dramatic relief of his symptoms. As an attack of jaundice has given relief to patients suffering with rheumatoid arthritis, the common form of rheumatism, it is probable that a relation between asthma and jaundice exists.

Dr. F. M. Rackemann in "Allergy" stated that "Jaundice relieves asthma while the jaundice is present and for some time afterward."

Dr. Gorin presents the history of three intractable (not helped by any other method of treatment) cases of asthma, in each of which the development of jaundice caused the attacks to stop.

Lobotomy (cutting nerves supplying certain portions of the brain) is much better than trying to keep a sufferer under the stupefying effects of morphine.

Not only do contact lenses correct vision, but they protect the eyes against undesirable fluids, gases and solids and in many instances replace safety goggles used in industrial plants.

When an attack of gout passes over, the joint returns to normal and there are no symptoms between attacks.

NORTH CAROLINA'S Extended Christmas

Christmas lasts a long time in North Carolina. It begins in the old Moravian community of Salem in October when the women start making the thousands of candles to be used in Moravian churches throughout the south at their Christmas love feasts.

It continues until January 6, 400 miles away at Rodanthe on the Outer Banks, where a few old-timers still observe the Old Christmas, and even until January 7 among Russian and Ukrainian colonists near Wilmington, who still go by the Gregorian calendar.

In old Salem the making of Christmas candles has become almost a ritualistic part of the holidays. For months the workers meet in the Brothers House, built in 1769 as a home for the single men of the community.

Huge cakes of beeswax are melted—12½ pounds of tallow to 50 pounds of wax. The mixture is strained, poured into large pans, and then cut into small blocks which are melted in coffee pots on the stove. The wax is poured into ancient candle molds through which twine has been pulled to make the wicks.

Then one week come the candle teas when the community is invited to see the fragrant, yellow-brown tapers being made. Hostesses, dressed in the costumes of the early settlers, serve Moravian sugar cakes and coffee, and the rest of the community feels it finally had entered the season.

Christmas Story Continues to Grow In Faith, Intensity

Year by year the increasingly old, but ever new story of Christmas warms the heart of all Christendom. Year by year the depth of faith is intensified by the beloved words of the Christmas story, by the prophecies of the patriarchs of old whose wisdom enabled them to foresee the coming of the Christ.

Nowhere else in all the Scriptures is the prophecy of the birth of the Saviour more beautifully or convincingly told than in the words of the prophet Isaiah. More than 700 years before the event, he declared.

For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulders; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. . . .

Therefore, the Lord himself shall give you a sign; Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel.

Isaiah also foretold the visit of the Three Wise Men to Bethlehem in Chapter 60, verse six:

The multitude of camels shall cover thee, the dromedaries of Midian and Ephah; they shall bring gold and incense, and they shall shew forth the praises of the Lord.

And so the prophecy and the story go to the magnificent climax which is related by St. Luke in these words:

". . . And she brought forth her first-born son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn."

Brazil Believes Animals Talk on Christmas Eve

A Christmas legend which had its origin in Brazil has come down to many peoples of the world through the ages, and is one which is of most interest to children.

The old legend has it that on Christmas eve all animals become endowed with the power of speech, a belief which it is thought stems from the presence of animals at the birth of Christ. It is one legend that persists most strongly.

A Big Variety Of Weather All In One Day, That's Iowa!

Sunday the weather man threw the book at Iowa and dished out at least three of our four seasons, all in less than 24 hours. The peculiar weather began Friday with sleet and snow.

Saturday night it rained hard, the temperature went up, melted all the snow and ice and Sunday it was a warm, balmy day, just like spring.

About the middle of Sunday afternoon, clouds began to roll in the southwest and it really looked like cyclone weather. Soon the wind came up strong, with some hail. From then on the temperature skidded down until it was only 8 degrees above zero at midnight!

You name it, Iowa has the weather!

Hope Diamond—Not a Jinx Gem But a Marble Carrying a Hex

By BILLY ROSE

The members of the gang squatted in a small circle on a patch of green a block away from the subway station at 242nd street. Their eyes were in fixed focus on a shiny object at their feet—the Hope Diamond . . . .

Let me end the suspense here and now by announcing that the gang was made up of boys who had gotten together to decide the marble championship of the Upper Bronx, and that the shiny object at their feet was not the unlucky stone of great price you've been reading about for years, but a legendary agate known to small fry from the Triborough Bridge to Spuyten Duyvil as the Hope Diamond shooter.

Now, a shooter, or "real," as the afficionados call it, looks a lot like an ordinary marble, but any kid who knows a heist-shot from a knuckle-down can tell you the difference. The shooter is heavier, truer, more cunningly fashioned than the ordinary immie, and, even more important, there exists between it and the thumb and forefinger of its owner a spiritual affinity which makes it more precious to him than all the other marbles he owns. When a player loses in a "for-keeps" game, he pays off with common, earth-bound miggels—he would no more think of parting with his shooter than a good family man would with his life insurance.

NOW, IT FIGURES that by this time you're bustin' to know something about the owner of the Hope Diamond shooter, and how the fabled marble happened to wind up at the feet of a bunch of kids on the day of the big tournament. Well, for you to get the complete picture, it is necessary for me to sketch in some of the background of the shooter—a story which, I might add, in many respects, parallels the history of its super-jinxed namesake.

As the fen-everything set recalls it, the Hope Diamond was first brought to the Bronx by a player who originally hailed from Chepachet, Rhode Island. After a series of backyard triumphs, he won the right to participate in a semi-final, but the morning of the contest one of the ball-bearings in his skates got stuck and, in the header which followed, his shooting finger was so badly bruised that he had to withdraw.

Then, for a while, the malevolent marble was owned by Irv Sondergaard, but shortly after he acquired it, the boy developed a game leg and was forever barred by his doctor from kneeling on the damp earth.

Finally, Whitey Wizcoczki, reputed to have the most skillful thumb north of the Harlem river, latched on to the shooter, but two days before the big tournament, the jinx caught up with him and he broke a couple of ribs falling off the back of an ice truck.

The easiest thing, of course, would have been to throw away the hex-heavy shooter but, as you know, the ways of men and urchins under the spell of superstition are hard to explain. Harry Winston's Hope Diamond, too, is supposed to carry a curse with it, but as you may have noticed, Harry hasn't thrown it away either.

AND SO, five minutes before the contest, Charlie Hersch, Whitey's closest friend, dropped the Hope Diamond shooter in front of the contestants with the dire words, "Wizcoczki says anybody wants it kin have it, only he oughta make sure his family kin afford the doctor bills."

Eleven of the players regarded it with awe and distrust, but the twelfth—a dark horse from the swanky Riverdale section—was not impressed. He picked it up, tried a test shot, and said, "If nobody wants the Diamond, I'll use it."

"Ya be lucky if ya don't bust a leg," said Hymie Michernick.

Well, for most of the contest it looked as if the rich kid was a cinch to win. Not only did the Diamond connect with everything it went after, but it seemed to hex the other shooters that attempted to hit it. Inspired and made confident by its performance, the kid from Riverdale sighted long and carefully, considered the topography of the ground and, when the situation called for extreme measures, even shot from the stomach position.

However, as the match entered the tenth and final round, a station wagon pulled up and a hefty Swede of a nursemaid got out.

"Ja-ackie," she shouted. "Dinner's almost ready and look at your clothes. You're a sight!"

"Wait a minute," said the kid, squinting at a marble four feet away.

"Albert!" yelled the nursemaid.

A chauffeur with big shoulders got out and walked toward the circle. Jackie dropped the Hope Diamond in disgust, said "Aw, nuts!" and climbed into the station wagon. And, as it drove away, the bloodshot eye of the blue shooter seemed to wink at the other players.

Hymie Michernick picked it up. "This is the last time it's going to put the squitch on anybody," he said, and threw it as far as he could.

Now, if the Hope Diamond had been an ordinary shooter, the story would end here. But, as I have gone to some pains to make clear, it was not. Propelled by the Michernick muscles, the little ball of fire sailed through the air for 50 feet, bounced off a tin can onto the sidewalk, and was picked up an hour later by an intern on his way to the hospital.

"I know someone who'll get a real kick out of this," he said, handing the Hope Diamond shooter to one of the nurses. "Will you give this marble to the patient in room 218, Whitey Wizcoczki—the little boy who broke his ribs."

I Sheltered Many a Care

I SHELTERED many a heavy care
And hugged them to my bosom,
I held them close and guarded them
For fear that I should lose them.
One day I sat beside the road
All spent and worn and sighing,
Too tired to listen to the birds,
Or mark the white clouds flying.

Then suddenly, a shining note
Like silver dropped from heaven,
Pierced my ears; the cooling shade
Offered its wayside leaven.
The swaying grasses bent to touch
My fevered cheek, and blessed me;
A wild flower reached its gentle hand
And lovingly caressed me.

The morning dew was like a drink
Of water for my thirsting;
I saw a lark lift from the grass,
His gold throat swelled to bursting.

I rose to take my cares again,
And carefully to bind them
About my heart—but they were gone.
I searched, but could not find them.

— GRACE NOLL CROWELL

VOCAL DOLLY . . . Mommy's Baby, a new baby doll, will bring doll mothers wonderful new thrills this Christmas with a plastic voice box designed like a human larynx. It separates the syllables "ma ma" in a natural sounding infant voice when the body or legs are cuddled gently.

NATIVE Decorations Are Best

Your own native woods or planted evergreens may be a convenient and delightful source of Christmas decorations.

For attractive wreaths, fir is satisfactory because it does not shed its needles. White pine is more graceful than other pines, if this type of evergreen is to be used.

Blue spruce is best for outdoor use because it sheds very quickly indoors. Arborvitae generally makes a nice flat spray. English holly is always festive. To add color to the decorations, small Jonathan apples, tangerines, kumquats and cranberries may be used effectively. Wahoo, barberry, gourds, coral berry fruit, rose hops, buckbrush and sumac also give color to arrangements.

As a formula for treating pine cones so they'll give off lovely colored flames in the fireplace, try crude copper sulphate and copper chloride in powder form, which may be purchased from a druggist. Two ounces of these and a half-pound of wax will treat a bushel of the cones. Paraffin wax may be used.

Melt the wax over low heat in a glass or non-metallic container. Put the container in a larger pan of hot water near the boiling point. Stir the sulphate and chloride into the melted wax. Spread the cones on newspapers out in the yard or in a large flat container lined with newspapers inside. Use an old whisk broom to sprinkle the mixture on the cones. When about half the mixture has been used, turn the cones over and do the other side.

No 'New Look' For S. Claus

There'll be no "new look"—nor any alterations at all in the traditional garb of Santa Claus.

Enthroned in popular conception in his red jacket with the white fur trim, his red cap and red breeches, Santa Claus was just as firmly enthroned in the department stores, toy shops and everywhere else one has seen him this Christmas.

As far back as memory goes, almost, Santa's cheery cheeks framed by a flowing white beard, have been a trademark of the jolly gentleman who slides down chimneys with a sack full of toys.

Tradition hasn't been able to do anything about breeding the proper Santa Claus girth, but it has set a fashion in Santa Claus apparel that has changed only slightly since the first picture of Mr. Claus appeared in a cartoon back in the 1860's.

The actual story of Santa's fur-trimmed outfit has become kind of garbled in mythology, but Thomas Nast, political cartoonist of the Civil War days, put the finishing touches on the old gentleman's attire.

He restored the red color of the bishop's robe, that had been borrowed from the Dutch who brought the legend of St. Nicholas to America with them. Nast also pictured the buxom gentleman in jacket, trousers and high boots.

And those articles of apparel, together with some addition of fur and color, abide to the present day in the garb of Santa Claus.

Pagans Used Holly In Pre-Christian Era

Holly was long used by pagans before early Christians gave new meaning to the popular Christmas decoration.

Romans displayed holly as a symbol of peace and friendship, associating it with Saturnalia, a festival which followed the sowing of winter wheat. Hung on doors or in windows, holly was considered protection against witches and other evil spirits.

Yeah, Which One?

An Englishman was on his first big game hunting expedition. It was impressed upon him that he must never take a chance with a leopard, he must shoot instantly. Came the time when he did meet with a leopard. His guide shouted the reminder:

"Shoot him on the spot."

The Englishman, a little rattled, said:

"Be more specific, my man, which spot?"

By Richard H. Wilkinson

THERE was a strangeness about Pancho Ortegna that was hard to describe. There was mystery in his eyes, a wildness, a curiously detached look. Yet he had the high forehead of intelligence, the cheekbones and nose of breeding, the erect carriage of pride. He was the type of man that you looked at twice.

I first saw him two summers ago in Cano. It was swelteringly hot outside, but within the dark interior of Cabello's saloon you could forget the heat. Ortegna was sitting alone at a table, an untouched drink at his elbow, an open book in his lap. No one bothered him; the dancing girls veered away; there was respect in the attitude of the waiter who served him that wasn't evidenced for other customers.

3-Minute Fiction

"Who is he?" I asked Juan.

"Pancho Ortegna, the head hunter."

"Head hunter?" I stared, drink held suspended. Juan's white teeth flashed against his dark skin.

"It surprises you, yes? That business of head hunting. Come, surely you have heard of the head hunting tribes?"

"Who hasn't?" I assented. "But who ever believed them?"

"Come," said Juan. "You Americans must be shown."

I followed Juan down Cano's single street, beneath the blazing sun, and into the cool dark interior of what might pass as a gift shop back home. Juan spoke rapidly in his native tongue to the swarthy gentleman behind the counter. The swarthy gentleman looked at me, shrugged, and disappeared into a back room. In a moment he reappeared carrying in his hand an object that caused my flesh to crawl.

"Pancho Ortegna!" I exclaimed suddenly.

The object was a human head, shrunk symmetrically to about the size of an orange.

The swarthy gentleman offered me the head for $25. When I refused it, he shrugged indifferently and disappeared behind the curtains.

"THE Ecuadorian government will fine you $400 for possessing one of these heads," Juan explained as we left the store. "No one has yet been able to discover how the average tribes remove the bones before the shrinking is done, and little else about the actual shrinking process.

"Pancho Ortegna is a scientist. He came down here two years ago, determined to solve the mystery. Naturally he ran into difficulties because of the government rules against head hunting. But this only made him more determined. He visited tribe after tribe. Those who were friendly played innocent, flatly refusing to admit any knowledge about the business. From the other tribes, the hostiles, Pancho barely escaped with his life.

I glanced at Juan quickly. "Do you mean . . . "

Again Juan shrugged. "Who knows. One cannot experiment without the proper ingredients. Certain natives have mysteriously disappeared during the past six months."

Unconsciously I quickened my step, but when we arrived at Cabello's, Pancho Ortegna was gone.

I did not see him again for two years. The second meeting left an even more vivid impression than the first. Juan and I were renewing our acquaintance and discussing old times over a bottle of Cabello's fine liquor. Across the room an old man was reading a book.

"Pancho Ortegna!" I exclaimed suddenly.

Juan shook his head. "No, that is no one more important than Cabello's old father, who comes here daily to get out of the heat." His face became grave. "You are curious about Pancho Ortegna, eh?"

I admitted that I was.

"Come," said Juan. And once more I followed him down the blazing street and into the gloomy interior of the shop we had visited before. The object that the shop owner carried when he reappeared sent a cold wave through my body. There was no mistaking it. It was the shrunken head of Pancho Ortegna.

World Cradle Of Art

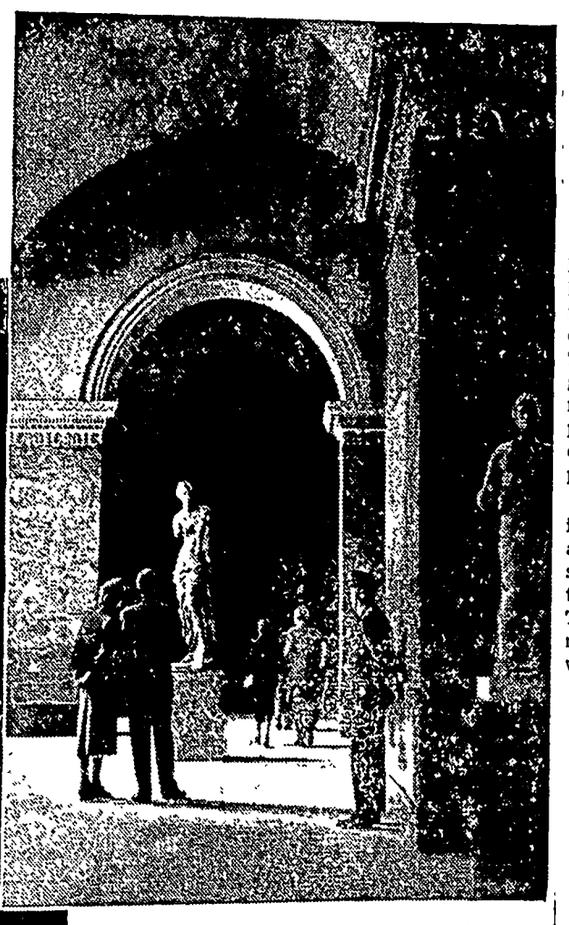
● If there is one place in the world where art can be billed in big, bold capital letters, it is the Louvre in Paris, for centuries the cradle of the world's richest collection of masterpieces. This is the treasure house that is a "must" in the grand tour of any art lover. The tour begins in the long corridor (left) which leads to the entrance of the art gallery of the Louvre. As it now stands, the Louvre is 750 yards long, 182 yards wide and about 85 feet high. Photo below shows the "grand staircase" which leads up to the treasured "Winged Victory." This scene illustrates the architectural beauty of the palace itself, aside from its being a storehouse of art pieces.

Here is the original body beautiful (right), perhaps one of the most visited pieces of art in the Louvre. Aside from the Mona Lisa and the Winged Victory, the Venus de Milo is the pride of the collection. Tourists often pause for hours to admire the ageless statue.



The photo at left might seem to border on the irreverent to an art lover. But this tourist wanted a picture of the Louvre building, and if he uses the statue of Caesar Augustus, or anyone else, as a tripod, it's just a means to an end—no disrespect intended. The photographer is interested in the ceiling which is in reality a paintng in itself.

Another attraction, aside from the masterpieces, are the art coypists (above). They copy originals in the Louvre and sell them, often at fabulous prices. Some are so good that it takes the expert eye of a connoisseur to tell the copy from the original.

Brooklyn Hurling Is a Mystery

By GRANTLAND RICE

BURT SHOTTON doesn't become tangled up with any soft job next season. He had a young pennant winner this last fall and his team will have another year's experience to work on.

There are a lot of things for which there is no substitute. One of these is experience. This should be a tough squad to handle over 154 games with its catching, pitching, infield, outfield, speed and youth. What else can you ask for? Two things, when it comes to a world series: A big hitter, such as Joe DiMaggio, and a relief pitcher, after the fashion of Joe Page.

Grantland Rice

The Dodgers are a better team over a 154-game stretch than they are at the shorter world series. It may be that by next fall big Don Newcombe can work two world series games at top speed or that some other star will arrive.

The two Dodger pitching problems or mysteries are Ralph Branca and Rex Barney. Here are two young pitchers who have everything except one ingredient. That happens to be a winning margin. Together they won only nine more games than they lost this past campaign, and that's not enough for what should be two big pitchers.

One main trouble is that neither is sure of his control. At almost any given moment either might start dishing out passes and blow the game before it can be saved. There is only one way this weakness can be cured. That's by hard work.

I recall many years ago Christy Mathewson telling how he cured his wildness. "I put up a stake at the pitching distance," he said, "and worked any number of hours throwing one just to the left of the stake and then one just to the right. My target was a matter of inches. I felt I was improving when I could plant a curve ball or a fast ball on either side of the stake and yet fairly close. After that the plate looked bigger than a barrel. But it called for a lot of pitching in practice."

If Branca and Barney could put in a good many hours pitching for control—pitching to hit a tin cup—there would be no great trouble ahead. This is the same treatment Tommy Byrne, another potential great, should employ. Byrne with control could be a stand-out, possibly the best pitcher in his league. Even as wild as he was, Byrne won 15 and lost seven for a mark of .682. But the left hander is potentially a 25-game winner.

Pitching Problems

Even this far ahead it is easy enough to see that the main problem next season will be pitching.

It was terrible pitching that wrecked the Red Sox through July Fourth and left them 12 games off the pace That's a big gap to make up. The Red Sox made it up at the fag end of the stretch and then had nothing left for a killing finish.

Next spring Joe McCarthy will be in far better shape than he was last spring—especially for pitching. He will have young McDermott, a likely looking kid, ready to go. He will have Ellis Kinder who was called to action too late this last summer. And he will have in Mel Parnell a probably 25-game winner. The Red Sox don't care too much for the riding they took in many quarters this last season for permitting the wounded, wrecked and crippled Yankees to beat them out.

They will have to show a bit more fire next year in place of riding along on their averages. Averages don't win pennants or World series.

Casey Stengel may have as many pitching problems as he had through the last campaign. In Raschi, Reynolds, Byrne, Lopat, Sanford and possibly Porterfield the Yankees have good but erratic starting strength. And in Joe Page they have the equal of two good pitchers. Without Joe Page this Yankee staff would have been nil.

But if Porterfield's arm returns, and if Byrne can locate something even approaching control, the staff will be good. In 1947 Joe Page saved and won the pennant. In 1948 Page was of little help and the Yankees lost. In 1949 Page returned to his former form and the Yankees won again. If Joe keeps his weight in check this winter and reports fairly firm next spring, the Yankees will have a winning staff.

Both Detroit and Philadelphia have the pitching if other weak spots can be cured before the 1950 season begins.

Washing Painted Walls

QUESTION: How can I wash my painted walls without having the gloss come off?

ANSWER: Get one of the commercial preparations that is sold in package form and follow the directions for use carefully. You can also use a mild solution of trisodium phosphate for the purpose. This can be bought at a paint or grocery store under a trade name; a soapless cleaning powder. You will find directions for use printed on the label. Do not expect any glossy paint to keep its gloss after many washings. Some of it is apt to wash off after a time.

ED. THOMPSON PURCHASED CORNER LOTS ON MAIN STREET

Lots Being Cleared Off For The Erection Of Double Front Building

Ed. J. Thompson, associated with the Thada Store in Klemme, last week closed a deal with Ed. Jacobs for the purchase of the two lots on the corner directly across from the Wellemeyer Building on Main street and the former site of Ed. Jacobs hardware store which burned to the ground a few years ago.

Mr. Thompson immediately procured a crew of men to clear away the wreckage from the old building and is getting the site ready to start construction of a new building as soon as the weather warrants.

The foundation of the former Jacobs brick building is still intact and will be used to support the new building which Thompson will have constructed of cement blocks, to be painted white. The new front will have a single entrance in the middle of the 48 foot front and there will also be another service entrance near the back of the building facing the side street off from main.

This new building will be the new home of Thada's Store, now located in the Wellemeyer building. Mr. Wellemeyer will take over the space formerly occupied by Thadas and will enlarge his furniture store which now occupies the basement, second and third floor balcony.

Thompson's new building will be a fine improvement to Klemme's Main street, and Ed. is to be congratulated on his venture.

MACHINE STRIPPING OF COWS HAS ADVANTAGES

Stripping with the milking machine is rapidly replacing hand stripping in many Iowa dairy barns, says Joe Hineman, extension dairyman at Iowa State College.

Stripping by machine is done by pulling down on the teat-cup assembly and massaging the udder gently at the same time.

This type of stripping offers several advantages. It prevents the teat cups from "crawling up" and injuring the delicate tissues in the udder. (This paves the way to mastitis.) Stripping by machine saves time and work by cutting out unnecessary steps.

CANCER SOCIETY RENEWS NURSES' SCHOLARSHIPS

A renewal of the nurses' scholarship program initiated last year was announced December 8th by Dr. H. W. Morgan of Mason City, president of the Iowa division of the American Cancer Society, according to Louise Q. Beyer, chairman of the Hancock County Chapter.

Fifty-two scholarships were awarded by the Iowa society in 1949, and these young women are now in training in 18 nursing schools in the state.

About 50 scholarships will be awarded again this year to young women who can meet the requirements as regards scholarship and character, and who do not have the funds to finance their own education.

No applications will be received after April 1, 1950, but young women interested should get their applications in now as soon as possible to insure time for consideration. Applicants must be able to qualify for entrance to the nursing schools. Admission requirements include: high school graduation; rank in upper third or upper half of class; and age at least 17 years at date of entrance. They must agree to take their training at some approved school of nursing in Iowa and to practice their profession for at least two years in Iowa immediately after graduation. In addition, they must have tact, dependability, a sense of humor, a pleasing personality, and a sincere desire to become a trained nurse. Character references will be required.

The scholarships are awarded for three years, and cover the cost of tuition, books and uniforms.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

The youngster was just far enough along in grade school to be able to read parts of the headlines in the newspaper. He was highly delighted with the new ability and made keeping his parents abreast of the news a nightly performance. Of course, this young man believed in Santa Claus.

One night shortly before Chistmas he was sprawled on the living room floor singing out those words he recognized in the headlines. After a few minutes of this the parents lost interest and didn't notice when the boy fell silent.

Suddenly, he began to cry. It wasn't a peevish, attention-getting wail, but an honestly heart broken cry. He had lost the brighest prospect in his young life.

When the parents tried to quiet the boy he pointed to an obscure headline on a back page of the paper: Santa Claus Dead in Car Wreck. The youngster's plantation. He believed what he that fascinating name. How long he worked to understand the rest of that headline is hard to say, but it was long enough for the world to turn into a dark, unpromising place.

Of course, the newspaper story was about someone dressed as Santa who had been killed in a traffic accident. But the little boy would have none of that explanation. He belived what he had read and never believed again in that figure of Christmas.

The young boy who read the shocking news has long since recovered and come to accept Christmas in a rather matter of fact way. So, there is probably very little point in this story.

Except this: There will be heavy traffic on the roads this weekend. Take it slow and easy. You wouldn't want to kill some other youngster's Santa Claus whether he's dressed for the part or not.

MAY RAISE INSURANCE RATES ON TEEN-AGE DRIVERS IN IOWA

The great increase of traffic accidents involving drivers under 25 years of age is not only causing traffic fatalities, but is also resulting in increased insurance rates, according to a statement issued today by G. J. Timmermann, president of the Motor Club of Iowa. The Motor Club asks all law enforcement officials and citizens to impress on youthful drivers that the life they save by obeying all traffic regulations may be their own.

A report to the Motor Club indicates drivers under 25 years of age were responsible for 41 per cent of the fatal accidents during 1948. They were also responsible for 27 per cent of all non-fatal accidents during 1948. That, according to Mr. Timmermann, is one of the principal reasons why some insurance companies refuse to insure any driver under 21 years of age, and others are contemplating restrictions on those up to 25 years of age. He also said that traffic authorities in some sections of the country are considering recommendations which would prohibit issuance of drivers licenses to those under 18 years of age.

As far as insurance rates are concerned, the Motor Club official said that companies must raise their rates when there is more chance of people being fatally or seriously injured in traffic accidents. He pointed out that medical expenses in automobile accidents increased 25 per cent during 1948 over 1945. The actual dollar cost in 1948 was approximately 50 million dollars against 40 million in 1945. When reports for 1949 are completed, the figure is expected to be even higher.

SHAMROCKS WON ONE, LOST ONE GAME PAST WEEK

Last week Tuesday the Shamrocks chalked upanother win at Garner when they defeated the Cardinals 32-24. The little Shamrocks met tough going as the Little Redbirds clipped them 32-28. Cal Josten lead the Shamrocks scoring with eleven points, while F. Dankbar copped 8 for the Card.

Belmond Avenged Shamrocks

Previously Klemme had handed Belmond their only defeat of the season and the Broncs were out for revenge, which they got by throwing the Shamrocks for a 39-31 loss. The Broncos copped a fat 19-11 half time lead and they held their advantage and were gaining with 31-20 at the end of the 3rd. The Shamrocks narrowed the margin in the last frame, but started their bombardment too late but gained 11 points while they held belmond to 8.

The Belmond second also won 26-11 over the Little Shamrocks.

For the Broncos Duane Trager and Don Faris sank 11 and 10 points respectively. The Shamrocks were evenly divided with Cal Josten, Dick Kaduce and Merlin Brinkman each hitting for 7.

Britt Eagles Coming

The Britt Eagles will invade the Shamrock court Thursday evening of this week. The Shamrocks earlier plucked the feathers out of the Eagles, but since then Britt has been coming up and should give the Shamrocks a good game. This is a double header.

SCHMIDT STOCK YARDS ARE ERECTING NEW FEED WAREHOUSE

The Schmidt Stock Yards are enlarging their plant by erecting a new feed and fertilizer storage warehouse east of their office. The new building is 30x36 feet in size and has the same pitch of roof as the other buildings so that it harmonizes with the general layout.

The building is equipped with an outside loading dock, 8 feet wide and extending along the west side 28 feet, giving access to two doors. The loading dock also extends into the interior of the building to make handling of feed much easier. It is a fine improvement to their set of buildings.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PROGRAMS WILL BEGIN AT 7:30 O'CLOCK

There will be programs by the Sunday Schools in the Peace Reformed Church north of Klemme in Ell township; at the Liberty Methodist Church in Liberty township; at the Evangelical and Reformed Church and the Methodist Church in Klemme, and at the Evangelical United Brethren Church at Goodell.

Workers have been busy the past few days decorating the several churches and getting ready for the programs. Sunday school teachers and pupils have been having rehearsals and everything is well in hand for the big evening. Treats will be given out and everyone is invited to attend the church of his choice.

EXPECT PRICES OF BETTER CATTLE TO GO DOWN

Hancock County cattle raisers can expect the best grades of cattle to continue to decline seasonally in the next few months. is the word received by Paul Henderson, county extension director.

He says that the volume of cattle feeding is expected by economists to be as large or somewhat larger this winter than last. A smaller proportion of the cattle on feed this fall are steers. Considerably more calves have gone on feed. Average weights of feeders are lighter and such cattle are likely to come to market leater.

The seasonal distribution of cattle slaughter may be more nearly normal next year than this, according to Francis Kutish, Iowa State College economist. However, there is one offsetting factor is the large number of cattle which have been gleaning corn in the field this fall. These cattle may come to market earlier than would otherwise expected. Kutish thinks that many farmers will find it to their advantage to continue pushing these cattle to market.

Supervisor Districts Viewed From The Editor's Desk

By R. A. Jorgenson, Sr.

The article we published last week on dividing Hancock County into permanent Supervisor Districts brought out a lot of favorable comment from over the county and it seems the plan we outlined met with the approval of the citizens of the county.

To give the people of the county a clearer picture of the proposed set-up we have tallied up the population in the three districts as follows:

District One

| Town or Twp. | Population |
|---|---|
| Crystal | 613 |
| Madison | 712 |
| Ellington | 732 |
| Garfield | 693 |
| Concord | 584 |
| Crystal Lake, town | 301 |
| Garner, town | 1549 |
| Total | 5184 |

District Two

|---|---|
| Liberty | 628 |
| Ell | 584 |
| Amsterdam | 468 |
| Erin | 530 |
| Twin Lake | 516 |
| Avery | 568 |
| Klemme town | 528 |
| Kanawha town | 767 |
| Goodell town | 236 |
| Total | 4825 |

District Three

|---|---|
| Bingham | 551 |
| Orthel | 586 |
| Britt twp. | 551 |
| Boone | 667 |
| Woden town | 305 |
| Britt town | 1813 |
| Magor | 439 |
| Corwith town | 481 |
| Total | 5393 |

According to the population, total 15,402 for the county, the three districts come out fairly even with only a difference of 209 between District One and Three, and a difference of only 359 between District Two and One. Districts One and Three have the largest population and District Two will have the largest area by one township, which equalizes that angle of the set-up.

It would be well for the people of the county who are interested in having permanent supervisor districts set up in this county to write to the Board of Supervisors requesting that they take action on the matter. It is within their power to make this change.

With the district plan set up each district would then vote for their own supervisor in coming elections, and not on a county-wide basis as we are now doing. Hancock is one of the not over four counties in the state on the county-wide plan. If districts have proven sucessful and desirable in 95 or more other counties in Iowa, why not have Hancock County get in step?

GARNER SADDLE CLUB HELD XMAS PARTY AT KLEMME

The Garner Saddle Club held their annual Christmas party and dance at the Klemme Community Hall Friday evening with a large attendance. Nearly all came dressed in cowboy style or riding clothes.

Invitations had been sent to neighboring clubs and many responded and were present. It was one of the best parties the group had given and everybody had a lot of fun.

PRESIDENTIAL CHRISTMAS TREE . . . This was the annual community Christmas tree in Washington, D. C., as it blazed with light last year. # Youngster Gets Tips on Railway Prexy's Skills

CHICAGO.—Seldom does a youngster get the opportunity for the kind of advice that came to 15-year-old Eugene Knol, of Blue Earth, Minn.

Eugene had wanted to be a railroad president ever since he can remember. A high school freshman, he has his heart set on that job. Now, he has taken the first step in that direction.

He was assigned in school to write a paper on what he planned to do in adult life. He needed expert advice, so he wrote to C. H. Buford, president of the Milwaukee railroad.

The letter finally found its way through all the intricate channels in a huge railway office to the desk of President Buford.

Buford said later he read the letter with a nostalgic feeling. It had been years, he said, since railroad presidents received letters from boys with that ambition.

Ambition Fading

He recalled that at one time it was the mark of a typical American boy. But today, Buford said, that ideal seems to have disappeared in a world of atomics and jet planes.

Buford was glad to write the letter, he said, and took considerable time from his duties. He was "on the spot," so he thought about it for a long time, then sat down and outlined the steps he believed brought him to the top job.

This is his advice:

1. Keep strong and physically fit. This is a must for railroad men.

2. No young man can succeed in any line unless he is scrupulously honest, conscientious and considerate of others. Develop confidence in yourself, but don't be a smart aleck.

3. Industry and co-operation are important. Teamwork is as essential on a railroad as on a football field.

Don't be Miserly

4. Learn and remember the value of the dollar. Don't be miserly, but get value received for what you spend, and don't squander either your own or your employer's money.

5. Cultivate and develop a pleasing and friendly personality.

6. Finish college, and, perhaps, a technical or professional school. Specialize in some type of engineering, accounting, business administration, law, or some other field. It is possible to achieve the presidency through any of these lines.

7. Spend your summer vacations working on a railroad. You must know a great deal about all types of railroad work.

8. When you get that vacation job, get a letter of recommendation or go on your own. Sell yourself to your employer. Tell him that you are not afraid to work and that you are ready to start.

9. When your preparations are finished, go after your permanent job the same way you went after the vacation job.

From then on it's up to you.

The railroad president concluded: "I sincerely hope that your ambition may be achieved and that some day, when I am not around, those of your generation will read the annual report of a large railroad, signed by Eugene Knol, president."

How to Give Space Effect Without Adding to Cost

With each additional square foot of floor area in a house costing from $10 to $15, it pays to get the most comfort and spacious effect out of a small floor area, comments Miss Vera M. Ellithorpe, extension home management specialist, Kansas state college, Manhattan.

"Most of us live in small houses so we need to learn how to make the best possible use of floor space," the extension specialist points out. "Storage walls instead of chests of drawers or dressers will make good use of floor-to-ceiling space in storage space.

"Another suggestion is to build in storage for bedding, clothes, toys and out-of-season clothing below the mattress and springs. Use furniture that is small in scale, simple in design and medium to light in color to give an effect of space. Large pieces of dark furniture against a light background crowd a room."

Light-colored woodwork, or paint the same as, or slightly darker than the back-ground color of the walls helps to enlarge a small room. Mouldings and patterns in rugs, upholstering, wallpaper, and draperies should all be scaled to the size of the room rather than over-sized or bold in design.

Simple curtains that let in the view and merely frame the window are the best for the small room.

Another suggestion is to paint or paper one wall a color harmonizing with but lighter than the other walls to make that wall apparently recede.

WATER

EXPERT SAYS IOWA'S WATER SUPPLY HOLDS

--Iowa City—Most Iowans don't have to worry about a ground water shortage, according to State Geologist H. Garland Hershey at the State University of Iowa.

"Every year some wells go dry," he added, "and to the individual or city that is a tragedy. But there has been nothing to prove that the state's available water supply is decreasing through the years."

Iowa Wells Safe

The prolonged period of scanty rainfall this fall caused a large number of shallow wells to go dry, but this condition does not exist equally throughout the state.

In the Cedar Rapids and Ft. Dodge areas some of the observation wells measured periodically by the geological surveys have shown a decrease of from 1½ to 3 feet in water level as compared with November, 1948.

However, in the Tarkio creek valley in southwestern Iowa, the observation wells show a level of about 2 feet higher than at this time last year.

In 1934 and 1936, at the peak of the drought, these southwestern Iowa wells measured 3 to 4 feet lower than their present levels.

Hershey said it is true that there may be less water than there was 20 years ago because there is now a much larger number of persons drawing on the available supply. But as long as rainfall remains essentially the same, the water levels will remain essentially steady, since that is where the shallow ground water comes from.

Iowa Well Off

Iowa is as well off or in a better situation than most other states in the amount of ground water which it has available, according to Hershey. The state is one of the biggest per capita users of this source as compared with many states which have to depend upon surface supplies.

In addition to the many shallow observation wells, the geological surveys also make periodic checks on deep wells throughout the state.

The water levels is deep wells fluctuate much less than shallow wells, Hershey said. Although deep wells seldom actually go dry, the water levels may be lowered because of increased production and changes in the pumping equipment, or additional wells may be needed to remedy the shortage.

Other deep wells, particularly those drilled many years ago, may fail because of corroded casing or other mechanical difficulties. Here a new well drilled to essentially the same depth as the old well will often develop an adequate supply.

A deeper well or new equipment may be the answer to any supposed water shortage, because in Iowa the water is there and will continue to be available, according to Hershey.

Officially, the high seas begin three miles from shore.

DYNAMITE

Students in a rural school near Guthrie Center had a classroom interruption recently, when a nearby dynamite blast sent a portion of a tree trunk, about one foot in diameter and three feet long, crashing through the roof. Three students were bruised and scratched. Three county employees did the blasting, which took place about 200 feet from the schoolhouse. School was dismissed.

May the stars in the heavens shine as never before on your Christmas happiness this year.

MORE CATTLE TO BE ON FEED IN IOWA IN 195

An Iowa State College bee specialists sees several possibili ties in the 1950 beef supply an marketing picture.

W. G. Zmolek, extension live stock marketing speciolist, point out that the large amount o down corn created a tremend ous demand for the more com mon grades of feeder cattle This influx of feeders into th state plus heavier movements o all grades of feeder cattle wi put more total cattle on feed i 1950 than the past year, an the average weight of feeders below that of last year. Th probably will mean heavie marketings of fed cattle durin the last half of 1950.

This year plain cattle are be ing used to clean up down cor This has put them on a full fee of corn earlier than usual fo cattle of this grade. Zmole feels that probably the wis thing to do is to keep these ca tle on feed and market the when they are finished for the grade.

Many cattle were purchase by farmers who ordinarily d not feed cattle. When the fir heavy snow comes many these farmers may sell. B cause of this Zmolek thin there will be heavy marketin of cattle from cornfields in th next month to 6 weeks. E perienced feeders may find it their advantage to purchase son of these cattle.

Legend of the YULE LOG

In Virginia, the old Dominion, storied land of early American history, there is an old tradition of the origin of the Yule log that is retold every Christmas.

As the family sits around the Yule log and sips their Christmas eggnog on Christmas eve, the ancient legend is recounted again.

One very cold Christmas eve, when the frosty wind howled across a world of snow, an old man was sitting in his little cabin wishing that he had a fire to warm him.

Suddenly he heard the cry of a little child away out in the cold. The old man hobbled to the door and gazed out across the snow. The wind and the snow came rustling in and the old man shivered until his "onliest two teef" chattered with cold.

The plaintive cry of the child came again above the whistle of the wind. It went straight to the old man's heart and he wished with all his power of longing that he might have the strength to go out and find the unfortunate babe.

The cry came a third time — and then a wondrous thing happened. A miraculous power filled the old man's veins. His muscles became strong and tense, his crutch fell back into the cabin and he stepped from his threshold out into the snow.

Hurrying over the snow with a speed he had not owned since boyhood, by and by he came to a little child lying in a snow bank.

He bent down and touched the child and a great new strength flowed over him, a strength which seemed to give him wings as he sped back to his cabin.

Arriving there, he placed the child upon the bed, tenderly drew the ragged coverlet about it and then looked to see if there were a bit of furniture he could use to make a fire with which to warm the little one.

At that precise moment a great log rolled across the threshold and into the fireplace. The little child looked at the log with eyes like stars—stars which sent gleams of light that kindled the log with the most brilliant fire the old man ever had seen.

The dingy little room immediately was filled with radiance and warmth, and as the light enwrapped the child he laughed and laughed with a melody like a song from the heart. The old man turned his eyes to where the fire burned and watched the flames leap in beautiful rainbow tints over the log, and as his old eyes watched, the colors seemed to form the shape of the Cross in the fire.

The flames of the Cross leaped higher and higher, blue, red, yellow and white, and as the old man watched this display, suddenly and magically there appeared a table in the center of the room, covered with a Christmas feast such as never before had been spread before his eyes. And never again was the old man hungry or cold, and never after that was there a Christmas in old Virginia without the Yule log and the Christmas Child to give light and warmth.

And that is the story of the Yule log as it is told in Virginia every Christmas eve.

Finns See Evergreen As Mourning Symbol

Evergreens are never used as decorations in the homes and churches of Finland because the Finns regard them as symbols of mourning.

At Christmas most homes where there are children suspend a "heaven" from the living room or dining room ceiling. Such "heavens" consist of a cord framework covered with straw and different colors of paper ribbon, etc., and decorated with paper stars and silhouettes cut in various designs. The effect, when reflecting the firelight and the candles' glow, is mysterious and fascinating.

Candles are used profusely in the churches; the alters are banked and the windows are filled with them, so that in the pre-dawn darkness (Christmas morning services begin at 6 A. M.) the churches beckon approaching worshippers like brilliant lanterns.

After the early church services, the gayly decorated sleds race for home, bright robes flying and sleigh bells a-jingling. Breakfast is festive, and then everyone takes a long nap. Christmas Day is not devoted to play or gift-giving; it is religiously observed, with intervals of carol singing and Bible readings.

The day after Christmas is St. Stephen's day, and from then until New Year's parties and general festivity are in order. Although gift-giving is not an integral part of the observances, in some parts of Finland trinkets and useful gifts of wearing apparel are presented to children by Wainamoinen, the Kalevala hero of Finnish legend.

Legend relates that the crown of thorns which was placed on the head of Jesus was made of holly and that before the crucifixion the berries were white, but turned crimson like drops of blood.

Time Not Constant In the Celebrations Of Christ's Nativity

While December is now the month in which Christ's birthday is celebrated by Christians all over the world, research and study show that Christ's nativity has been celebrated in January, March, April, May, September and October by various peoples.

And although few people know it, it was for the purpose of substituting a Christian festival for pagan ones of Romans and Druids that celebrations of Christmas in December were popularized.

No historian pretends to fix the actual date of Christ's birth or the date at which Christmas became a general festival.

About all that is known is that during the fourth century the feast of the Nativity was observed in all western world churches at different dates.

The confusion resulting from celebrations in seven months of the year caused the western church authorities to meet in 340 to set a definite date for the celebration. The eastern churches did not cooperate until the sixth century when December 25 was set as the day to be observed.

The question has arisen innumerable times as to why December was selected as the month for rejoicing. The answer is that this month was chosen in order that a Christian festival could compete with those of the pagans, because December was noted for its feasts and holidays in nearly every civilized land.

Greeks, Romans, Saxons and Scandinavians all took part in the celebration of these festivals which had originated before the birth of Christ.

From the Saxons came the ceremony of burning the Yule log. The Saxons burned great bonfires in honor of their god Thor. From the Romans came the giving of presents, for this custom has been traced to the Roman Saturnalia.

It may seem strange to claim that the pagan riotousness might be the forebear of the Christian holiday of goodness and love, but intermingled with that which was objectionable, were things that have gone straight to the hearts of people throughout the Christian world.

Santa Affected By Restrictions

It's difficult to understand, but the genial spirit of Christmas, Santa Claus himself, hasn't always had it easy. There have been occasions when laws or traditions or regulations have put certain curbs on the old gentleman. Here are some examples:

In Newark, N. J., Santa is required to pass a stiff physical examination before he can serve in a department store. And even then he is barred from kissing any of the children who perch upon his knee.

In Charleston, S. C., charity Santas have been forbidden to make a pitch on public streets on the grounds that children flocking in to see them may create a traffic hazard. And in Washington a few years ago, when the postmaster general was asked to print a Santa Claus stamp at Christmas time he rejected the proposal with a scornful, "I should say not!"

Outside the U.S.A., Santa has had trouble, too. In Montreal, Canada, an influential organization fought against holding of the city's annual Santa Claus parade on the ground that it was "merely a display of grotesque and vulgar buffoonery." A prominent journalist in Rio de Janeiro fostered a movement to do away with Santa Claus (Papa Noel) in Brazil and substitute a toy-bearing grandfather Indian. In Mexico City the minister of education recommended that the Aztec god Quetzalcoatl, instead of St. Nick, should bring gifts to children.

In the field of opinion, Santa has encountered some detractors. A Prof. Ivan E. McDougle, sociologist at Goucher college, Baltimore, declared: "The Santa Claus myth has lived too long. Parents should substitute philosophy"—whatever that is.

A Toronto psychiatrist got in his blast. "It should be made clear to children," he said, "that Santa Claus is not necessarily a real man any more than any other character out of a story book."

FEEDING SOW RIGHT BOOSTS SPRING PIGS

Right now is the time to start saving the early spring pig crop, says E. L. Quaife, extension swine specialist at Iowe State College.

The size and vigor of pigs, the number of live pigs farrowed and how many live until weaned are affected by the feeding and management of the pregnant sow.

Sows carrying litters should be kept in good flesh. They may get all the corn they need by running in cornstalk fields this year. Where they are kept in the lot, however, they can be kept in good flesh by hand feeding ear corn.

Quaife suggests several good winter rations for the pregnant sow.

For hand feeding, he recommends 4 pounds of ear corn, or enough to keep sows in good flesh, 2 pounds of whole oats, alfalfa hay fed from a rack, and ½ to three-quarters pound of 35 to 40 percent supplement. The supplement may be replaced by a gallon of separated milk or buttermilk.

A good ration for self or hand feeding may consist of equal amounts of ground corn, ground oats and ground alfalfa by weight, with 200 pounds of supplement added to a ton of the mixture for gilts, or 100 pounds of supplement added per ton for old sows.

The following mixture is designed for self feeding along with ear corn fed by hand: 900 pounds ground oats, 900 pounds ground alfalfa and 200 pounds of supplement. If dehydrated alfalfa is used, Quaife says to reduce the amount to 400 pounds, to increase the oats, and add ¼ pound of irradiated yeast per ton of the feed.

Quaife emphasizes that alfalfa must be of good quality. The supplement may be a mixture of 100 pounds of tankage, 100 pounds of soybean oilmeal and 100 pounds linseed oilmeal, or 35 to 40 percent commercial supplement.

Minerals also are important, and Quaife suggests the following mineral mixture to be self-fed: 20 pounds of iodized salt, 50 pounds ground limestone, 27.86 pounds steamed bone meal, and 2 pounds ferrous sulfate. Minerals may be added to the grain ration at the rate of a pound to each 100 pounds of the grain mixture, but minerals should be self-fed on the side.

In addition to one new member, Richard Howard, 23 members answered roll call at the December meeting held at the home of Gene Janssen. Jerry Hall, Merlyn Helps and Galen Gruis gave a few facts of their trip to International and were supplemented by pictures and remarks from Gene. A roller skating party, to be held during Christmas vacation was discussed. On December 21 the club plans to tour the John Deere plant in Waterloo. The leader gave a brief account of the Short Course he attended in Ames. The club sang Christmas Carols accompanied by Jo-Ann Lage at the piano. The Cheer Fund was the recipient of the $2 donation. Cleon Presholt made the motion for adjournment. Gifts were exchanged followed by a delicious lunch served by Mrs. Janssen. The January meeting to be held at the home of Geo. Dirks.

Christmas carols express better than anything else, probably, the true spirit of Christmas.

The word "carol" itself signifies joy and was originally used to accompany a dance. William Wallace Fyfe concludes that the term carol "signifies a song of joy or exultation." Another definition states: "A carol is a hymn of praise especially such as is sung at Christmas in the open air."

In England, which gave America most of its carols, they were sometimes gay and sometimes convivial until the time of the Puritans, who tried to suppress the Christmas spirit.

After the Restoration, the religious nature of the day was for a time almost forgotten in the reaction from Puritanism, and the carol was temporarily lost in the songs.

There are many quaint customs associated with the early carolers that might be used today to break the monotony of going from house to house singing Christmas hymns.

It was about the 16th century that caroling became a Christmas custom, and is supposed to have been brought to England from Italy by the traveling clergy. The first real Christmas carol is attributed to St. Francis of Assisi who made a model of the Bethlehem manger to help him tell his people the Christmas story.

The idea of caroling fitted admirably into the English conception of Christmas as a combination of religious celebration and a great home day with neighborly feeling, so it grew and flourished in that country.

Little bands and groups of singers which sprang up in the towns and villages came to be known as "Waits." A natural explanation of the name seems to be that it refers to watching and waiting, for Christmas Eve is called the Vigil of Christmas.

As early as December 21, which is the day dedicated to St. Thomas, mummers and carolers would begin going from door to door, announcing the great feast at hand. It was natural for the householders to offer hospitality to these Christmas troubadours, and gradually in many places the custom of giving alms and presents of various kinds was established.

This benign custom threatened at one time in England to become a profession and to lose its original simple charm.

For a period beginning just when no one knows and ending in 1820, there were in London and Westminster companies of "Waits" whose leaders held office by public appointment and who obtained an exclusive right to solicit contributions from the public.

The carolers were often accompanied by entertainers who gave a spirit of revelry to the occasions. The mummers often interrupted the singing to give their interpretation of "St. George and the Dragon." Tumblers, dressed in bright red, would perform their arts of skill to entertain the onlookers.

PLAY IT SAFE

Don't Mix Gaiety With Danger When Celebrating Christmas

While Christmas is the merriest of all seasons of the year it can also be a time of tragedy if certain hazards aren't avoided and some particular precautions taken.

The National Safety Council annually points out that the Christmas holidays are the most dangerous of the year, usually replete with casualties, home accidents, fires and falls.

The council has listed the following "don'ts" and precautions which if remembered will help make this Christmas season a safe one:

The Christmas tree shouldn't be placed near a stove or fireplace.

Don't give children any toys that could prove dangerous, such as those with sharp points. If toys are operated with electricity, be sure some grownup supervises their use.

The Christmas tree should not be decorated with lighted candles. Carefully-wired electric bulbs definitely are much safer.

Don't leave a lighted tree unguarded at any time. One should be on the lookout for fire all the time the tree is lighted. Especially dangerous is the practice of some families in leaving the Christmas tree lighted and unwatched all night long.

One should never use a rickety, unsafe ladder in decorating the tree.

Don't place Christmas candles near the tree, curtains, paper wreaths or any other inflammable decorations.

Remember, the Christmas tree can be made fire-resistant. According to the United States forestry service, it can be done in this manner: Divide the weight of your tree by four and buy that many pounds of ammonium sulphate. Dissolve it in water—one and one-half pints of water to each pound of ammonium sulphate. Cut the end of your tree trunk on a diagonal. Put some of the solution in a jar and stick the diagonal butt of the tree into it. Add more solution as the tree drinks it up.

Don't be excessive about Christmas "spirits."

Keep toys out of places where people might trip over them.

Remove the tree from the house before it dries out.

During Christmas you'll probably have many guests, so sprinkle salt or sand on icy steps and sidewalks.

Druids First to Use "Magic" of Mistletoe

The greens which are used for Christmas decorations found their way into early festivities because of certain virtues attributed to them by the ancients, and many of them which adorned pagan seasonal rites were later taken over to grace the ceremonies and celebrations of Christmas Day.

In both England and America, the holly and the mistletoe are associated with Christmas as invariably as are the plum pudding and Christmas tree.

It was the Druids who first used the mistletoe. "Heal-all" was their name for it. The plant was supposed to have curative values, and gradually they assigned to it all manner of magic powers.

Their priests, each year around the time when we now celebrate Christmas, would have high platforms built around the sacred oak trees which, in a manner of speaking, were "hosts" to the mistletoe. Robed in ceremonial vestments of white, they ascended these platforms, and with golden sickles especially made for the solemn occasion they cut away the mistletoe.

The Saxons also prized it and it was they who gave to it the name of mistletoe.

Eventually the green came to be regarded as a symbol of peace. Opposing warriors who met near it would call a truce, and it was customary to hang it over the entrance doors so that they who entered might be assured of friendship.

AND I WANT . . . This is a candid camera shot of a little girl being interviewed by a genial Santa on the subject of her desires in the line of Christmas presents. The rapt expression on her face is typical of small girl-and-boyhood when a lovely crisis like this presents itself.

On Christmas

While the litter from Christmas packages is still about, be particularly careful of smoking. Hot ashes dropped on tissue paper or a carelessly-tossed match could result in tragedy.

* * *

December 25 was decreed as the date of Christ's nativity by the Roman emperor Julian who began his reign as a Christian, but reverted to paganism before his death.

We wish you well... this season.

PROFIT IN CONTOURING DEPENDS ON ROTATION

Rotation affects the returns a farmer can expect from contouring or terracing, according to Iowa State College studies made on the Soil Conservation Experimental Farm in Page County.

Largest increase in returns for either contouring or terracing seems to come with a corn-corn-oats-meadow-meadow rotation.. This is probably because fertility rather than moisture is more nearly the limiting factor. The 5-year rotation includes more legume than a corn-corn-oats-meadow rotation or a corn-oats-meadow rotation.

A corn-oats-meadow-meadow rotation includes a large acreage of meadow. But it evidently contains too few acres of corn to get the greatest dollar returns from increases in yields.

The most profitable rotation at either 1945 or 1947-41 prices was the 5-year corn-corn-oats-meadow-meadow rotation when contouring and terracing were used.

In the same cheery manner the words "Merry Christmas" come to you with our hope that all the season's happiness and joy be yours.

SOW WITH MANGE GIVES IT TO PIGS

Spray Sows Now To Protect Pigs From Farrowing Until Marketed

If you keep your brood sows free from mange you'll have little trouble with mangy pigs farrowing to market, suggests Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist at Iowa State College.

Mange spreads from animal to animal, and most mange on pigs comes from their mothers. This protective step is particularly beneficial because it isn't practical to treat pigs before they are weaned.

Use Lindane Spray

Mange-infested hogs do poorly. They scratch and rub rigorously. The skin about the ears and along the top of the neck and back becomes inflamed, scabby with small pimples, or cracked and raw. In addition to unthriftiness and slow gains, mange mars the appearance of the animal.

For treatment at this time of year, Gunderson recommends a single spray with lindane. Use of crankcase oil or lime sulfur isn't practical at this time of year, he says, because there is more chance of chilling if oil is applied or if a dip of lime sulfur is used. Other states have reported good results with a one-fourth percent solution of chlordane, but not enough experimental work has been done in Iowa to warrant a definite recommendation.

Leaves No Taint

There are several advantages of using lindane—the pure gamma isomer of benzene hexachloride—over using ordinary benzene hexachloride. Lindane leaves no tainting of the carcass so may be used right up to marketing time It does not have the undesirable musty odor carried by impurities found in the ordinary benzene hexachloride.

Concentration recommended by Gunderson is one-fourth percent gamma isomer This is obtained by mixing 2 pounds of 25 percent lindane wettable powder and a package of wetting agent in 100 gallons of water. Apply a gallon on each animal The wetting agent helps carry the material through the hair to the skin where the mange is located.

WRAP PIPES IN CABLE TO PREVENT FREEZING

Cold weather need not stop farmers from piping water into uninsulated buildings in which the temperature may get below freezing. Harold Beaty, extension agricultural engineer at the Iowa State College, offers several pointers on how to keep pressure water system pipes from freezing inside such buildings as poultry houses, barns and hog houses.

A simple method is to wrap heating cable around the pipes and valves. If the temperature falls below freezing, electricity is turned on by a thermostat, the wire warms up and prevents water inside from freezing. The heating wire is coated with rubber-type insulation material. It works on the same principle as any other electrical heating unit.

Heating cable comes in various lenghts. Prices vary, but a 14-foot length with a plug can be bought for $3.50, a 20-foot for $3.75, and a 40-foot length for $7. A thermostat can be bought for around $4.

Cost of operation will vary according to the length of pipe to be heated, amount of water going hrough the pipe, outside temperature and insulation, says Beaty. For a temperature of 10 degrees above zero the tape is run straight along the pipe; for 7 degrees above zero, spirals are 6 inches apart; and for 5 degrees below the tape is wrapped 2 inches between spirals.

Use of heating cable is not a fire hazard, according to Beaty, if installed properly and protected with the right size of fuse. He cautions to follow directions of the manufacturer.

If a farmer doesn't want to use heating cable, Beaty suggests constructing a frost-proof hydrant. Have the pipe enter the building through an 8 or 10-inch tile extending from the floor to 4½ to 5 feet into the ground. A sop and waste cock in the pipeline is used to shut off the water supply below the frost line. A few inches of gravel in the bottom of the tile permits the water to seep away as the stop and waste valve is closed and the faucet opened. The tile above ground under the floor should be installed with several inches of sawdust or ocmmercial insulation.

The stop and waste cock arrangement makes hydrants safe from freezing even outside in below-zero weather, according to Beaty. Its only drawback is that automatic waterers can't be used.

Automatic waterers may be used safely without use of heating cable if they are placed right above the tile and connected with rubber hose at the ground surface or a little below. However, Beaty suggests insulating the hose inside the tile and banking around the tile where it is exposed to air.

MAKE HOLIDAY GOODIES OF DRIED FRUITS, NUTS

Combine dried fruits and nuts, and you have party fare that's healthful, economical and easily prepared for holiday entertaining.

Nut-stuffed dried fruits and tutti-frutti squares or balls are all you need for dinner dessert or for coffee time, says Jewel Graham, Iowa State College nutritionist. She points out that dried fruits—dates, peaches, apricots, pears, prunes and figs—are plentiful and inexpensive this year. The nut crop was a record one also, and the supply is at an all-time high. Fruits and nuts offer extra food values ordinary sugar confections usually don't give.

Modern methods of drying mean that dried fruits are good to eat just as they come from the package. But they may be "plumped up," Miss Graham says, by letting them stand for a short time in boiling water. Roll the fruits, stuffed with nuts or fondant, in powdered sugar or in coconut.

Raisins are probably the best dried fruit buy right now. Use raisins in your tutti-frutti candies, Miss Graham suggests. Grind up a combination of dried fruits, perhaps dates, figs, prunes and raisins. Then add chopped nuts and lemon juice or honey to moisten. Let the mixture stand a while, make into balls or squares, and roll in powdered sugar or coconut. Or the mixture may be shaped into a roll for slicing. Wrap in waxed paper to store.

MORE GRAIN BINS THAN ARE NEEDED

Iowa now has more grain storage space than it needs, by 500,000 bushels. And there's more to come.

Production Marketing administration (PMA) officials, who in early fall were visibly worried about the Iowa corn storage problem, now report that when all bins contracted for have been delivered and erected there will be space for storing an additional 10 to 11 million bushels of corn. This space, however, will go begging.

The men who handle the grain loans program say that the storagt facilities which will be empty this winter and next summer, may be more than utilized when next fall's corn crop is harvested.

The federal government took delivery on 130 million bushels of Iowa corn this fall. Of that total, 10 million bushels was shipped out to other terminals, and 120 million are in storage in the state.

A further breakdown reveals that 85 million bushels is in new CCC bins, 25 million in old CCC bins, and 10 million in country elevators.

About 34 per cent, or 66 million bushels of corn, was reseal-ed this year.

The PMA reports that 196 million bushels is under 1948 loan and purchase agreements.

And, if this year storage program was a headache, what will next year's crop bring? Here's what one PMA official said:

"If Iowa has any corn crop at all next year the storage problem we had this fall will seem like a picnic compared to what might happen next season."

Last August and September grain storage, or the lack of it, became a hot political issue in the state. Both Democrats and Republicans can pat themselves on the back for "solving" the problem.

Republican state headquarters kept the issue hot by constant reminder that the administration was "twiddling its thumbs" on the storage issue thereby letting the farmrs down.

Democratic headquarters forwarded each critical "Republican report" to Washington in an effort to get enough bins into Iowa to handle the storage problem.

Hancock Drain Levies Get OK

Hancock County Supervisors approved the report of the committee to classify lands and assess benefits in Hancock County drainage district No. 151, as amended.

The district is a new district recently established and constructed in Erin and Amsterdam townships at a cost of approximately $75,000.

The assessment was ordered levied and taxpayers in the district have 20 days to appeal their assessment in case they are not satisfied with the assessment as amended.

The commission on the project included Drainage Engineer William Henschen, William Boehnke and T. C. Nelson.

Judgement Entered

A judgement decree was entered recently in Hancock county district court against W. B. McKee of Garner, as a result of a suit filed by the Iowa Falls Sales company. District Judge Tom Boynton of Forest City awarded judgement in the sum of $308.05 and interest at 5 per cent per annum from November 18, to the Iowa Falls firm.

"Moth Ball" Fleet

To protect the United States' "moth ball" fleet from humidity—the breeder of corrosion, mildew and rot—Captain Oliver D. Colvin (U.S.N. retired) invented the "Cargocaire System" for hold dehydration. Essentially, the system controls the humidity inside the vessel. This is accomplished by the circulation of fresh air through twin beds of a moisture-absorbing chemical—silica gel—and the withdrawal of stale air. Only one of the moisture-absorbing units is used at a time.

Gopher State

For almost a century Minnesota has been known as the "Gopher State." The cognomen was the indirect result of the $5,000,000 bond issue for the construction of railroads in 1857, according to Judge Charles E. Flandrau in his "History of Minnesota and Tales of the Frontier." Although there does not seem to be any logical relation between the two, it was actually a cartoon ridiculing the proposed bond issue that caused the "gopher" nickname to be given the state.

Star of Bethlehem Continues to Puzzle Modern Scholars

Once again Christendom sees the Star of Bethlehem and, like the Wise Men of old, rejoices with exceeding great joy.

Astronomers have discounted possibilities that the star may have been a natural phenomenon since such phenomena occur too far from the earth to serve as any sort of local guide. Modern opinion is, however, inclined to hold that there was a Star — although the story probably has been touched by Oriental imagery.

St. Matthew suggests that even the Wise Men may have lost sight of the star while they were in Jerusalem; hence, they rejoiced when it reappeared to their vision as they approached the Manger of Bethlehem.

Come to think of it, astronomers have sought an astronomically authentic star —and found it not; historians have sought an historically human Jesus of Nazareth —and are still arguing whether or not they have found Him: even zealous theologians, striving to harmonize messianic and eschatological theories with the illusive historical and human Jesus, have sometimes lost sight of the Babe in the Manger Who from His lowly stable draws unto Himself all who are weary and heavy-laden.

Pressing close to that sacred Manger, Christendom glimpses the Star of Bethlehem once more and rejoices in the light of righteousness and peace which has conquered every tyranny that evil men could think of, the light that shineth in the darkness and shall not fail.

How to Plant a Tree—And What Kind to Plant

In most cities the planting of street trees is controlled by local civic authtorities in order to maintain an interesting uniformity of species and avoid trouble with uplifted sidewalks and the wrong planting of fragile, easily broken trees. Now that effective spraying methods have been found for the control of the bark beetle which carries the Dutch Elm disease, American elms may again be planted.

For planting in residential urban areas, the following kinds are recommended by Howard Taylor, president of the American Association of Nurserymen: Red oak, sugar and Norway maple, thornless honey locust, scarlet oak, shingle oak, silver linden, little leaf European linden, sweetgum and corktree. In acid soil regions, pin oak can be used.

Set the tree the same depth it grew in the nursery as revealed by the soil mark on the trunk. Dig a good sized hole. It is better to make a five dollar hole for a two dollar tree than a two dollar hole for a five dollar tree. If the subsoil is clay or hardpan remove it and substitute coarse gravel for better drainage.

Untangle the roots, cut off any bruised or broken ones with sharp shears. Set the tree in the hole and spread out the roots. Do not let them cross, wind around, double under or crowd. Cover the roots with good topsoil and then tramp it firm. Pour in a bucket of water.

Hambletonian's Family Tree

Hambletonian, famous trotter, was the son of Abdallah and a crippled cast-off known as the Charles Kent mare. While the sire was a descendant of Messenger, famous English stallion brought to America in 1801, Hambletonian's dam was so no-account that Jonas Seely, Jr., was glad to unload both the mare and her gangling foal on Rysdyk who had to scrape up the needed $125 from friends to get his dubious horseflesh. Before the Orange County Dutchman died in 1870, six years before Hambletonian, he was a wealthy man from the variously estimated stud fees (between $185,000 and $300,000) earned by the great stallion.

Bakers Always Busy

Practically all bakery products are produced, wrapped, distributed, and sold within a 24-hour period, according to the American Bakers association. Bakers work 'round-the-clock to meet the tremendous demand for a continual flow of fresh baked goods. One large baking company even employs its own weather man to insure fresh products. Knowing that on rainy and windy days thousands of housewives will not go shopping, a good forecaster can predict tomorrow's big city bread requirements down to within a few hundred loaves.

CHRISTMAS IS A FAMILY AFFAIR

The beloved task of trimming the tree belong to the little folk. Leged says the fir tree was brought into the home and decorated with candles to show the beauty of a snow-covered tree on a stormy night.

Christmas is a family time. It's a time when the family gathers for an evening of trimming the tree, decorating the house, writing notes of best wishes and wrapping gay packages. There are hidden gifts on the highest shelves and hushed conversations—all in preparation for the festive Christmas day.

Those are the traditional customs that go on in nearly every home in America. There are many other Christmas customs that we can adopt from European countries, Mrs. Alma Jones, family life specialist at Iowa State College, points out. Many of them will help the family understand the true meaning of Christmas.

According to legend, the first Christmas day celebration, as we regard it today, was held in Great Britain in 521 A. D. on the proclamation of King Arthur. The festival was called "Christer Messe" which means "Christ's Mass."

In Other Lands

In Hungary, the family gathers around the tree for prayer just before the gifts are distributed. And then as the first star appears, the evening meal is served. On the tree are hung gilded or silvered nuts, Christmas biscuits and colorful oranges wrapped in gaily colored tissue.

Along with roast goose and red cabbage in Denmark, and ham in the Scandinavian countries, those families eat rice cooked in milk. One almond is stirred into the rice and the one who finds it is given a reward.

Scandinavians also place grain outside the window or in the snow-covered yard so that the birds too have a Christmas feast.

In Poland the celebrations begin on December 6. During the Christmas eve meal, cakes or wafers in the shape of animals are served. Each member of the family shares his cake with others and wishes them happiness and prosperity during the year. Small boys in costumes go from house to house singing Christmas carols. They often carry a Christmas crib with them or give a marionette show on the Christ's birth.

Yule-Log

Italians burn a Yule-log on Christmas eve. Before the log is lighted, all the children gather around the fireplace blindfolded. Each child recites a verse of poetry, and when the blindfold is removed, he discovers that the fire is lighted and that the Christ child has brought a bundle of gifts.

Mrs. Jones says that sometimes all the hustle of Christmas preparations gets the family down. It's better to have less elaborate preparations and give more of yourself to your children, she belives.

There are many ways you and the children can join together for holiday fun. (Perhaps these ideas are already a part of your Christmas traditions and customs in the family.) You and the children may wish to make gifts for needy children, write messages to both old and young friends, sing carols, read the traditional Christmas stories around the lighted tree—perhaps acting the stories out--and play Christmas games after the hearty Christmas day meal.

JUNIOR HI NEWS

In eighth grade arithmetic we are working very hard on compound interest. The seventh grade are working on budget problems.

Last Thursday the Junior Hi girls and a few high school girls had a basket ball game with Goodell. Klemme defeated Goodell with a score of 54-27.

The scoring for Klemme was done by the following: Priebe with 20, Montgomery with 14; Jacobs with 11, Bridges with 8, and Janssen with 1, which totals 54.

The scoring done by Goodell was made by Phyllis Christens with 27 points.

Our motto for the week is: "We do not measure our cause by our success, we measure our success by our cause."

We want to thank Roy Schaefer, Mrs. Ed. Christens, and Bill Janssen for driving for the girls basketball game last Thursday afternoon.

Thursday afternoon at 3:30 the boys are going to play Garner in the Klemme gym.

"KEEP" CONFIDENCES, IS ADVICE TO PARENTS

Wise parents who are real friends with their youngsters never "give away" confidences.

Mrs. Alma Jones, child development specialist, Iowa State College, says grown-ups must be careful about telling tales if they want their youngsters to confide in them.

She points out that understanding, confidence and trust are the basis of the happy home atmosphere children need, and ore important in making parental guidance a lasting influence.

It's often easy to give away children's confidences without thinking, says Mrs. Jones. But few youngsters like having their mothers discuss their problems with their friends. Just being parents doesn't give grown-ups the right to tell others the things their children confide.

Think a bit before telling humorous ancedotes, Mrs. Jones goes on. Any happening which has embarrassed a youngster shouldn't be related to others in his presence, even though it may make a funny story.

Russian People Are Also Able to Say "Merry Christmas"

"S Rojdestvom Xristovym."

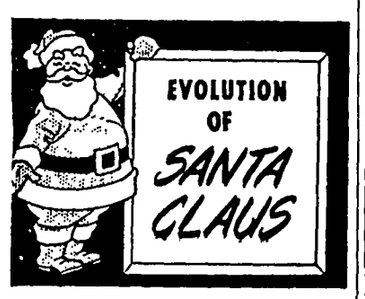
That's what a Russian would say to you if you were in Russia on Christmas day and he wished to extend the season's greetings.

The phrase is the Russian's way of saying: "Merry Christmas."

In the past, the Russian's Christmas was closely associated with his church; but how the day is observed now that the religious life has been subjugated in the Soviet, one would have to be behind the "iron curtain" to know.

But it was not always like that. In other days, the Russian Christmas was much like the Ukrainian. There was a Santa Claus known as "Dedushka Moroz" and there were traditional gifts of red boots for children and golden slippers for young girls.

In certain parts of the country the "baboushka" (grandmother) was the legendary dispenser of gifts. According to one story, she repented of unkindness and ever since has tried to make amends by distributing gifts to children at Christmas.



Christmas has rolled around once again and Santa Claus with round red cheeks, jolly smile and chunky figure looks the same as he did nearly 90 years ago.

His creator was Thomas Nast, one of America's greatest cartoonists. During the early 1860's he was asked to illustrate Clement Clark Moore's poem, A Visit to St. Nicholas, better known to us as "'Twas The Night Before Christmas." The result was Santa Claus as we know him.

Santa's creator was born in Bavaria in 1840, son of a musician in a Bavarian army band. When he was a fat little boy of six, Thomas' father left Germany to enlist in the United States navy, and Thomas' mother brought the boy to New York to live.

Along about the time stocky Tommy was 15 he landed his first job as an illustrator for Leslie's Weekly at $4 a week. By the time he was 20 he was sent to England by the New York Illustrated News to sketch the Heenan-Sayers fight, an outstanding sports event of the day.

In 1862 he joined the staff of Harper's Weekly and began the series of emblematic drawings which continued throughout the Civil War. From those he created certain trademarks that have been the inspiration of cartoonists down to the present—notably the Republican elephant and the Democrat donkey.

Famous as the political symbols are today, Nast's Santa Claus probably holds first place in the hearts of Americans. Before Nast's day, a few artists had drawn Santa on one occasion or another, but could not seem to agree on how the old gentleman should look.

Nast changed all that.

He located Santa's home at the North Pole and gave him a sleigh drawn by reindeer. He drew the familiar, fat, merry old fellow with red cheeks and white beard, dressed in red, wearing a cap and boots, carrying a pack of toys and smoking a short pipe.

The artist then gave Santa a spy-glass so that during the year he might pick out the good children from the bad, and also a big book in which to write their names and keep their records.

This conception of Santa Claus first appeared in 1863. Since that time, the pictured Santa has been the same, although the spy-glass and pipe seem to have been dropped by the way.

'Today's Home Builds Tomorrow's World'

Three and one-half million rural women who are taking part in home demonstration work of the cooperative extension service will participate in Home Demonstration Week, May 2 to 8. These homemakers will survey the work of the past year, study the special needs of their own communities, of the nation and the world, and will try to assess the resources open to them in bettering today's home for a better world of tomorrow.

Special meetings, tours to improved homes, exhibits, newspaper articles and radio talks will be used locally to bring before the local community the work which has been done and needs for future effort.

The program will be carried into rural homes and communities by more than 3,000 full-time home demonstration agents, joint employees of the local county government, the land-grant colleges and the U. S. department of agriculture.

Urges Air Force Aid Cargo Plane Development

NEW YORK. — Maj. Gen. Hugh J. Knerr, inspector general of the U. S. air force, has proposed a procurement plan designed to give America "an adequate nucleus of airpower with relatively small peacetime appropriations."

Writing in the Pegasus, an aviation magazine, he suggested that the air force take the initiative in such a program by offering to share with the ultimate civilian users the cost of developing and producing new types of cargo airplanes that could be easily and quickly converted to military use when needed.

"These aircraft would be primarily for civilian cargo use," he said. "Their military application would be a secondary consideration at all times except in event of war. This plan would reduce the necessity for commandeering passenger planes from commercial airlines in wartime. Instead, the military could count on a large backlog of aircraft of correct types to meet its logistic requirements without interfering with the vital job of transporting civilian passengers.

"The opportunity to build this backlog lies in the broad field of general commercial air cargo operations. It is an opportunity long overlooked in our search for a procurement program that would give us an adequate nucleus of airpower with relatively small peacetime appropriations."

Commercial operators, the air force and the ground forces should work closely together to determine the final form of these cargo aircraft and to make them interchangeable among all three, the general said.

Use of turquoise dates back to the earliest history of many of the Pueblo Indian tribes, including the Navajo, Zuni and Hopi, and goes far deeper than mere ornamentation. It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

Fascination of 'Older Women'

By Lawrence Gould

May an older woman fascinate a young man?

Answer: Certainly. And while the real source of the fascination is the man's unconscious craving to be "mothered," there are times when satisfying this need may free him for great achievements in other directions. The famous Lord Beaconsfield (born Benjamin Disraeli) was extremely happy though married to a woman years his senior, and there have been other cases like this. But more often, I'm afraid, the man whose need of love is childish is too infantile in other respects to be either a success in life or a satisfactory husband.

Is social position based on income?

Answer: No, writes Dr. Richard Centers in his book, "The Psychology of Social Classes." There are undeniably social classes in this country. But membership in a given class is not based upon birth or economic status, but on a subjective feeling of "belonging," and this in turn is most frequently determined by the way in which you make your living. A rich doctor and a poor one have much more in common than either would have with a musician.

Can you tell when you should look for a new job?

Answer: In principle, yes, though of course there are times when it's impracticable to take chances. If you've reached the point where you feel that your present job leaves you with nothing more to learn and "nowhere to go," you had better begin looking for a new one, even though it means a temporary setback. For the rule of life is that whenever you stop growing you begin disintegrating, mentally and physically. The only exception is the man to whom his job is just a way to make a living and whose real interests lie elsewhere.

Emotional Upsets Cause of Asthma

By Dr. James W. Barton

IT WAS LEARNED during World Wars I and II that emotional disturbances cause many actual organic diseases, especially ulcer of the stomach and first part of the small intestine (peptic ulcer).

It was also found that serious behavior problems and mental derangements occurred during and following these wars. However, that emotional disturbances could cause attacks of asthma, not in a few but in many cases, was unknown until more recently.

When it was discovered a few years ago that cold air, hot air, dust, fresh fruit, fumes, pollen of plants could bring on an attack of asthma, it was believed that all cases of asthma were caused by allergy or by defects in nose and throat.

It may come as a surprise to many to learn that emotional disturbances can bring on an attack of asthma and bring the attack more often if allergy to pollen, dust, and other substance is also present in the patient's make-up.

In "The Canadian Medical Association Journal," Dr. P. W. Hardie, Hamilton, Ontario, states that it is generally recognized that asthmatic patients are strung-up, tense, irritable, overambitious and overanxious, but too often this factor as a cause of asthma is overlooked by the physician.

By careful analysis of his asthmatic patients during the past two years, Dr. Hardie discovered that in the great majority of cases of asthma, the emotional and allergic conditions are both present, with the emotional factor the more important in some cases and the allergy in others.

Thus, in some cases the emotional disturbance is 90 per cent the cause and allergy 10 per cent, and in other cases emotion is 10 per cent of the cause and allergy 90 per cent.

The suggestion is that while treatment for allergy and any defects of nose and throat should be given, it should be pointed out to the patient that nervousness and disturbing emotions, by keeping him tensed, actually pave the way for asthma attacks, especially if allergy and defects of nose and throat are present.

Once the asthmatic fully realizes that his nervousness and anxiety are such important factors in causing asthmatic attacks, he may thereby acquire calmness of spirit and many, if not all, attacks may be prevented.

Myriad of Customs Add to Season's Joy

Christmas in the United States is composed of threads from many countries and reflects their customs in church and home.

The traditional English Christmas calls for family reunions, gifts, carols, parties and a pantomime for the children in a season of general good will.

Although many of the old picturesque English customs have faded, they still contribute to the modern holiday through Christmas pageants, the designs on Christmas cards and the narratives in ballads and carols describing the festivities of the old days.

In Scandinavian countries, preparations and cooking are begun weeks in advance in order to stock the home for the three weeks of hospitality and leisure during the holiday season. The celebration itself begins on Christmas Eve with an elaborate supper, followed by a tree with family worship about it and singing before the gifts are distributed.

Early church is attended by everyone on Christmas morning, because the Shepherds, first to worship the baby Jesus, came early and then returned to their work.

Traditionally, Germany kept Christmas with much heartiness, including a home festival and attendance at church.

Children in the Netherlands leave their wooden shoes, filled with hay for St. Nicholas' white horse. In the Netherlands and Belgium December 6 is the children's holiday, with December 25 reserved for the religious holiday.

Religious features are prominent during the holiday in France, especially midnight mass followed by Christmas supper with family dinners and reunions on Christmas Day.

Christmas in Brazil, south of the equator, is a summer festival with fireworks, picnics, fiestas and boating excursions. In spite of the summer weather, Papa Noel comes dressed as Santa Claus with his reindeer and sleigh.

Santa Claus, Ind., Is Christmas H. Q.

Santa Claus, Indiana, is a hamlet of a score of frame buildings and not so many people, but it is national headquarters for one type of holiday observance.

Each Christmas season brings to it stacks of mail, parcels, letters and cards of which 99 per cent is promptly remailed with the magic postmark "Santa Claus."

Beyond a doubt, the biggest man in the Hoosier hamlet is Santa Claus himself. A 25-foot statue of him, complete with whiskers and bulging sack, is dedicated to the charitable old saint in recognition that his Christmas gifts to the town have brought it fame and seasonal prosperity.

Early settlers seven or eight decades ago took a fancy to the name Santa Fe for the town, but they couldn't use it because another town in the state had it first. So they boldly christened their settlement with Claus as a last name, instead of Fe.

Similar holiday names dot the world map, with Christmas being the favorite in the United States. Florida, Maine, Kentucky and Arizona have towns named Christmas.

Fast and Feast

The day before Christmas is a strict fast for the Polish people

PLEASE, SANTA? . . . S. Claus appears lost in thought as he ponders gravely the possibly difficult request of the little girl who looks as though she realizes she has put the bee on Santa and isn't quite sure whether he'll come through.

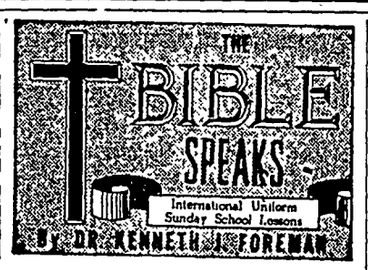
Norway 'Nisse' Similar To American Santa Claus

In Norway, the yule "nisse"—their version of Santa Claus—is dressed in grey homespun with red cap, red mittens and stockings, and wooden shoes. He has a long, white beard and is as old, almost, as time; much older than Christianity.

The nisse was from pagan times connected with the house and home. Originally he was believed to own the forests and fields.



SCRIPTURE: Isaiah 2:2-4; 9:1-7; 11: 1-9; Jeremiah 33:14-18; Luke 2.
DEVOTIONAL READING: John 1:1-14.

'Mine Eyes Have Seen'

Lesson for December 25, 1949

WHAT can the old man see in the baby? There must have been some to ask that question, as the old, old man Simeon took the little six-weeks-old Jesus in his arms. To most eyes he was just another baby; but at the touch of him, Simeon broke out into words so filled with hope and ecstasy, so rhythmic with emotion, that his words, even to this day, are used as a hymn in all the Christian churches of the world. "Mine eyes have seen . . ."

Dr. Foreman

The aged man, already moving across the thin line dividing this world from heaven, could see with the eye of the spirit what was hid from the eye of many a practical man. To Simeon's mind, imbued with the spirit of the ancient prophets, the child in his arms was a center of light.

All the rays from the dim and ancient prophecies came to a focus in this child; and from this child again there shone out to all the future years of man the hope of a better world. What the prophets have foretold, is now to be; this child is the hope of mankind.

They have seen a great light

THE CHRISTMAS PROPHECIES, our Old Testament lesson text, sing the hope of the Hebrew people. It was a hope that spread beyond themselves, their tiny hill-country, landlocked and harborless, out to the "Circle of the Nations," on to the world of vast peoples beyond their ken.

In a leaderless world, where men went blindly through life, smothered by the smoke of torches in the wavering hands of the blind, the prophets sang of the Coming One, the Messiah, God's chosen Leader, who would bring men out of darkness into light, the Divine Counsellor.

In the centuries when the servants of God were enslaved by those who worshiped only the sword, the prophets pointed confidently to the time when the leadership of the world would at least be in the hands of those who knew and understood and obeyed God.

Eyes of Flesh

NOW THE PROPHETS did not always fully understand their own prophecies, as we are told by Peter (I Pet. 1:10, 11); and certainly most of the Jews did not. When they heard the word "Messiah" or "King" they could think only of the kings they had known and admired, some now David, great in battle, or another Solomon, in a greater and more golden palace.

So when the little boy Jesus born in the dark stable under the hill, it was not everyone who could see what Simeon saw, that now the hopes of the prophets were coming true, now the Kingdom of righteousness and peace, the Realm of All Nations, was to begin.

What Simeon's fading human eye could see was no great thing—a helpless infant from a peasant carpenter's home. It was only Simeon's inward eye that saw the truth.

Eyes of Faith

YET THE EYE of faith can see more. The salvation God is bringing to the world has only just begun. As in Simeon's day the salvation and the light were barely at the horizon, so now it is still but sunrise. The colors of sunrise may be mistaken for those of sunset, by those who have been long asleep. It is only those who have watched through the night who know the sunrise for what it is.

The songs of Christmastide are songs of hope, and not only songs of remembrance. It is not the hope of fools, for the world of today is brighter than the world into which Christ was born, and the brightness shines from him.

Who would turn back this world, for all its wretchedness and frustrations, into what it would have been had Jesus never been born? At Christmas time we rejoice, not that all things have been accomplished or that all the prophecies of good have come true; we rejoice rather that the God-sent Leader, the Messiah, the Saviour, has come, and that with his coming salvation and light and glory have begun.

In Reverse

A hunter claimed that his dog had the most sensitive nose of any animal in the world. He liked to tell of the time that he flushed a pheasant. The bird dashed for some underbrush and the dog was ordered to go in and flush it again.

The animal, unfortunately, picked up the bird's back scent and followed it swiftly for miles and miles. Finally he reached a tree. He looked up into the branches and barked loudly. When the hunter caught up with the dog he followed the dog's gaze and saw the nest from which the pheasant had been hatched two years before.

He never did explain how the pheasant's egg got into that nest.

DRIVE CAREFULLY OVER THE CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS

The state safety department today told Iowa drivers that the traffic death toll this Christmas will be just as good or just as bad as they make it. And if it is bad, it may well be terrible.

If that sounds like unnecessarily grim double talk in a happy season, take a look at these contrasting records from department files:

Two years ago, 12 persons killed in Iowa traffic accidents during the holiday period, 5 on the day before Christmas, 2 on Christmas day and 5 more on the day following. Last year, not a single traffic death on Christmas day or the day after though 4 were killed on December 24th.

"With the exception of Christmas Eve, the record last year is a credit to every Iowa driver and proves how good his performance can be even in the most dangerous traffic conditions," State Safety Commissioner Alfred Kahl said.

That the coming holiday week end will develop the years most dangerous general traffic situation, department members have little doubt. They point to the possibility of bad weather, the certainty of heavy traffic and the spirit of the season which brings with it a "moral holiday."

"To some persons, Christmas will simply mean that the usual rules of conduct are suspended," Kahl said. "Many otherwise stable drivers will feel free to drive after having a few drinks. For these drivers the chance of having a fatal accident will be 55 times greater than normal."

Kahl reminded drivers that the record indicates the nights just before and just after Christmas are the most dangerous. Anyone planning a trip that will take him on the highways during those times should protect himself by reducing his speed, he said.

Chief S. N. Jespersen of the Iowa highway patrol said all members of the force will be on duty throughout the coming holiday weekend.

All Christmas Programs Were Well Attended

LARGE CROWDS AT ALL THE CHRISTMAS PROGRAMS SATURDAY EVE

There was a capacity crowd at each of the Sunday School Christmas programs at both Klemme Churches, the Liberty Methodist Church, Ell Peace Church and the Goodell Evangelical U. B. Church.

The weather was cold, but ideal and the roads were all good so that the people could come to the annual programs and enjoy seeing and hearing the children.

Program Saturday Evening

The Klemme Evangelical and Reformed Church will present their annual program by the Young Peoples Bible Class on Saturday evening, Dec. 31, beginning at 7:30 o'clock. This year they will present a pageant, "The Gift Divine."

NEW BUSINESS TO OPEN IN THE WELLEMEYER BUILDING

Art Wellemeyer has leased for a year, as of January 1st, space in his building on West Main street to Verner Christie and Elmer Langlitz, who will put in an automobile repair shop in the south part of the building. They will also use the small warehouse at the south end of the building.

Mr. Wellemeyer stated that he will have a crew at work putting in new electric wiring system and getting the shop in readiness for the new firm, who expect to be in business soon after the first of the year.

Methodist Ministers, Wives And Families Met At Crystal Lake

Rev. and Mrs. Hjelmaas of Crystal Lake entertained the following Methodist ministers their wives and families at their home Sunday afternoon: Rev. Egeland and wife of Klemme; Rev. and Mrs. Pettersen of Forest City; Rev. and Mrs. Egeland of Rowan; Rev. and Mrs. Ulland of Lakota; Rev. and Mrs. Hammers of Swea City and Mrs. Falcks of Lake Mills.

After looking over all those names we presume "Lutefisk" was on the menu!

BUNTENBACH HOME SETTING OF QUIET WEDDING MONDAY NOON

A simple home wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. C. Buntenbach in Klemme Monday, December 26 at high noon when Lorraine L., their youngest daughter became the bride of Earl S. Rygh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Selmer Rygh of Lake Mills.

Rev. J. Dallas Gibson, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Garner, officiated at the ceremony, which was witnessed by the immediate members of the families. Mrs. Verle Keraus of Garner, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and Paul Nygh, brother of the groom was best man.

The bride wore a navy blue dress with corsage and Mrs. Keraus wore a brown dress with corsage.

Immediately after the ceremony a three-course dinner was served by Mrs. Buntenbach.

Out-of-town guests were the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Selmer Rygh of Lake Mills; his sisters, Miss Barbara Rygh and Mrs. Margaret Olson, both of Des Moines; his brother, Paul of Lake Mills; Verle Keraus and family and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Buntenbach and Rev. and Mrs. Gibson and two sons of Garner.

The couple left on a honeymoon trip to the south and southwestern states.

FAMILY GATHERING AT THE GEO. ALBERS HOME MONDAY

The following brought well-filled baskets to the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Albers on Monday for their annual Christmas dinner: Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Reuben, Mr and Mrs. Bill Mewes and Gary Lee; Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Tafty of Kanawha; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Albers, Jr. Connie and Alan of Clear Lake; Mr. and Mrs. Ted Albers, Eunice and Ronald of Swaledale; Mr. and Mrs. Lubbe Albers and Phyllis of Ventura; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lauster and Ruth Ann of Meservey; Mr. and Mrs. John Albers, and Carol Lynn and Gene; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pringnitz; Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Buss; Mr. and Mrs. Menno Albers of Klemme and Miss Helen Albers of Ventura. The above are children and families of Mr. and Mrs. Albers.

DR. H. DABNEY KERR, professor of radiology at the State University of Iowa college of medicine and chairman of the research committee of the Iowa division of the American Cancer Society, is shown looking at a check for $24,000 sent him by the Iowa division to continue and expand the cancer research work at the State University. This check added to previous grants makes a total of $104,000 given the University by the Iowa division of the ACS. Dr. H. S. Elkins (standing), assistant professor of radiology and chairman of the cancer committee of the SUI college, and Dr. W. M. Fowler, professor of medicine, and member of the executive committee of the SUI college of medicine, also seem greatly pleased with the check.

KLEMME WON DOUBLE-HEADER FROM BRITT HERE

It was another big night for Klemme last Friday when the local basket ball boys took Britt for a double header.

The Little Shamrocks came through with a 35-21 victory with Baack hitting for 19 points.

In the feature game the Shamrocks and the Britt Eagles played a close game all the way through the third quarter. Klemme managed to stay in front at the end of each quarter: 9-7, 18-17 and 29-24 and then put on the pressure in the last quarter to end the game 42-31.

Brinkman paced the Shamrock attack with 20 points with Josten next up with 14. Miller was the hot-shot for Britt and came through with 11 points.

Junior High Wins Two

The Junior high teams played Garner Junior Highs here on Thursday afternoon in two very close games. The second team squeezed out 13-12 win over Garner, which was repeated by the first team who also managed a one point margin to win 18-17. Both Garner and Klemme juniors played a nice game of ball and it looks good for the future of both schools.

Whitney Not To Blame For Story

COUNTY SUPT. NOT TO BLAME FOR THE LEADER ARTICLE

Just as The Times was ready to go to press, Charles Whitney, County Supt. of Schools, telephoned The Times regarding the article "Survey Reveals Trading Habits Of Residents Of Hancock County Towns" which appeared in the Garner Leader last week.

Mr. Whitney stated that the article was NOT written by him, that it was published without his knowledge or O.K., that it was not censored by him and that he is not responsible in any way for the appearance of the article.

The entire report as prepared by the county superintendent was for the information of the school boards of the county and was regarded as confidential. Each of the newspapers of the county was mailed a "courtesy copy" Mr. Whitney stated, and there was no authorization enclosed for publication of any part of the report.

GOVERNMENT PURCHASES KEEPING DAIRY PRICES UP

Government purchases of butter and cheese are keeping Hancock County milk and dairy prices at their current levels, says county extension director Paul Henderson.

The nation's dairymen are producing more milk and consumers are drinking about the same amount they did last year. according to a report Henderson received from Francis Kuptish, farm economist at Iowa State College.

The extra milk output is going into butter, cheese and dried skimmilk. The amount of milk needed to make the butter and cheese the government bought in 1949 equals the country's rise in milk production for the year.

Henderson says the government continued to buy dairy products in November, despite the seasonal low in production. Supplies have been generally higher trade than needs at prices supported by the government.

The amount of butter in storage is now about twice as great as it was a year ago, while cheese storage stocks are about the same as last year's, the county extension director points out.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

New Year's Eve is a night of illusion for some of us. With whistles and bells we break the night into separate parts and say: "On that side of 12 o'clock is the old year where I was a man of old, worn habits. But on this side of midnight is the new year and I am a new, better man because of it. Everything will be different."

That whimsical lapse from reality doesn't last long. We know that no certain clock hour can change of itself the nature of the usual events of our time.

At 6:10 p. m. last new year's eve, a driver traveling through Iowa applied his brakes too sharply on a curve and lost control of his car. Two persons died.

At exactly 9:03 that evening a 12-year-old boy, coasting on his sled on a downhill street, was struck and killed by an automobile. The youngster was the last Iowa traffic fatality of 1948.

Two hours and fifty-seven minutes later the factory whistles of that city testified that - according to the illusion - all the error and loss of the old year were ended and a year of new propect was entering.

The spell lasted for eight and one-half hours. Then, at exactly 8:39 that morning, a man drove onto a railroad crossing and into the path of a fast train. He was the first Iowa traffic fatality of 1949.

At 6:55 that evening, a car skidded on ice and the state counted the second traffic death of the year. Midnight new year's eve had made little difference in the "usual event" of violent death on the highways.

In just twelve hours and forty-five minutes, five persons met death in four fatal accidents. Surely, each one of them had different plans than that for the new year.

SOYBEAN SEED IS GOOD, PLENTIFUL

Yield And Quality Were Good, Combining Damage Was Less Than In '48

Plenty of high quality soybean seed is on hand for planting next spring, according to C. R. Weber, Iowa Experiment Station agronomist at Iowa State College.

In contrast to the year before, hardly any seed of the 1949 crop was damaged. Webner credits better combining conditions and the fact that moisture content of the beans was about right to combine easily and yet not be injured. Harvesting was completed a week to 10 days earlier this year and well ahead of frost so that bean seed in general will germinate well next spring if stored properly this winter.

Yields over the state were better than early anticipations in spite of general drouth conditions. Average yield for the 1.3 to 1.4 million acres grown in the Hawkeye state was about 22 to 23 bushels per acre, Weber estimates. In 1948, the average yield was 23 bushels per acre, and the 1938-47 average yield was 19.5 bushels per acre.

New Varieties Help

Contributing factors to both the high yield and easy combining, according to weber, were absence of weeds and wide acceptance by farmers of the newer high yielding varieties. The soybean crop was relatively weed-free last year. Weber says that this was due primarily to the excellent weather conditions during the early part of the season which made it possible for farmers to get into fields to prepare good seedbeds and take out weeds with spike tooth harrows or weeders.

Lincoln and Hawkeye beans made up the bulk of the acreage. About 75 percent of the Iowa bean acreage was in Lincoln, about 15 percent in Hawkeye and 5 percent planted to other varieties. Weber looks for a considerable increase in Hawkeye acreage next year. Hawkeye is recommended to replace all of the acreage planted to Richland and to supplant some of the Lincoln acreage. Weber says that it will replace Lincoln in the northern section of the state, especially if prospects are for a late year. Hawkeye was first released to farmers for seed increase purposes in 1948.

Beat Corn In '48

Farmers who grew beans say in general that yield of beans this year was relatively higher than yield of corn. Corn was hit by borers, the big October wind storm, and drouth, and the average yield according to the November Crop and Livestock Report was 49 bushels. Farmers figure the yield ratio between the two crops favored soybeans and some expect to grow a few more soybeans next year.

Weber says there will be quite a shift to soybeans if corn acreage is cut much. He cautions farmers, however, not to shift all acres taken out of corn to another intertilled crop but to set up their sod crop acreage for good soil management.

GROWING USE OF BEES TO POLLINATE LEGUMES

During the past year a greater appreciation has been shown for the use of honeybees as legume pollinators.

Contrasting the situation with that of a few years back, Floyd Paddock, extension apiarist at Iowa State College, says many farmers are now asking beekeepers to put bees in their clover fields to increase seed production. A short time ago, beekeepers had to do some hard selling to get farmers to agree to using bees for pollination.

Paddock belives the time is not far off when the role of the honeybee as a pollinator will overshadow its value as a honey producer. In the meantime, however, adjustment in thinking is needed by both the beekeeper and the farmer.

Most beekeepers have not previously had demand for bees as pollinators, and are not prepared to give the best service. Now there is a tendency to use few colonies and weak colonies. Also, not enough attention is paid to getting the bees in legume fields at the most effective time.

Seed producers, on the other hand, need some appreciation of the beekeeper's problems. They should try to understand that the beekeeper is set up primarily for honey production. This makes it impossible to move hives on very short notice. Farmers would do well to make arrangements with beekeepers far enough in advance so the latter can manage their apiaries accordingly.

High-Priced Farm Products to Stay, Declares Senator

Senator Thomas of Oklahoma, senior Democrat on the senate agriculture committee, believes the American people should be told "we are going to have high prices indefinitely" for farm products.

The Oklahoman made the statement as Secretary of Agriculture Anderson presented to the house agriculture committee the administration's plan for a long-range farm policy of "organized, sustained and realistic abundance.

"The country should be advised we are not going back to low prices," Thomas said. "We are not going back to $1 wheat, 10 cent cotton and 4 cent hogs.

"The people should be told we can't have a big budget and high taxes without high prices."

Anderson said emphasis should be placed on distribution and consumption of food rather than on curtailment of production as a means of combating possible future surpluses.

IF YOU'RE HAVING open house New Year's eve or on the day itself, use a molded chicken salad as the main dish.

Jellied Chicken Salad
(Serves 8-10)

2 tablespoons unflavored gelatin
½ cup cold water
2 cups hot broth or water
2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons sugar
⅛ cup lemon juice
½ cup finely chopped celery
½ cup diced pimiento

1 cup mayonnaise, if desired

1 cup milk, scalded
¼ cup shortening
¼ cup sugar
1½ teaspoons salt
2 cakes compressed yeast or 2 packages dry yeast
2 eggs, well beaten
4 cups sifted all-purpose flour
¾ cup seedless raisins
¼ cup candied cherries
1 teaspoon candied orange peel
¼ cup sliced citron
1½ cups chopped walnuts
1 tablespoon cardamon seed

Let rest 15 minutes. Divide dough into two equal parts. Shape each into a round loaf. Place on a greased cookie sheet and let rise until double. Bake in a moderate (350°) oven for one hour. Brush with hot corn syrup. Sprinkle with granulated sugar or brush with confectioners' sugar icing.

Try These Tricks
When you Entertain

When serving a hot appetizer before clear tomato soup, place in cups and let guests drink it in the living room. With this serve broiled mushrooms which have been stuffed with scrambled eggs.

Don't fuss with sweet potatoes. Slice peeled, cooked potatoes in a casserole and dust with grated orange rind, a dusting of nutmeg and a few spoonfuls of corn syrup. Bake until hot.

Guests appreciate the old-fashioned idea of serving hominy as an accompaniment to roast chicken or turkey. Top the fried hominy with currant jelly.

It will be a successful party if you serve apple slices fried in butter and sprinkled while frying with maple sugar. Serve these with pork, bacon, sausages or ham.

Place some powdered sugar in a jar and add a vanilla bean. When you wanted the sugar, dust it on cookies or unfrosted cakes for delicate flavor.

Air Gun Has Long History

MILWAUKEE, WIS. — "Assassins, not soldiers! Hang them immediately if they are captured!"

That directive may have a strangely familiar ring. It could have been for the benefit of those who wanted to use gas or biological warfare. Actually, however, the statement was made by Napoleon during a war with Austria. The weapon, which brought on the charges, and to which he paid tribute, was the pneumatic rifle, a distant relative of the BB-gun.

Pneumatic weapons are a specialty for Eldon G Wolff, an assistant curator of the public museum here and in charge of its history department. He is the museum's expert on all types of weapons.

The subject of the pneumatic rifle long has been neglected, Wolff says, but he and an assistant have collected enough material on the subject to fill several books.

Book Being Prepared

"We had so much," Wolff said, "that we figured we'd never get around to writing the book. So we decided to limit ourselves to an introduction to the subject." The book is now in preparation.

The pneumatic weapon has a long history. One of the earliest mentions of it is found in the Nuremberg (Germany) magistrate's records of inventions for 1430. Another record appears in 1566 with the significant notation that its manufacture had been prohibited. According to the record the weapon was considered murderous. The victim could not tell where the bullet was coming from.

In 1747 the Landgrave (count) of Hesse, Louis VIII, killed a 480 pound stag with a pneumatic rifle. He said that he preferred it to the regular firearm.

Two Main Types

There are two main types of pneumatic guns, according to Wolff. In one, the potential pressure gun, no pressure is created until the gun is ready to be discharged. In the other type the pressure is created and stored in a reservoir.

The main reason that the weapon never has been widely used, according to Wolff, is the great difficulty in grinding a seat for the valve head that will hold the head perfectly under great pressure but still will permit a desired quantity of air to be released instantly.

The principle of the valve is the same as that of the valves used in automobile and bicycle tires, Wolff explained.

One of the first uses of the gun in this country, Wolff said, is recorded in the annals of the famous expedition of Meriwether Lewis and William Clark from 1804 to 1806.

Maker of Boxing Gloves Offers Safer Article

NEW YORK. — Benny Golomb who has been making the boxing gloves used in Madison Square Garden fights for the past 25 years, had something new to offer.

For years he had been experimenting with a glove that might help cut down ring fatalities, lessen the number of permanent head injuries, and decrease the number of punch-drunk fighters

Benny has no illusions about fighters, fight managers or fight promoters. He's known thousands of them, and he knows all the tricks of the trade.

His gloves have been, and still are, the finest of their kind. But Benny is well aware that tricky fight managers know how to break down the gloves, exposing the knuckles to inflict greater damage.

Now he thinks he has a new type of glove which managers or other handlers can't tamper with and which will lessen the shock of punches while still making it possible to score knockouts.

The new glove has three layers of stuffing. The top and bottom layers are of finest wool sprayed with rubber. The middle panel consists of horse hair.

"I figure we will see fewer cuts with the new glove," Benny said.

Radio Gag Proves Man Keeps Silent Longer Than Woman

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF. — Tests have proved what men have long contended—a man can keep quiet longer than a woman.

As a gag for a radio show, a 48-year old housewife and a Los Angeles man were put in a store window to see who could keep quiet and do nothing the longest.

They couldn't talk, except to their guards, read or turn on a radio. They slept in their chairs. Their meals were brought in to them. Only an occasional walk around the store window or a trip to the rest room was permitted.

It was one of the latter that ended the spell—after five days, three hours and 23 minutes. A guard reported he detected the woman exchanging words with a stranger on the store's mezzanine. That ended the contest.

Observers described the man who just sat as "stoic."

His first words were: "You mean I won?" He did, and his prize was $3,000.

Pants-Kicker

One for the Neighbors

NEW BERN, N. C.—If there is anyone sharing a kigmie complex with All Capp's little creatures, he has only to contact Tom Haywood of this community.

Disgruntled folks who feel they need a swift kick in the pants have been using Tom's device for quite some time now.

The contraption is a wheel affair with four spokes and each spoke is fitted with a good, heavy shoe. The operator places himself in position, spins the crank and gives himself a healthy boot—right where he meant to.

Haywood built the machine for himself in 1937, but his neighbors found so much use for it that he moved it to the highway for the use of the general public.

Self-kickers wore out three pairs of shoes before Haywood got tired of the idea. Then a stranger, who felt that he really needed a good punt, put on a fourth pair of shoes.

Then, Haywood bowed to public demand, put on a new set of brogans and went back into public service.

Perennial 'Flapper' Launched on Career Of Wall Street Deals

NEW YORK. — Edna Wallace Hopper, who won fame in Floradora, won fame in a new endeavor. She made a lot of mony by being a broker in Wall street.

She said there is "a little ham in almost everybody in Wall street—all that temperament, nerves and excitement. Sometimes I didn't miss the theater a bit."

That was the fourth career for Edna Wallace Hopper. As an actress she was the toast of the Gay Nineties. Later she ran a cosmetics business. Then she trurned to lecturing, touring the country and appearing on radio. Ten years ago she turned to the stock market and traded (for herself) with a brokerage firm here.

She never would admit her age, but everyone regards her as pretty good for a gal in the eighties, or thereabouts. She once startled scientists and newspaper readers by declaring that she would never grow old. To back up her claim, she had three face-lifting operations.

The subject of her age always drew a smile. She always contended, "I have no age. They've had me all ages, even dead and buried. Nobody has been right. I wouldn't tell for the world. Just so they keep discussing it, I'm anything they say."

Always dressed "up to the minute," her age was a confusing thing to determine. Her figure was a slim, trim 87 pounds and her step sprightly. Laughter came freely and her talk rivaled a teen-ager's.

Miss Hopper turned to Wall street after she quit the cosmetic business. "I've always had a flair for finance," she said, although admitting that she learned a great deal from her second husband A. O. Brown, a broker. She was also married to the late DeWolf Hopper.

Big Town Shows Former GI It Has Heart, After All

NEW YORK.—The city he said he fell in love with when he stopped over here on his way overseas in 1943 showed Jack Davis that it had a heart.

Arrested as a vagrant for sleeping in the hallway of an apartment house, he told this story in police court:

The 25-year-old veteran said that after the war he returned to his family home in Kirkland, Wash., with the determination to come to New York to live. He saved $185 and began hitch-hiking to the big city.

In Minneapolis a thief stole all the money he had. Working at odd jobs in the roofing trade he made enough to enable him to continue his journey and finally reached New York. In the two days prior to his arrest, he said, he had eaten only a single hot-dog. He was down to two cents.

Magistrate David McKean, dismissing the vagrancy charge, pressed $2 into Davis hand. A detective handed him some money. Courtroom spectators took up a collection, mostly in $1 bills and when the youth left he had a total of $16.

He said he wanted to remain here and get married after he had found a job.

Scoffers Stand Awed as Man Puts Away $3 Banana Split

KENOSHA, WIS.—It was unbelievable, but it was happening before their very eyes. Scoffers stared in awed disbelief at Sam Puntillo's capacity as he downed a $3 banana split.

Puntillo, a 160-pounder, bet three friends the price of the banana split that he could eat it. Into a dish went 22 scoops of ice cream, six bananas, five scoops of pineapple, a pint of strawberries, half a pint of whipped cream, a quarter-pound of nuts and 12 cherries.

By the time Puntillo had finished eating, he had an audience of about 50 people.

Then he suggested going out for refreshments. His friends refused.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

SCRIPTURE: Acts 1; I Peter 2:9-10.
DEVOTIONAL READING: John 14:12-20.

Praying into Tomorrow

Lesson for January 1, 1950

FOR THE BENEFIT of those who may not be familiar with this column, and perhaps of some who are, a little explanation may be helpful. This column is not expected to take the place of Bible study, nor to be a substitute for the quarterlies and other helps which are furnished by the various denominations. All this column can do is to offer some thoughts which the lesson Scripture has suggested to the writer.

Dr. Foreman

Reading this column will not make a Bible student out of you; only the direct study of the Scriptures can do that. Forty denominations cooperate in this feature. If it helps the reader, we shall all be glad.

Limitations of space keep this from pretending to be anything like a complete analysis of the lesson. For those are not at all familiar with the Bible, it is hoped that this column may arouse interest so that the reader will go and see for himself what the Bible says.

What are Sunday school lessons for? In the words of the 77-year-old International Sunday School Lesson committee, the "ultimate end sought is the acceptance of the Bible as the very Word of God." Practically, this means Bible study which "will help growing persons (you have not stopped growing, we hope?) increasingly to know its content and to understand its message in the light of their own experiences and relationships."

The writer of these lines shares in this purpose and this hope, and wishes you a Happy New Year!

The Early Church Faced Its World

FEW PERSONS in their right minds would want to go back down into their babyhood, yet the first years, indeed the first months, of any one's life are immensely important.

So it is with the Christain church. Few sensible people would want to return to the days of the church's infancy in the first few months and years after Christ's resurrection. And yet that was a vital era. For the Sundays between now and Easter we shall be looking at the early Christain church.

Very early, that is; so early that the name "Christian" was quite new, and even the word "church" was not often used. We shall find that as those untried Christians faced their world, they met with many problems similar to those with which the church of today has to grapple.

How they did it, how they succeeded and how they sometimes failed, is not a mere story of the long-ago, but is valuable as we think about our own times.

Praying Into Tomorrow

THE TEN DAYS between Jesus' ascension and the great event of Pentecost were among the most fateful in all Christian history. The church, if we can call by that name the little group of a few dozen friends of Jesus who lingered together in Jerusalem, did not profess to read the future. But during those ten days of suspense they did three things; they waited, they prepared, they prayed.

They waited because Jesus had told them to wait . . . wait for power, he said. What the power might be like they did not yet know. No doubt some of them had business of one sort or another back in Galilee; but Jesus said, Wait—and so they waited.

They also prepared, by setting apart a witness to take the place of Judas. And above all, they prayed. Tomorrow for them was darkly uncertain, Jesus had dropped hints about persecution; they were not naturally supermen.

Yet in the midst of vague fears, and facing a tomorrow which was one large question-mark, those early Christians—much less well-informed and "worldly-wise" than we—did the wisest thing they could have done: they spent their time in prayer. A praying church is on the way to power.

So as we begin a new year, the best thing Christians can do is not to make all the noise they can, but quietly to wait in God's presence.

JUST RESTING

Bang!

Apparently no words were wasted in the old west. Either orally or in writing. A gravestone carried the following inscription: "He called Tom Brown a liar."

Fast Time

A man came into the bank to cash a check then frowned as he looked up at the clock. He glanced down at his wrist watch then back up at the clock and said, "That clock's fast, isn't it?"

"Certainly," replied the teller, "it would fall down if it weren't.

U.S. Stands Low On List of Nations Getting New Year

From the precise instruments of the naval observatory in Washington, and through the great Arlington radio towers, America and much of the world will learn the exact instant when the old year has passed and 1950 has taken its place. And it is from another haunt of science in the capital, The National Geographic Society, that one learns when and where the new year begins.

The United States, accustomed to ranking itself pretty highly in world esteem, has to content itself with being about sixth-rate in the eyes of Father Time, the society points out. For time serves up the new year to Australia, Asia, Africa, Europe and most of South America before he gets around to the first of our citizens in Maine.

Then, for three more hours, the people of California must munch the crusts and pick the bones of the old year before they receive a fresh helping of time; and the residents of Alaska must wait two more hours beyond that.

When the New Year actually is born it will be 7 a. m. December 31 in our eastern cities; 6 a. m. in the central time zone; 5 a. m. in the mountain zone, and 4 a. m. in the Pacific coast states.

While the New Year celebrations in all countries are basically similar, there are many interesting variations and special features. For example, in Great Britain the king's honor list provides a large topic of conversation on New Year's day. The wassail bowl is an important part of the New Year observance in England, and "open house" is generally kept in town as well as country.

New Year's customs always have had a joyful theme. Few tears ever mark the death of the old year, but there is always gladness at the advent of the new era which mankind always hopes will prove to be better than the old one.

A Happy New Year? Then Pay All Debts

Want to assure yourself a happy and prosperous New Year?

Well, first of all make sure that all debts are paid before midnight on New Year's Eve. This ancient Chinese custom is designed to start the New Year off with a clean slate and, although its origin is lost in antiquity, solvency is still a good foundation for prosperity and friendly business relations.

If you are unmarried and would like to remove the 'un' from your status, be sure to put on the left stocking before putting on the right one when you dress New Year's morning —and try to be as left-handed as possible during the day, thereby increasing the potency of the charm which is supposed to aid love's progress. Marriageable maidens who look out the window on New Year's morning, can anticipate being married before the year is out if they see a man before they see a woman.

Be sure to wish everyone a "Happy New Year," but keep your fingers crossed for luck while giving or receiving the greetings; and don't forget to say "rabbits" as soon as you wake up in the morning.

An old English custom, presumably founded on the superstition that whatever you do on New Year's Day is indicative of your fortune during the ensuing year, advises opening a bank account on January 1.

Since your New Year will be, to a certain extent, what you make it, resolve to make it a happy and prosperous one.

Idolatrous Rites Caused Ancient New Year Ban

Although it is not generally recalled, Christians at one time were prohibited from participating in the social customs prevailing at the season of the New Year.

The reason for this was that while the Christian emperors kept up the custom of observing the New Year, the people continued so many idolatrous rites that the church applied a ban upon participation in the rites.

Finally, after December 25 had been fixed as the date of Christ's nativity, the church made January 1 a religious festival. This has been observed in the Roman church since 487 and in the Anglican church since 1549.

Romans Began Custom Of Gifts at New Year

Some authorities claim that the invading Roman legions introduced the custom of gift-giving at New Year's time into England by 'commandeering,' a la Caesar, gifts and sums of money from the populace.

Medieval royalty, who were not as wealthy as they were reported to be, revived the custom as a means of replenishing the royal wardrobes, treasuries and even larders. Queen Elizabeth relied on the custom for new petticoats, manties, silk stockings, bracelets, necklaces, precious jewels, etc. Peers, bishops, clerics, ladies-in-waiting, physicians, cooks, everybody contributed.

Oliver Cromwell's Puritan government outlawed the custom, but it was re-revived when the Stuarts were restored to the throne. Individual circumstances governed the gift-giving among ordinary citizens and, since common pins were expensive in those days, middle class gentlemen usually gave their wives and daughters pins or 'pin money.'

Idiomatically, 'pin money' has survived the days of the expensive pin, while the custom of gift-giving at New Year's time has deteriorated into obsolescence in England and the United States.

LESS KITCHEN TIME

MORE TIME FOR YOUR GUESTS

What could be better than cranberry punch, decorated snowbells and stars to please your guests and fit the holiday mood? Food for informal entertaining can be simple to prepare, yet extra-special too.

It's the season when guests drop in often, when we renew old friendships, extend gracious hospitality and enjoy our families more.

A supply of easy-entertaining ideas stands you in good stead at this time of year, says Margaret Kagarice, extension nutritionist, Iowa State College. For you don't want to be in the kitchen "slaving" when you could be enjoying the time with your friends

Your stock of fruit cake and traditional goodies may be running low about this time. But it's amazing what you can "whip up" in short order, with the usual larder staples plus the foods most abundant on the market right now.

A "Coffee" Is Easy

Remember, says Miss Kagarice, informal entertaining should not be a lot of fuss. A cup of coffee is always welcome, and for a "coffee" your everyday pottery ware and fairly substantial foods are appropriate. Serve a coffee as you wish, around the dining room table or from a tray or small table in the living room.

Of course, the "coffee" might consist of hot chocolate, hot spiced cider or grape juice, spiced tomato juice or even fruit punch. It might be a half-and-half combination of coffee and hot milk.

Bohemian tea is quick to make. Tie 1 teaspoon each of ground cinnamon and ground cloves loosely in a muslin bag and add with 2 cups of sugar to 6 quarts of boiling water. Boil together for 5 minutes and then add ¼ cup orange pekoe tea, tied in a muslin bag. Cover and let stand 5 minutes before removing spices and tea. Add the juice of 7 oranges and 3 lemons.

Here is a recipe Miss Kagarice suggests for a cranberry punch Make a sirup of 2 cups of sugar and 2 cups of water. Cool, and then add 3 cups strained orange juice, 1½ cups strained lemon juice and water to make 1 gallon. Add 5 cups of cranberry juice.

Food To Serve

Among the foods most plentiful for quick snacks are dried fruits, and they're easy to serve. Stuff them with nuts or fondant and roll in chopped coconut or confectioners' sugar. They may be plumped up a bit by letting them stand for a time in hot water. Another way to use the dried fruits is to grind them with nuts, moisten with honey, chill and cut into bars.

Cheese snacks furnish a big change from sweets. Make some "cheesette cakes" of cubes of fresh bread. Dip them in a mixture of 2 tablespoons melted butter and 1 beaten egg Roll in finely grated American cheese and bake on a cooky sheet at 350 degrees F., until the cheese melts and the cubes are brown.

Or toast slices of bread on one side. Spread on the other side with butter and a mixture of pimento cheese and egg, and broil until puffed and brown. Serve these with hot spiced tomato juice.

Quick "toastaroons" can be made of stale bread fingers by rolling first in condensed milk, then in coconut, and broiling till brown. Cake can be baked in thin layers, cut into shapes with a cooky cutter and decorated. When there are leftovers rusks, cake or graham crackers, use them to make "melba peach puff." Add raspberry jam and a peach half to the cake or cracker base, cover with meringue and bake.

BURNING OF GREENS IS NEW YEAR'S TRADITION

Include a green-burning ceremony in the holiday festivities, and New Year's won't be just an anticlimax.

The joys of looking toward the new year can take the place of the "let down" feeling that sometimes comes with taking down decorations and knowing that the holidays are over.

Mrs. Gertrude Sanford, recreation specialist, Iowa State College, says many families make New Year's the day to symbolically burn mistakes of the past along with the Christmas greens, meanwhile making new resolutions for the year ahead.

Make it fun to take down decorations and pack them away and burn the greens in the fireplace or a bonfire and you'll get the straightening up done in short order, Mrs. Sanford comments It's a good way to prevent keeping holiday decorations up too long.

The ceremony gives an ideal setting for a family pow-wow, Mrs. Sanford says. It's a time for evaluating the past year, and talking over ways of helping each other more in the days ahead. Family members will come closer together in this way, using the past as the basis for new resolutions and looking happily and hopefully together, to the future.

We can enjoy Christmas carols long after Christmas, Mrs. Sanford adds.

PULLET

A pullet belonging to Mrs. William Starry of Brooklyn pulled all the stops in an egg-producing spree recently, and manufactured a quadruplicate egg, with three distinct shells, one within the other. The middle shell contained a double-yolk, just to make the job complete.

Uncle Sam Says

Thousands of farmers and ranchers all over America are making certain today that their future will be bright and promising by continuing to invest all they can in U. S. Savings Bonds. They realize that this is the safest, surest way to build that financial reserve so necessary to the successful management of a ranch or farm—to provide new buildings, to finance repairs and improvements, to purchase additional livestock and equipment, and to insure a future income on which to retire. Every $75 planted in U. S. Savings Bonds today will grow, in just ten years, into $100. U.S. Treasury Department

ANTIFREEZE CAN HARM YOUR TRACTOR'S MOTOR

Decrease in permanent type antifreeze in tractor radiators may be a danger sign that needs investigating, says Dale Woolsoncroft, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College.

If there are no visible outside leaks, the antifreeze may be getting into the motor, Woolsoncroft warns. He points out that antifreeze may leak where water doesn't. When this antifreeze gets past the head gasket, it may cause costly motor damage.

Antifreeze leaking into the crankcase sometimes leaves a gummy deposit and may cause oil line to plug.

An advance danger signal may be oil that appears creamy on the oil stick; however, water in crankcase oil will cause the same frothy appearance, Woolsoncroft says.

To prevent leaks in tractor cooling systems that contain permanent type antifreezes, he says to keep the head bolts tightened and make sure hose and radiator connections are kept tight.

New Year Resolutions

Cousin Ed got his 1950 calendar from the coal company yesterday. As he hung it up in the kitchen, he said something that struck me as pretty sound . . .

. . . "Too many people find it easy to think up New Year Resolutions for the other fellow, but not for themselves."

Yes, it would be a better world if we'd ALL make one big Resolution for 1950, something like this—

"Resolved: that I will try to practice tolerance toward the other fellow . . . and respect his right to HIS ideas and way of life, just as I expect him to respect MINE."

Sure, I think Ed's political ideas are crazy. But maybe he thinks mine are, too. That's Democracy. My Uncle Joe likes coffee, while I enjoy a temperate glass of beer. But each is entitled to his choice.

If we'd all make a Resolution to practice tolerance and respect for the other person's ideas, we'd make 1950 a better, happier year for everyone.

Humane Actions Toward Animals Pay Dividends

CHICAGO.—Year by year humane acts to animals are paying off. Samaritans who help animals in distress, where these be under 18 years old, win national honors for their efforts.

The American Veterinary Medical association, which bestows the awards, believes that a "cornerstone" of its practice is the "relief of the suffering of domestic animals and livestock."

The association presents its awards to youngsters under 18, either boy or girl, for an exceptional act of kindness to animals during the year.

Nominations are received from throughout the United States and Canada. Winners are chosen by a three-member committee of veterinarians. Presentations are made at the association's annual conventions. Winners get a certificate describing their act of kindness and a $100 U.S. savings bond.

Not All for Heroism

The idea was originated by Dr. W. A. Young, 51, director of Chicago's celebrated Anti-Cruelty Society. He headed the award committee until he was succeeded by Dr. S. T. Michael of San Francisco.

Not every award is won for a single act of heroism. The committee also takes into consideration a candidate's record of consistent gentleness and mercy towards animals.

Activities of the youthful entrants include, in addition to the rescue of animals from danger, the staging of benefits for the care of lost dogs and volunteer work in animal hospitals.

Three of the association's six awards have been for heroism; the others for humane deeds for animal friends.

One of the winners was Frank Kiemele, Chicago, who edits "Pet News," a weekly newspaper devoted exclusively to animal stories. The standard-size, 10-page publication is circulated in 21 foreign countries.

Twelve-year-old John Newton of Columbus, Ohio, won the 1948 award for establishing National Cat Week. He gave up his vacation in summer camp to take over the job of winning nationwide recognition of the cat.

Only One Girl

Suzanne Weller, 14, Pittsburgh, Pa., is the only girl honored. Pretty blonde Suzanne received the 1947 award for her singlehanded capture of a rabid fox terrier which had bitten more than 30 persons, including herself.

Winner of last year's award was Richard Swank, 15, of Mentor, Ohio. He rescued an abandoned and ill puppy. With the aid of a local veterinarian, the boy nursed it back to health. Later he worked to earn his own money to pay for an operation needed to save the animal's life.

A boy's love for his blind dog, a companion since childhood, won the association's 1949 award. Richard Rose, 17, of Detroit, was recognized for his thoughtfulness in building a special headgear fitted with bumpers so the dog could walk without injuring itself. Veterinarians believe the device will be useful for hundreds of other blind dogs.

Reckless Use of Rat Bait Seen Endangering Humans

Reckless use of one of the deadliest poisons known is endangering human lives, L. L. Ramsey and P. A. Clifford, chemists of the federal food and drug administration, Washington, D. C., warn in a report to the American Chemical society.

Paper cups containing solutions of 1080, a relatively new rat poison, have been found on bags of food such as sugar and flour by FDA inspectors, the chemists report, and overturned cups of the solution have been discovered near bags of food.

"Without doubt," they declare, "the hazard of accidental contamination of foods with lethal amounts of poison is indeed very real. Although the lethal dose for man is not definitely known, it is incredibly small. Furthermore, no antidote has yet been found."

The toxicity of 1080, was discovered at the beginning of the war by three Polish scientists, who smuggled reports of their research to England through the underground, it is recalled. The chemical was previously used by South African tribesmen, who extracted it in crude form from a plant called ratsbane and used it to poison their enemies' water supplies as well as to fight rats.

During the war, when supplies of most of the common rodenticides had been cut off, 1080 played an important part in rat control in the United States, the chemists state.

Professional Inventors Are Difficult to Find

You don't have to be an inventor to invent.

In fact, a great number of the inventions that paved the road of progress were the ideas of men unrelated to the field of their creation, according to National Patent council.

Dr. Edmund Cartwright, a minister in Manchester, England, had never invented anything. His only real creative work was that of writing poetry and articles for magazines. One evening as he was having dinner with a group of textile men he heard them discussing the spinning "jenny" that produced thread too fast for weaving to keep up with it. He felt that weaving could be mechanized, too. His dinner companions laughed. In their laughter Cartwright felt a challenge and went to work on his idea. He finally invented the power-loom that was to make jobs and accelerate progress.

A Philadelphia portrait painter of note, Robert Fulton, was the first man to put a steamboat on the Hudson. He was persuaded to turn to engineering by friends who admired his abilities in painting.

Another famous artist and president of the National Academy of Design in New York, Samuel Morse, was convinced that intelligence could be transmitted by electric impulses over a wire.

He worked on his idea for long hours in a garret, using his painting only to support his experiments.

Meaning of "Light Year"

A light year and an ordinary year differ in this respect: The year is a unit of time and the light year one of distance. The velocity of light is about 186,000 miles per second, so in a year it will travel 5,880,000,000,000 miles. This distance is one light year.

Our Windows Can Be Attractive

Are you interested in the treatment of windows in your home? If so, you will be interested in the 3rd extension lesson to be given during the month of January by Elsie Mae VanWert, county extension economoist, and the township leaders in the women's groups throughout the county. The lesson is "Our Windows Can Be Attractive."

The lesson will include discussion of window treatment for various windows in the home, fabrics to be used, and color and design in fabrics. An exhibit of new fabrics will be available for the training schools and follow-up meetings.

COON HUNT

Art Mills and George Hurless of Sioux Rapids like to hunt coons but never hunt together, as their dogs are inexperienced. On a recent dark night, Mills lost his dogs on a hunt but found the pack belonging to Hurless. Meanwhile, Hurless lost his dogs but found the pack belonging to Mills. Each pack had treed a coon.

BEN JOHNS IS INDICTED AT MASON CITY

Charged With Drunk Driving, Third Offense

Ben Johns, Hancock County farmer was under indictment Wednesday for a 3rd offense of driving while intoxicated. The indictment was returned in Judge William P. Butler's district court by the grand jury which then was excused for the year.

The grand jury also indicted Everett Weaver, 1212 President N. W., for indecent exposure. Weaver was arrested September 17th by Mason City police.

John was arrested September 6th, by a deputy sheriff on highway 106 just inside Clear Lake city limits. His conviction on the indictment would carry a mandatory penitentiary sentence of 3 years, according to County Attorney James R. Brown.

DELEGATES TO ATTEND RYP OFFICERS TRAINING SCHOOL

A 10 member delegation will represent Hancock County Rural Young People at the District Training School for RYP officers slated for Hampton on Jan. 5th, county extension director, Paul Henderson said today.

Newly-elected officers who will learn more about their jobs at the training school are Glen Sloan, Corwith-Pres. Arvin Larson, Wesley-Vice Pres.; Mildred Goll, Garner-Secretary; John Loebig, Wesley-Treasurer; Betty Pannhoff, Britt-Reporter. Members of the program planning committee also will take part in the meetings. Special scssions on advising and counseling with RYP clubs will be held during the day for club counselors. Paul Shurts, Paul Henderson and Elsie Mae Van Wert will attend these discussions as well as the general program.

During the evening recreation training session, talent from counties represented at the school will perform to add to the party festivities. Representing the county at his event on the program will be a vocal solo by Abagail Hueneman.

The school is scheduled to give the RYP leaders pointers in planning an effective program, help in their jobs as officers, instruction in parlimentary procedure, recreation training and an opportunity to share ideas with members of other RYP clubs represented.

ASK FARMERS AID IN CORN ACREAGE SURVEY

Corn growers in Hancock County were urged today to cooperate fully with PMA community committeemen who are conducting a survey of farms throughout the county. S. A. Barber, Acting Chairman of the County PMA Committee, said that the committeemen are already at work gathering reports of corn acreage during the past three years.

These reports will be used to establish individual farm acreage allotments for 1950. The allotments will be based generally on the farm's corn acreage history for 1947, 1948, and 1949.

"Any farmer who operates a farm which produced corn in any of the years 1947, 1948, or 1949, should contact the county PMA office if he has not already been contacted or is not visited by a committeeman within the next few days." Mrs. Barber said.

"If any farmer will be producing corn in 1950 on a farm where no corn was planted during the period 1947, 1948 or 1949, he should file a written request for corn acreage allotment with the county PMA office. The last date for filing such a request is January 15, 1950. Corn allotments for the 1950 corn crop will apply to every farm in Hancock County.

The survey is particularly important, according to Mr. Barber, because the new price support law directs that price supports on the 1950 corn crop be set at 90 percent of parity to cooperators.

Whenever corn supplies at the beginning of the marketing year exceed normal by more than 20 percent, corn marketing quotas, as well as acreage allotments, must be proclaimed. Quotas may not be put into effect, however, unless at least two-thirds of the growers voting in a referendum approve their use.

Christmas Carols

A group of singers from the Klemme Methodist Church made their annual trip around town Friday evening to sing Christmas carols to shut-ins. After their trip around town they returned to the church where the young people enjoyed hot chilli which was prepared and served by Mrs. D. P. Anderson and Mrs. E. M. Egeland.

One of the interesting stops made by the singers was at the Tom Blank home where they enjoyed seeing Mr. Blank's now famous Christmas tree which is on display annually and attracts many visitors to the Blank home.

Famous Stallion

Hambletonian, the famous stallion after which the sulky derby is named, was foaled just 100 years ago, five miles from Goshen. He was ugly, he never won a race, but he earned between $200,000 and $300,000 in stud fees for his amazed owner, William Rysdyk, who acquired the colt and his crippled mother from breeder Jonas Seely for $125 — and good ridance, thought Seely.

The Scots have always made a big fuss over New Years, and no wonder. The wassail bowl goes 'round at New Year's time, filled with savory liquid and nostalgic memories.

Traditionally, the wassail bowl itself should be an ornament of graceful design; its contents should be warm and spicy—with sweetened wine, ale, sugar, and nutmeg.

Custom dictates that at the stroke of 12 on New Year's Eve, the head of the household should sip the mixture and then pass it among those present. A favorite custom of the Scots has been to pile into wagons or sleighs carrying kettles full of the wassail, cheese and buns. The party stops at various houses in the community and the refreshments go 'round at each stop without paying much attention to the approaching dawn.

"Open House" on New Year's Day was quite the vogue in the United States around the turn of the 20th century. Newspapers carried columns of 'at home' notices announcing the hours during which visitors would be received. And having duly received, hosts and hostesses closed their receptions and joined the procession of callers at other 'open houses.'

Human nature being what it is, receptions were often 'crashed' by strangers prompted by the accessibility of free punch, and a succession of several 'open houses' sometimes resulted in the most welcome guests arriving in excessively bolsterous or mellow moods and contributed to the abandonment of the publicly announced 'open house.' But intimates still toast each other around a private wassail bowl and "drink a cup of kindness yet for Auld Lang Syne".

New Year's Day, aside from its festive connection, may not seem very momentous to the average citizen, but in the past it figured prominently in the making of history.

It saw the unfurling of the first American flag by George Washington, and the emancipation of Negro slaves.

Another Kind of Courage Has It All Over Standard Heroics

By BILLY ROSE

Recently, a doctor in Maine sent me a story about a courageous kid and, unless I'm getting soft in the heart, it's the most touching tale of heroism I've come across in a long time . . . .

Some time ago, the medico got a hurry-up telephone call to come out to a small summer camp 20 miles west of Bangor. There, half an hour later, he examined a six-year-old girl and found that one of her legs was broken and that she had lost a lot of blood from a gash in her thigh.

The story, as he got it from the mother, was that the girl and her brother, aged 7, had gotten into the loft of an abandoned barn and, when a rotted plank gave way, she had fallen, broken her leg and ripped her thigh on a piece of rusty farm machinery.

Billy Rose

As the doctor was cauterizing the cut and setting the leg, the boy—his name was Pete—kept watching from the doorway with worried interest.

"Is Molly going to be all right?" he asked when the splints were in place.

"She's lost a lot of blood," said the doctor, "but if she gets past the crisis tonight, everything will be okay."

"What's a crisis?"

"It's—well, I guess it's the time when a person is sickest."

"When people lose a lot of blood, do they die?"

"Sometimes. You see, the heart needs a certain amount to keep going. In a way, it's like the motor of a car—it stops running if it doesn't get gasoline."

"I see," said Pete.

LATER THAT NIGHT, the little girl's pulse began to slow up.

"I'm afraid your daughter needs an immediate transfusion," the doctor told the father, "but there's a complication. She has an unusual type of blood, and I doubt whether the blood bank in Bangor has it in stock."

"Her brother has the same type," said the father. "I know, because the pediatrician who examined the kids last year told me so . . . ."

Pete looked startled a minute later when his dad asked him if he would give up a cup of blood to help his sister get well.

"How can I?" the boy asked.

"The doctor does it with a little rubber tube."

"Can I think about it?"

"Sure," said the father, "but don't take too long."

Pete went to his room, and his parents heard him close the door. Five minutes later, he was back, looking very earnest. "All right," he said.

WHEN IT WAS over, the doctor bandaged the boy's arm and told him to lie down and take it easy. But instead, the kid went out on the porch and, when his father found him there at midnight, his face was white and his fingers were clenched.

"What's the matter, Pete?"

"Oh, nothing," said the boy.

"Look here," said his father. "There's something going on in that head of yours. What is it?"

"I was wondering how long it will take."

"How long will what take?"

"How long it will take me to die."

"To do what?"

"To die," repeated the boy. "It's like the doctor said—when there isn't enough blood, the motor stops running."

"I see," said the father. "When you gave your sister a cup of blood, you figured you were going to die yourself."

"Sure," said Pete. "That's why I wanted to think it over."

QUIET THINGS

THESE I have loved with passion, loved them long.
The house that stands when the building hammers cease,
After wild syncopation, a sane song,
A tree that straightens after the wind's release,
The cool green stillness of an April wood,
A silver pool unruffled by the breeze,
The clean expanse of a prairie's solitude,
And calm, unhurried hours—I love these.

I have been tangled in the nets too long,
I shall escape and find my way again
Back to the quiet place where I belong,
Far from the tinseled provinces of men.
These will be waiting after my release:
The sheltered ways, the quiet paths of peace.

3 Minute Fiction

JOHN WAS ONLY 29 and already life was bitter. Today, with the rain lashing in his face, wetting the newspapers before he could pass them to customers from beneath the oil skin covering, chilled to the bone, envying those who filed into the subway entrance with their sleek, contented, well fed looks, he hated life. He hated people; hated the world.

"Paypare! Paypare! Wuxtra! Wealthy society woman slays husband and runs off with suitor! Wuxtra!"

Life had been unkind to him. Life hadn't given him the breaks. That's it. It was life's fault. Either you were born into the easy way, or you didn't have a chance. This stuff about fighting your way to the top, overcoming obstacles, being a whooping, self-made success—Nuts! You can't fight when life is against you, when the crowd is way out ahead and throwing dust into your face.

"Rich society woman knocks off her spouse! Buy a paypare, sir."

A thousand smackers! Ha! Fat chance! Not when the breaks were against you. A man was a fool to try and buck the crowds when they were against him. Like that guy in the green hat. Look at him, trying to fight his way up those stairs. Didn't the dumbhead know that it was just after 5 o'clock and hundreds of people would be coming down the stairs on their way home?

"Hey, gimme a News." There was a man at John's elbow, looking impatient and irritated. John jerked himself back to earth.

"Sure. Evening News. Here you are, mister. Thanks. Paypare! Wuxtra! Wux—"

John stopped abruptly. A shot had sounded above the pounding of rain and the rumble of traffic. It came from the direction of the stairs. There was a stir, a wild scrambling, shrieks, curses. The sea of humanity came tumbling down, pausing, shrinking away, horrified, staring at something on the ground. John glimpsed the figure lying there, grotesquely sprawled across the steps. He heard the name of Silas Berry mentioned. Judge Silas Berry.

"Hi, Johnny! Look, you must have seen who did it, standing here like that. You had a view."

"Hey, Newsy, how about a paper?"

John turned. It was the man in the green hat. John felt his heart pound, then stand still.

"Nice stand you got here, sonny. Must make a lot of dough. Must see a lot that happens, facing upstream like that. Didn't happen to see what occurred just now on the elevator steps did you?"

JOHN GULPED. "I heard a shot. What happened? Was somebody Killed? I didn't see a thing. I was selling a paper. Who do yuh suppose done it?"

The cold light dimmed in the eyes of the man with the green hat. He smiled. A siren sounded. The crowd scattered. John saw Officer Mike Clancey elbowing his way towards him.

"Hi, Johnny! Look, you must have seen who did it, standing here like that. You had a view. You were the only one who did, facing upstream like that. See who done it, Johnny?"

Johnny glanced at the man in the green hat. The man's hand was inside his coat. "Sure," he said. "Sure, I saw it all. It was that guy there."

Then he jumped. He heard the muffled explosion of a revolver, saw Clancey leap, heard shouts and swearing and knew that other cops were coming. Then he heard more shots. He felt a stinging pain in his arm. He felt something hot running down inside his sleeve. Things began to reel. He knew he was fainting . . . .

Officer Clancey was bending over him when he came to. "You're all right, kid. Just a scratch. And what a break. That was Moe Consoletti. He had threatened to get Old Silas. They're both dead. And you get the reward, kid. One thousand smackers! Is that a break or is that a break?"

WITH the "Stop the Music" show growing and growing and growing, Bert Parks has become one of the most sought-after men in the country. Everybody, Bert says, wants to know the name of the Mystery Melody. People stop him in the street to ask what it is; neighbors call him at home. Old friends beg for "just a little hint." Between shows he tries to forget there is such a tune; he never talks about it at home, never mentions it to his wife. Since the program was launched he has passed along hundreds of thousands worth of prizes—and then gone happily home to his wife, his twin sons, aged three, and his unlisted telephone.

"Riders in the Sky" filled the air waves and Gene Autrey turned it into a Columbia picture, so nobody was surprised when the same thing happened to the ever-present "Mule Train". Sheila Livingston, who recently completed work in "The Cowboy and the Indians", with Autrey, plays the feminine lead; John Miljan and Robert Livingston have leading roles.

A rumor has been going around that the sponsor of "Curt Massey Time" was auditioning a show to replace it. Whereas their survey ratings top anything else the sponsor has ever had on the air in that daytime spot, and Curt and Martha Tilton are set through April. And Curt is getting chuckles out of a fan letter saying "You sing like I think I sing in the bathtub!"

Last July the censors in the Union of South Africa banned the magnificent "Home of the Brave" on the ground that "it might disturb the peace". For the first time the censorship board of Southern Rhodesia has reversed the censors' decision, but natives and children will be excluded from showings of the picture. United Artists engaged counsel to appeal the South African ban.

The second annual "Toys for Tots" campaign, to provide Christmas toys for underprivileged children, sponsored jointly by Warner Bros. and the United States marine corps reserve, was officially launched by Virginia Mayo and Col. J. O. Brauer.

Joan Crawford has four leading men in "The Victim". For some reason or other her kissing scenes with each one were filmed between Monday morning and Friday afternoon, on location at Palm Springs And they do say that it was so hot at the famous resort that cold air blowers had to be turned on every take to lower the temperature enough to make it bearable

'MULE TRAIN'

THERE IS NO TELLING WHAT the American public will go for in the way of popular songs. One of the most sensational hits in years is something called "Mule Train." You hear it everywhere. And it is a number that is little more than a mule driver's call to his mule team as it gallops along a mountain road. Most of the people singing it with gusto have never seen a mule and up to now had thought a mule train was the stubborn crew on a backward railroad.

But mule teams are now crashing out of radio sets, roaring across video cabinets and clippety clopping all over the living rooms of the land.

The rhythm and mood are close to "Git Along Little Doggie" which swept the nation a decade ago, and the words are no harder on the intellect than "Yes, We Have No Bananas." The latter's success was easier to comprehend. Everybody had seen a banana.

"Mule Train" pictures the emotions of a mule team driver as he urges the mules to give a better performance on any track and in any company. All he does is to crack his whip, yell at the mules and repeat "clippety clop clippety clop" over and over a . You would think he had limited appeal, even to the mules. But the public is taking to the song as if mules were right up its alley and it had been going out for Sunday afternoon rides behind them all its life.

We have heard radio singer after radio singer sing "Mule Train" in a manner indicating lifelong pursuit of the business. We have heard girls render it as if, next to love and romance, nothing touched their hearts like a few mules delivering the borax across the mountains.

The kiddies are doing it with homemade whips, shouting at imaginary 20-mule teams as they romp all over the apartment, busting bric-a-brac to right and left. What is a $400 imported lamp if it is in the way of a mule or two?

We understand Bing Crosby is to blame. The song was written by Johnny Lund, Hy Heath and Slickman . . . But it was "Der Bingle" who saw possibilities and made the country mule team conscious. Crosby never rode a mule train in his life, but his race track experiences may have made him deeply appreciative of mule lif America. It may be Bing's an to the turf.

• • •

"Whoa, you lop-eared loafer! . . . Get along thar, you bob-tailed rascal! . . . Clippety clop . . . Clippety clop . . . Take a hold thar! . . . Whee-ee!" (And stop at Times Square, the heart of the mule country, please.)

MIRROR Of Your MIND

All Love Has Physical Aspect

By Lawrence Gould

Has all love a physical component?

Answer: It must have, since our minds and our bodies are not separate things, but two aspects of a single organism. The fact that one cannot be ill without damaging the other is one evidence of this. But the physical component of love need not be "sexual" in the accepted sense. It may mean no more than your deriving pleasure from another person's presence, or from minor contacts like a clasp of the hand. Babies above all need physical expressions of their mother's love, and their emotional development is stunted if they do not have them.

Have German young people changed since the war?

Answer: Not so much as to have any real conception of democracy, say two American psychologists who interviewed 225 young men and women in the American zone of occupation. The majority of them still believe the man should be the "master" in his home, with the wife mainly a housekeep and that children should be trai by being punished and "shame They show a marked inability compromise, or to adjust the selves to difference of opinion. A they still wish to be governed fr above by leaders they regard "strong men."

Can schools "adjust" childre to life?

Answer: Basically, No Whet a child becomes a happy, "w adjusted" adult depends on parents, not his teachers And person to undo the parents' m takes (as far as this can be do is not an educator but a psyc therapist who has been trained the task. Schools should follow known principles of mental giene, but the best help they give a child's adjustment to world he'll live in when he gr up is to furnish the factual kn ledge and technical skills which will need to make a living.

New Drug Helps Shaking Palsy

By Dr. James W. Barton

UNTIL RECENTLY there has been little or no help that could be given to patients with Parkinson's disease (paralysis agitans, shaking palsy).

In this disease, the patient, usually in his fifties, is afflicted with tremor or trembling, the thumb and forefinger producing the so-called pill-rolling symptom, rigidity and slowness in action of muscles which give his face a waxen, mask-like expression, and a bent forward position of head and body.

Also present is weakness and hesitation in speaking, and the hand shakes when reaching for an object but stops shaking when it is grasped.

A few years ago Dr. Roland M. Klemme, professor of surgery, St Louis university school of medicine, announced that by removing certain nerve cells in the brain, he had been able to cure 64 per cent of 200 cases of Parkinson's disease. Dr. Klemme spent 11 years of research work on this disease.

A couple of years ago a drug was discovered that gave some relief to these patients, but more re ly Dr. F. M. Berger, Univers Rochester, in the "New York Journal of Medicine," re that a new drug, theporin, had found remarkably effective i treatment of Parkinson. The is chemically unrelated to other drug now used in med yet combines both an antihis action (fights allergy diseases as hay fever, asthma and ecz and atropino used in diseas the eye and stomach.

Dr. Berger treated a total patients with Parkinson's di of which 13 were greatly imp the improvement beginning days after the treatment w gun.

Patients who were unable t over in bed before the tre with theporin found that the able to do so one or two days taking this drug. Other p were able to feed and dress selves and carry out finer ments. One patient confined chair for two years, fo treatment was able to ret work as a hotel porter.

Material With Plenty To Spare

By GRANTLAND RICE

A COACH by the name of K. K. Rockne figured he was lucky to have the Four Horsemen running for him in 1924.

Even four star backs were more than most coaches had around that time — or have today. Usually two star backs and two good backs are above the average.

Grantland Rice

When Carl Snavely brought his Tar Heels to New York he had two very able backs and a still better back crippled on the sidelines, the name being Charlie Justice, one of the best backs of many years until cut down by injuries, after being pretty well worn ragged by L. S. U. and Tennessee.

It is quite evident now that no small part of Notre Dame's 1949 success was the runaway gallop of his "nine horsemen." That is what Notre Dame had this season — Williams, Sitko, Spaniel, Swistowicz, Coutre, Zalc'ski, Gay, Barrett and Landry.

The Notre Dame line was just fair. Outside of Leon Hart it was often just ordinary. But it was good enough to handle a good part of its assignments, although often punctured. But it was when rival teams or rival coaches had to contend against those nine or possibly 10 brilliant backs that the tidal wave began to roll.

For example against North Carolina, the backfield composed of Williams, Sitko, Coutre and Zalejski was no better than North Carolina's backfield, led by Dick Bunting. But Snavely, especially with Justice missing, had nothing to offer against the arrival of five additional backs just as good as the starters.

This is no rap at Notre Dame or at Frank Leahy. He just happened to have over twice as many good backs as any other coach. This makes it a matter of material where again Notre Dame excelled by a wide margin.

A Rather Scraggly Season

This season we saw five college games where the score was lopsided. On most occasions it was the battle of the tiger and the rabbit. We also saw nothing but games long drawn out by the foolish substitution rules and penalties.

Because of the nature of football, it is probably impossible for any official to work a game without making at least five bad decisions, sins of omission or commission. At least two of these piled up heavily against North Carolina where Hart forward passed a lateral and where Williams, bowled over in a desperate attempt to block a kick, was not roughed. He was not even jarred. These two decisions cost the Tar Heels at least 14 points.

Something should be done about the dragging out that takes place. You get the impression of men running on and off the field in platoons and companies all afternoon. Another point is that all games are started too late. Even after the middle of October, games should be started at 1 p. m. Though starting at 1:30 p. m. the Notre Dame-North Carolina game needed lights to follow the play.

There are many newspapers, promoting football, who have no chance to take pictures of decisive plays—who must go to press without the scores. The starting time up to October 15 should be 1:30 p. m., and after that 1 p. m. should be the kickoff hour. This is an important change needed. Several million spectators would be glad to get there 30 minutes sooner to see the last quarter clearly and not look at a lot of wraiths and shadows operating in semi-darkness.

Here are some of the details that those handling football should watch for the season of 1950—

1. Changing the unlimited substitution rule and bringing to it some semblance of common sense.

2. Starting the contests earlier to have games finish in daylight, no semi-darkness.

3 Taking at least 15 or 20 minutes from the time used up from the first kickoff to the final play.

4. Giving the officials fewer rules and having these rules enforced. How? I'll pass that to the supermen of football. But the botches are growing every year, beyond human achievement.

Strength Around the Map

At a recent gathering of football writers from all over the country with every section counted in, the general opinion was that the Midwest was strongest, the Southwest next and the Far West third.

I doubt that rating is an accurate one. Notre Dame lifted the Midwest above the others, but, after all, Army took good care of Michigan. California ran away from Wisconsin. Southern California, with five crippled regulars, tied Ohio State.

Winter Fishing

Naturally, there are many schools of thought on the subject, but most anglers seem to agree that fish taste better when caught during the winter months, to say nothing of the unique fascination of winter fishing.

However, if one wants to live the life of an Eskimo—which, for all practical purposes is required during the actual period of fishing through the ice—a fishing license is a "must" and fishing regulations pertaining to limits, species, bait and the use of shelters should be checked.

The cutting of the necessary hole in the ice is, of course, up to the individual as regards its size and the tool to be used. Some prefer an axe or chisel, while others use some kind of boring tool.

It would be well to keep in mind this one requirement: The hole should be wider at the bottom than at the top. There are two real reasons for this. First, rough edges at the botom of the hole may fray your line and, second, the larger opening at the bottom will enable you to pull large fish in quickly. The diameter of this hole should be at least 12 inches.

As is the case in summer fishing, one of the big secrets is to offer as little resistance on the line as possible. So, take along a light line—say not over 12-pound test—and a small bobbler. The use of light-test nylon line also is advisable.

Another thing to remember that you are restricted in many states to the type of fishing equipment which may be used, so be sure and check that angle before venturing on the ice to do your winter fishing.

Costly Ducks

The average citizen would stand aghast at the proposal that he lay $9.73 cents on the line for one mallard, pintail or canvasback—yet that's what it costs the average waterfowl hunter per bird each season.

Two scientists, Franck C. Bellrose, associate game specialist, Illinois history survey, and Clair T. Rollings, refuge manager, Mingo national wildlife refuge, Puxico, Mo., came up with that figure which was based on an exhaustive survey among nimrods.

The following figures are what the scientists found was the average daily expenses incurred by duck hunters:

Transportation, $4.52; lodging, 58 cents; meals, $2.57; shells, 77 cents; license, 40 cents (remember these are average daily figures); gun depreciation, 29 cents; clothes, boots, etc. depreciation, $1.65; decoys, $1.32. Total cost per day, $16.73; ducks per hunter per day, $1.72. COST PER DUCK, $9.72!

Brief for Owls

The landowner who is disposed to take a pot-shot at every owl he sees might be interested in these facts:

Mice at times destroy as much as 50 per cent of corn shocked in fields and as much as 75 per cent of alfalfa, according to the U.S. fish and wildlife service. Though such extravagant losses are infrequent, even normal losses are of such importance as to justify protection and encouragement of our natural mousers—such as hawks, skunks, owls and weasels. The small damage that these creatures cause to poultry is greatly outweighed by their usefulness, according to biologists.

Such usefulness of owls and hawks is recognized in many states.

Good Idea

One of the better suggestions concerning comfort and convenience for outdoorsmen is that someone should put on the market a "sportsman's lunch."

It could be made, the suggestion continues, somewhat similar to the "K" rations used during the war. A can of meat, for instance; a can of dessert and perhaps some popular-flavored crackers might also be included.
